Branded Girl Clings to Tale As Ex-Suitor Is Released

Story Garbled, She Insists It is True

Alters Account 5 Times in More Than 20 Hours of Questioning.

While 21-year-old Margaret Louise Bell, titian-haired puppet of a New York vice ring, clung defiantly to her tangled "torture" story last night, the police questioned and released a former suitor and prepared today to confront her with the men she accuses of seeking gangland vengeance.

Washington detectives left last midnight for New York to return with two men named by the girl as her alleged attacker and his accomplice. Warrants, charging assault with intent to kill, were issued against Joseph Silvers, 36, and Leo Marmone, 34, both of Brooklyn, N. Y.

After 20 hours of relentless grilling, during which she changed her story at least five times—first admitting and then denying a hoax—the young woman again was taken to headquarters late last night to face a man identified as a former "boy friend."

No Connection With Case.

The man—Anthony Thomas Costello, 29, of the 1000 block New Hampshire avenue northwest—made a voluntary statement and was released a few hours later. According to investigators, he was merely questioned about his relations with the girl and she was brought in to listen to his story. The police said he had no connection with the case.

Earlier in the night, Policemen W. T. Taff and J. C. Conway, Third Precinct, who answered an "emergency" call before dawn Sunday and found the girl in her apartment at 1230 New Hampshire avenue northwest, appeared at headquarters to give detailed accounts of what occurred when they arrived on the scene.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown later asserted the woman would be held until the police had checked and rechecked every detail of her story.

"If efforts are made to free her," said he, "we will hold her as a United States witness and demand that she furnish bond."

The men accused by the Bell woman are being held for the Washington authorities and will be brought here to confront their accuser this morning. Officials say both have established "air tight" alibis. Marmone is believed to be the mysterious "Leo," named by the Bell woman as the man who "fingered" her reputed mutilation assault.

Have Agreed to Face Her.

New York officials, who questioned the men, said Silvers admitted knowing the girl, but Marmone denied it. Neither man is under arrest, police declared, and have agreed to come here and face the girl. When the warrants are served in New York by Detective Sergts. Frank Bass and Robert J. Barrett, of Washington, however, the men will be placed in custody.

Fifteen hours of continuous questioning ended at 6 a. m. yesterday when the Bell girl was returned to the Police Women's Bureau and investigators adjourned for a few hours' sleep. At 1 p. m., she again was taken to the office of inspector Bernard W. Thompson, detective chief, and the inquisition was resumed for another five hours.

Capt. Ira Keck, assistant detective chief, emerged from the locked office during the mid-afternoon conference and bitterly announced that they were "making little headway." He said the girl at one point admitted her story was fabricated, but quickly changed her mind and refused to sign a statement.

Sneers at Questioners.

The girl sat beside Inspector Thompson's desk, answering all questions with a sneer. Once or twice she smiled when Detective Sergt. Brass leaned across the desk and glared in her face while pounding her with queries.

Unlike the previous day when she appeared at headquarters, the woman walked calmly down the hallway yesterday and let photographers take her picture.

During the weary hours of grilling she smoked many cigarettes and expressed little emotion as detectives flung their questions.

Although mutilation marks on the girl's body—the numerals "3-12" scratched on her abdomen and the initials "C. L." pricked on her thigh—could have been inflicted with a pin point, police admit, the petite redhead still insists she was "marked for death" by mobsters of Charles ("Lucky") Luciano, New York vice overloard.

The woman, police say, is not at present under arrest. No effort, however, has been made to have her released from the Women's Bureau, where she has remained since Sunday. Thomas E. Lodge, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, has been retained as her attorney.

Shortly before noon, Milton Rickard Reeves, 28-year-old Washington bartender, held for questioning in connection with the case, was released in custody of Denny Hughes, attorney. Inspector Thompson said he was convinced the man knew nothing of the Bell girl's activities.

Before Arraignment on Spy Charges

New 'Spy' Arrests Indicated; Farnsworth Is Stricken in Jail

Justice Agents Investigate Other Probable Leaks of Defense Secrets; Former Navy Officer Denies Charge; $10,000 Bond Set.

Further "spy" arrests may follow the arraignment here yesterday of former Lieut. Comdr. John S. Farnsworth on charges of having sold United States naval secrets to the Japanese.

This was indicated last night when it was learned that Department of Justice agents who cooperated with Naval Intelligence officers in trailing Farnsworth have not been withdrawn from the case, but are investigating other probable leaks of national defense secrets to foreign powers.

That the "spy" trail may lead Justice agents back to the West Coast, where only a few days ago Harry T. Thompson, of Baltimore, a former yeoman of the Navy, was sentenced to 15 years' imprisonment for betraying naval secrets to the Japanese, seemed likely with the reported statement yesterday of Federal District Judge Leon R. Yankwitch that he understood Federal agents were planning espionage cases against several persons.

The jurist who presided over the Thompson trial was reported by the Associated Press to have stated that in his opinion "the Thomas case was a test case for the Government officers."

"He was convicted on a conspiracy charge," the judge was said to have pointed out. "Government agents watched the case closely to determine its bearing upon the information they have against these other persons."

At the District Jail, Farnsworth, shaken by the ordeal of an all-night questioning by Justice agents and his arraignment before a battery of photographers and newsreel men, tossed uneasily last night on his narrow cot in the jail infirmary.

Arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage yesterday morning, the 43-year-old, prematurely gray officer, who was court-martialed out of the Navy nine years ago, trembled as he pleaded not guilty and was held in

Governor Nice and Auto Trade Group Aboard State of Virginia.

Coast Guard Cutter Is Standing By to Aid Disabled Vessels.

By the Associated Press.

Jacksonville, Fla. (Wednesday), July 15.—The Coast Guard station here reported early today incepting a message from the cutter Apache of Baltimore saying the Apache was going to the assistance of two ships in collision off Seven Foot Knoll, Md. The ships were the Golden Harvest and the State of Virginia. The Apache expected to reach them about 1:30 a. m. E. S. T.

No details of the collision were received here.

The Apache, in a brief dispatch to its Norfolk base which was relayed here, said it had reached the stricken vessels and was "standing by" to remove the passengers from the Golden Harvest should the transfer prove necessary. The number of passengers was not given.

Governor Aboard.

Baltimore, July 15 (AP).—Gov. Harry W. Nice of Maryland was among the passengers aboard the State of Virginia, Bay Line steamer, reported to have collided early today in Baltimore Harbor with a freight steamer, Golden Harvest. No details of the crash were available here immediately.

There is no radio communication between the Curtis Bay Coast Guard depot and the cutter Apache, reported standing by at the scene of the collision off Seven Foot Knoll, just outside the city limits of the harbor.

The Governor was a member of a party of approxmately 250 persons on a two-day conventon cruise of the Automobile Trade Association of Maryland.

Many Baltimore City and State officials were in the party. The Golden Harvest is owned by the Oceanic and Oriental Navigation Co., out of San Francisco.

Bastille Fete Rioting in Paris Injures Scores

Political Factions Fail to Heed Blum; Straus Collapses.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Paris, July 14.—Rioting demonstrators celebrating the 147th anniversary of Bastille Day, swept through Paris streets tonight in utter disregard of Premier Leon Blum's warning against excesses leading to bloodshed.

Scores were injured as Nationalists battled police and Leftists in the Champs Elysees shortly after Blum made a ringing appeal for Popular Front unity before thousands of Frenchmen staging turbulent holiday celebrations in the Place de la Nations.

Mobile guards, uniformed police and Republican guards were forced to fight to maintain order.

Several taxi-loads of Popular Front followers, returning from the Place de la Nations, were attacked in the Champs Elysees. The Reds were manhandled and their cabs were stoned. Several were arrested.

Many were injured in skirmishes in the vicinity of Fouquet's famous cafe. Restaurant and cafe owners cleared their terraces, fearing chairs, tables, glasses and bottles would be used as weapons.

Rioting increased and the list of injured mounted. Mobile guards on horses were called out to reinforce foot forces armed with rifles. The mounted squads patrolled streets continually scattering rioters.

Tomb Flame Rekindled.

Surrounded by thousands of mobile guards, wounded war veterans rekindled the flame at the Tomb of France's Unknown Soldier. Guards isolated the Arc de Triomphe and dispersed a crowd of several thousand waiting to file past the tomb.

Agitation was renewed in the Champs Elysees when thousands of Rightists and Leftists, singing the Marseillaise and the Internationale, clashed.

The Rightists were especially active. They shouted:

"Hang Blum." "France for the French."

Squadrons of police and mounted guards finally broke up the Rightist celebration. One Communist was beaten. His red flag was destroyed.

Thirty were injured in rioting at Royan.

The feature of the day, the 147th anniversary of the storming of the Bastille, was the appearance of the new French Communist flag. The banner is red with a gold hammer and sickle in the center and the French tricolor in the upper left-hand corner.

Blum reviewed an impressive parade of motorized troops, tanks and artillery while overhead 50 of the latest type bombing airplanes and several hundred combat planes formed perfect formations in brilliant, sunshiny skies.

Blum Speaks.

Blum spoke amidst a mass display of Red flags and the tricolor. The Place de la Nation was jammed with his Popular Front followers, while tens of thousands packed the side streets, unable to reach the square.

Bank Reserve Raised; U. S. Fears Boom

Inflation Sweep Likely With Excess Funds at $3,000,000,000.

By Sidney Olson.

Striking directly at the danger of inflation, the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System last night jumped up the reserve requirements for member banks by 50 per cent.

The increase, effective August 15 after the close of business, is aimed at the possibility of a credit boom based on the enormous excess reserves of the country's banks, now amounting to more than $3,000,000,000.

One political implication was considered a possibility by observers after the announcement. This was that the Treasury, whose daily cash balance has been close to $2,400,000,000, would not make its usual quarterly borrowings in September, thus not adding to the national debt.

If the Administration can thus show during a crucial campaign month that the public debt will not continue to zoom upward, the New Dealers will have a very definite talking point in making promises of economy.

The board, according to Marriner S. Eccles, governor, who announced the increase at a press conference yesterday, expects the excess reserves to shoot up to nearly three and a half billions by the time this action takes effect.

This increase in the unprecedented excess reserves, now at the $3,000,000,000 mark because of the heavy influx of foreign gold, will come about through the expected reduction in Treasury balances and a decrease in money in circulation, Eccles said.

At High Level.

The amount of money now in circulation is at an exceptionally high level due to disbursements in connection with the cashing of veterans' service bonds.

The increase of the reserve requirements will sterilize a large part of the excess reserves as a factor of danger, and will bring them down to about $1,900,000,000, well within the controlling range of the Federal Reserve Open Market Committee, which holds $2,430,000,000 worth of Government securities.

Reserve requirements for on demand deposits at banks in central reserve cities were increased from 13 per cent to 19½ per cent; at the banks in reserve cities, from 10 per per cent to 15 per cent; at country banks, from 7 per cent to 10½ per cent, and on time deposits at all banks, from 3 per cent to 4½ per cent. This amounts to a general 50 per cent increase.

The Reserve Board disclaimed all responsibility for the amount of excess reserves at present, stating that the influx of foreign gold was largely responsible, and not the system's easy money policy, instituted to encourage recovery.

The easy money policy will be maintained, said Eccles.

The eliminated excess reserves were held generally to be superflous for all present or prospective needs of commerc , industry and agriculture, and likewise were generally looked upon as a primary source of d nger in a possible credit boom.

The 1929 prosperity wave was based on a credit expansion ranging from 10 to 1 to 21 to 1 over excess reserves of about $1,700,000,000, observers recalled last night. If a credit boom of those proportions should get under way, inflation would send values skyrocketing uncontrolably, the board feared, for the excess reserves basis for such an expansion is, of course, much greater now, standing at $3,000,000,000 and docketed for a swift rise shortly.

Thus there would be a credit field of from $30,000,000,000 on up if such expansion should take place suddenly.

Despite the increase in requirements, the remaining volume is still greater than at any time in the Reserve System's history prior to the present inflow of gold.

At present reserve deposits stand at $5,900,000,000, of which more than $2,900,000,000 are in excess.

The board's statement said the increase should give investors "added confidence" in the future.

Puzzled Over Problems.

The board has puzzled over the excess reserves problem for some time, as the reserves continued to mount swiftly with almost daily shipments of gold from France and other nations to this country.

Last summer, and repeatedly last autumn, economists pointed to the dangers inherent in the increasing pile of gold. The open market com-

1,000 More Die of Heat, Bringing Toll to 2,996; Rain Heads Eastward

$10,000,000 Swindle in Stocks Is Laid to 21 in 5 Firms by U. S.

3 With Chicago Headquarters Among Operators Indicted for Activity Over Eight States; SEC, Federal Agents Join in Hunt.

By Felix Bruner.

Indictment of 21 individuals and 5 corporations in what was described as one of the largest stock-swindling operations ever uncovered was announced yesterday by the Securities Exchange Commission and the Department of Justice.

The alleged swindlers operated, according to the indictments, in eight States, and officials estimated their allegedly illegitimate profits during the last three years have amounted to more than $10,000,000.

The indictments were returned by a special grand jury in Gainesville, Ga., and charged violation of the securities act, violation of the postal laws and conspiracy. Each of the individuals was named on 14 counts.

The charges involve alleged operation of bucket shops and manipulation of the stock of the Stutz Motor Co. and the National Service Companies. Victims of the alleged swindles were reported to number into the thousands.

The following companies were indicted, according to an announcement by John J. Burns, counsel for the Securities Exchange Commission:

Several Cities Report Most Deaths Since '18 'Flu' Epidemic.

Damage to Crops Is Put at Billion

Welcome Showers Send Mercury Down After Record Day.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 14.—Cooling rains edged farther into the drought land from the northwest tonight and pushed slowly eastward toward the heat oppressed regions where today's loss of more than 1,000 lives placed the 12-day torrid spell's toll near 3,000.

Floods of cool air and rain struck south-central Minnesota and the Twin Cities area, tempering an 11-day heat wave which cost the State 560 lives. The Nation-wide toll was 2,996.

A terrific wind storm and rain lashed Norwood, Minn., damaging property. Minneapolis was drenched. Temperatures at St. Paul fell from 107 to 87 and at St. Cloud, Minn., from 104 to 78.

24-Mile-an-Hour Wind.

The St. Paul airport observer said a 24-mile-an-hour wind was blowing from the northwest, pushing the cooling mass east and south.

Shortly afterward, moderating effects were felt in Wisconsin and Michigan and, to some extent, in Chicago.

Michigan, where the State toll was placed at 537, reported the heat generally broken except for continued high temperatures in the west. Milwaukee's readings dropped from 98 to 85 and cooling thundershowers were predicted for Wisconsin tomorrow.

Mercury Passes 106.

The Hennepin County coroner (Minneapolis) said the deaths there were exceeded for a like period only by those during the influenza onset. At the rate of "three a minute" during the hottest part of a day which saw a 106.5 degree maximum in the Twin Cities, heat cases were brought to the general hospital.

In Chicago, where 237 deaths were totaled for the heat wave, morgue attendants likewise described conditions as surpassed only during the war-time epidemic

Sweeping Rainstorms.

Sweeping rainstorms late today also relieved central Michigan and brought surcease from heat which claimed 500 lives. The rain came within 50 miles of Detroit.

Brawley, Calif., in the heat-accustomed Imperial Valley, had a 120-degree reading, but more than a score of Midwestern cities were not far behind. The hottest place in the territory was Mount Vernon, Ill., with 114.5. Only slightly less torrid were the 113 marks registered at Cedar Rapids, Iowa; Kewanee and La Salle, Ill.; Wellington and Fredonia, Kans. Many stations in Kentucky, Arkansas, Missouri, Michigan, Oklahoma, Ohio Minnesota, Wisconsin, Indiana, Nebraska and North Dakota had readings between 100 and 110 degrees.

To aid in ameliorating drought conditions which have, according to one private estimate, caused crop damage totaling $1,000,000, Federal authorities in Washington poured out new relief funds.

$1,500,000 Allotted.

The WPA allotted $1,500,000 to start aid projects in 12 arid States. Its administrator, Harry L. Hopkins, announced also that President Roosevelt had made $3,000,000 available for long term measures. It was estimated that 40 projects would be started in the two Dakotas, Montana, and Wyoming, "Heart of the Drought" territory.

As deaths reached a new high for one day over the country, Forecaster J. R. Lloyd, of Chicago, assured suffering millions that the cool front already sweeping into Minnesota would reach here.

In the wheat town of Williston, N. Dak., and its adjoining acres, rain reached the proportions of a cloudburst.

Nature, playing a trick in ironic reverse, deluged the countryside, and the downpour washed out 900 feet of the Great Northern main line tracks. Washouts impeded both

President, Sons Sail 5 Hours Off Coast of Maine

By the Associated Press.

South Brooksville, Me., July 14. The trim little schooner Sewanna, with President Roosevelt and his three sons aboard, dropped anchor off this Eastern Penobscot Bay town at 7 p. m. (E. S. T.) tonight after sailing nearly five hours along Maine's jagged coast.

The white-hulled yacht pulled close to shore and dropped her sails in Bucks Harbor as a warm evening sun began to fade over the surrounding islands. It had been a perfect yachting day.

As the crow flies the anchorage was only 15 miles from Pulpit Harbor, North Haven, where the President boarded the Sewanna. The white-winged yacht had covered nearly double that mileage, however, in a leisurely jaunt offshore and back into the bay.

Six Aboard Craft.

The President, who will navigate the 56-foot auxiliary-motored sailing craft, reached Pulpit on North Haven Island on the Government yacht Potomac from Rockland, Me., where he arrived by special train at 9:30 a. m. (E. D. T.) this morning from Hyde Park, N. Y.

His three sons—James, Franklin, jr., and John—greeted him on the Sewanna. They will be his sailing companions for two weeks in north Atlantic waters.

The rest of the crew were Capt. Elden Colbeth, professional mariner, and a lone "hand," Joseph Emmerz.

"I haven't the faintest idea where I'm going except that I'm going to work eastward," the skipper-President told a press conference on board the Potomac at Rockland, just before starting across Penobscot Bay for Pulpit Harbor, 13 miles distant.

He is expected to sail up the Maine coast, bearing northeast, and around New Brunswick and Nova Scotia before winding up at Campobello Island, N. B., at the Roosevelt summer home, July 28.

Confers With Gov. Brann.

The Potomac and the destroyer Hopkins escorted the trim little Sewanna out to sea. Newspapermen trailed in the two-masted Liberty.

The President said his plans after August 1 were indefinite, although he is due to return to Hyde Park from Quebec, which he will visit July 31 for a call on Lord Tweedsmuir, Governor General.

He said he would visit the New England, southern New York, Pennsylvania and upper Ohio flood regions some time next month.

Seated on the rear deck of the Potomac, the President told newsmen he had discussed farm co-operatives with Gov. Louis J. Brann of Maine, who rode with him from Brunswick to Rockland on the train.

Breckinridge Gives Support To Gov. Landon

By the Associated Press.

Topeka, Kans., July 14.—Henry Breckinridge, Democrat, who entered four State primaries against President Roosevelt, announced tonight after a surprise conference with Gov. Alf M. Landon that he will support the Republican Presidential nominee.

Before boarding a train to travel eastward, he dictated a statement that he would "vote for Gov. Landon and Col. Knox."

Breckinridge, battling President Roosevelt's renomination, entered primaries in Ohio, Pennsylvania, Maryland and New Jersey.

The conference was held at the close of a day during which the Kansas Governor was told by two pre-Convention Borah men that sentiment favoring his election was "growing very rapidly" in the Inter-Mountain States. Former Senator John Thomas, of Idaho, and E. G. Bennett, of Ogden, Utah, were the callers.

The Breckenridge statement said:

"I shall vote for Gov. Landon and Col. Knox. Under all the circumstances I think their election will accomplish lasting good for the country. I think the re-election of the present governing faction would cause lasting harm.

"Gov. Landon's election, in my judgment, will bring the following results:

"1. Greater security and prosperity for all those at present employed in agriculture, commerce, transportation and industry.

"2. Speedier re-employment at good wages for the millions who are unemployed because of the economy of scarcity and other follies of the present Administration.

"3. Economy and common sense in government with diminishing taxes and more money in the citizen's

Canoeist Drowns, City Heat Blamed; Shower Forecast

Another death attributable to the heat occurred late last night in Washington when a 26-year-old man was drowned as his canoe upset in the Eastern Branch of the Potomac at the end of Seventeenth street.

The victim was Ellis Marsh, clerk, of 923 Potomac avenue southeast. Harbor police, who recovered his body early today, said he had sought relief from the torrid weather.

The death of Marsh brings the toll for the current heat wave in the District and nearby Virginia and Maryland to 11.

Meanwhile the weather man predicted last night cooler weather for today after another sweltering day during which the thermometer rose to 96 and three persons swooned from the heat.

Those who were overcome by heat in the city yesterday were:

Gilbert Long, 25, of Arlington, Va.

Lucille Minor, 15, also of Arlington.

All three were treated at Emergency Hospital.

OARP to End Dr. Townsend's Choice of Board

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, July 14.—Creation of a more democratic organization to succeed the closely knit Townsend Old Age Revolving Pensions, Ltd., was announced late today on the eve of the second Townsend national convention tomorrow.

Under the reorganization plan the old body will be dissolved entirely and in its place will appear a new corporation, Townsend Recovery Plan, Inc.

This would strip Dr. F. E. Townsend, founder of the movement for imposition of a transactions tax to raise funds for payment of $200 monthly pensions to the aged, of his present power to appoint members to the board of directors.

Power to name the 15 members of the board will pass to the "citizens maximi," the national advisory board of one member from each State, chosen at State conventions.

Seeks Democratization.

Dr. Townsend said the purpose of the plan, details of which have yet to be worked out, was to expand the government of the movement and "democratize" it.

The reorganization might be considered preparatory to the formation of a Townsend political party after the November elections, he indicated.

Bennett Urges One-Man Cars For All of City

Transit Aid Tells P. U. C. District Would Benefit From Change.

Washington would be better off if all of its street cars were of the one-man type, W. B. Bennett, assistant to the president of the Capital Transit Co., told the Public Utilities Commisson at a hearing yesterday.

The company, which now has 71 of the one-man cars, has petitioned the P. U. C. for permission to increase the number to 111.

Speaks as Individual.

William A. Roberts, people's counsel, who is fighting the petition, asked Bennett if the goal of the company was 100 per cent operation of one-man cars.

"I think that would be the proper thing from the standpoint of the public," Bennett replied. "There is an economic necessity for it. With the money saved in wages, the company could put more new cars into service."

S. R. Bowen, counsel for the Capital Transit Co., later prompted Bennett to say that he was speaking as an individual, and that the company had made no decision to ask for any one-man cars other than the number now covered in the petition.

However, observers at the hearing got the distinct impression that the Capital Transit Co. hopes to increase the number of its one-man cars—now 15 per cent of the fleet—to 100 per cent.

The out-of-town transit men the

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Montgomery, Ala., July 14.—A deadly epidemic of infantile paralysis in Alabama, Mississippi and Tennessee tonight appeared likely to provide the final test to establish an effective preventive for one of the most dreaded of man's diseases.

Grappling with death on the epidemic front, where at least 10 persons have died and 150 are afflicted by paralysis, Dr. Charles Armstrong was applying the final tests to a nasal spray he believes will be an absolute preventive for the disease which cripples or kills human beings.

Armstrong, ace microbe hunter of the United States Public Health Service, rushed here by airplane to direct the fight against the epidemic which has brought business in north Alabama virtually to standstill, banning of public meetings in 11

Karpis Enters Plea of Guilty In $100,000 Hamm Kidnaping

By the Associated Press.

St. Paul, July 14.—Alvin Karpis, once the most sought criminal in the Nation, who had boasted he never would be taken alive, muttered a subdued "yes" today to admit his guilt in the $100,000 ransom kidnaping of William Hamm, St. Paul brewer.

His plea provided a dramatic opening for what was to have been his Federal Court trial on the abduction charge.

Karpis, brought heavily guarded to the courtroom from the county jail which has held him since his bloodless capture in New Orleans on May 1, spoke only when Judge M. M. Joyce asked him whether he understood the guilty plea his attorney had offered for him. His sentence was deferred.

District Attorney George F. Sullivan announced the prisoner would be tried, probably this fall, for a second St. Paul abduction, that of Edward G. Bremer, bank president, who paid $200,000 for his freedom

Green Predicts Move to Settle Dispute Today

A.F.L. Head Won't Venture Opinion on Decision of Labor Council.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, predicted last night that the federation's executive council would act today in the dispute between that organization and the Committee for Industrial Organization, headed by John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America.

A majority of the council was reported to favor immediate suspension of the 12 unions comprising the C. I. O. A majority group within the council has been advising delay until the next council meeting in the fall or until the A. F. of L. convention in November.

Members of the council spent yesterday afternoon discussing activities of the C. I. O., but no attempt was made to reach a definite conclusion or to vote on the action to be taken.

"The executive council," Green said, "took into account the refusal of representatives of the organizations in the C. I. O. to respond to its invitation to confer. It deplores the fact that none of the organizations responded and none of their representatives were present at the council meeting.

"The council considered the opportunity created through extension of invitations to C. I. O. unions as a probable way out of our difficulties. The purpose was to find some way, through discussions, to compose our differences. That effort has failed.

"The council took into consideration all the facts available—the setup of the C. I. O., how it has been functioning, and its declared aims and purposes. The council engaged in a general discussion without arriving at a conclusion."

Green said that while he was confident the matter would be disposed of today he would not venture an opinion as to the conclusion that would be reached.

Should the unions be suspended more than 1,000,000 members, representing nearly a third of its total membership, would be removed from the federation.

N. J. Board Commutes Death Sentence of Pair

Trenton, N. J., July 14 (AP).—Two days before his seventeenth birthday, Jacob Ciemiengo's life was spared through clemency of the State court of pardons today.

Because of his "extreme youthfulness" and the low mental condition of both Ciemiengo and his partner, George Hildebrand, 26, in a $4 holdup murder, the pardons court commuted their death sentences to life imprisonment.

Washington Man Wins Divorce at Rockville

John G. Priest, 44, of Washington, was awarded a final decree of absolute divorce from Mrs. Elsie H. Priest, of Bethesda, Md., in the Montgomery County Circuit Court at Rockville, Md., yesterday.

According to the testimony the couple was married July 9, 1913, at Rochester, N. Y. They have no children. Priest charged desertion. He was represented by Kenneth Lyddane of Rockville, Md.

Electoral College System of Choosing President Archaic; Has Vast Possibilities.

By Franklyn Waltman.

UNDER the American electoral system of selecting Presidents, the emergence of a third party of any strength at all is sufficient to create the possibility that the determination of the Nation's Chief Executive may be thrown into the House of Representatives for solution.

WALTMAN.

This is especially true where the race between the candidates of the two major parties seems to be close. It has not happened in recent years but it remains possible this year with the emergence of William Lemke and his Union Party. An examination of the possibilities in the current situation indicates the defects of the constitutional provisions for electing the President of the United States.

Very perplexing to foreigners and not always understood by Americans is the system whereby we elect Presidents—not by popular vote—but by electoral vote apportioned among the States on the same basis as Congressional representation. These electors are selected by popular pluralities—not majorities—in their respective States, but to be successful a Presidential candidate must receive the support of a majority of all the electors. Otherwise the House of Representatives settles the contest, each State having but a single vote.

The results of the first America Speaks poll published Sunday, reveals a situation which presents in an unusual manner all the possibilities to which this year's Presidential election is susceptible. In that poll President Roosevelt is the winner as far as popular vote goes. He is the choice of 51.8 per cent of those participating in the poll.

But Gov. Alf M. Landon is the winner on the basis of electoral votes, having received a majority of the popular vote in States with a total of 272 electoral votes or 6 more than the necessary 266. Thus he would be the winner if this poll truly represents what is going to happen next November.

Some persons do not understand how this can happen. In the case of this poll Mr. Roosevelt is the winner in the popular vote and the loser on the basis of electoral vote because his strength in the Southern States is overwhelming, while Gov. Landon is ahead only by proportionally small margins in the States which he "carries."

A better example would be this: Candidate A carries New York by 50,000 votes, thus entitling him to the support of that State's 45 electoral votes. His opponent carries Maryland by 60,000 votes, giving him that State's 8 electoral votes. Thus B would have a majority of 10,000 popular votes but A would have a majority—as between the two States—of 37 electoral votes. The views of the several million persons in New York who voted for candidate B would be completely discounted and without effect in the final analysis—a serious defect in the present system.

But the America Speaks poll in its first appraisal of the Roosevelt-Landon fight took no account of third party candidates. It divided the electoral vote between President Roosevelt, giving him 259 votes, and Gov. Landon, 272. Included in the latter was Minnesota's 11 electoral votes. In Minnesota the Farmer-Labor Party is deeply entrenched. The major parties have internal differences there. Suppose that Representative Lemke's candidates for Presidential electors, committed to him, should receive a plurality of the vote cast in Minnesota next November.

Assuming further that the America Speaks poll just published accurately represents the outcome in every other respect, Gov. Landon would have 261 electoral votes, President Roosevelt would have 259 and Mr. Lemke, 11. None would have a majority and it would become necessary for the House of Representatives to elect the next President, as was done in 1800 and 1824. In 1876 a special electoral commission decided the Hayes-Tilden deadlock.

If this year's election is thrown into the House little Delaware would be as influential as New York. The Congressional delegation of the latter State would caucus and the Presidential candidate favored by a majority of the delegation would receive the State's 1 vote. If the poll of the delegation resulted in a tie, New York would cast no vote.

A further complicating factor, should this year's election result in a deadlock, is the short lapse of time between the meeting of the new Congress on January 3 and the day set for the beginning of the new President's term, January 20—under the Norris lame duck amendment.

Heretofore Presidential deadlocks in the so-called electoral college would have to be referred to a Congress already elected and convening for a short term in December to sit until March 4 when the Presidential term ended. Under the Norris amendment, however, the deadlock would be broken by the House elected at the same time the Presidential deadlock occurred.

It is obvious that if this year's Presidential election is so close as to be deadlocked by the Lemke candidacy, then the political complexion of the next House will be in doubt and it may be evenly divided, with perhaps the Farmer-Labor bloc holding the balance of power. This would open the way for bargaining or it might prevent selection of a President for months.

It also is obvious that if all this should occur, there would be a number of contests for House seats to settle before that body could proceed to the selection of a President and this undoubtedly would prevent a selection by January 20.

Mr. Roosevelt would cease being President on January 20. The Senate would undertake the selection of a Vice President, since the deadlock would affect that selection also, and that officer when selected would assume the Presidential duties until the latter office was duly filled. Since the next Senate clearly will be Democratic, the Vice President thus chosen would be a Democrat—in all probability, John Nance Garner. But if a majority of the House were Republican Gov. Landon under such procedure might be elected President.

Thus the country would experience the unusual situation—indeed since 1800 the unprecedented situation—of having a President of one party and a Vice President of the opposition. All this is possible, if unlikely, as long as the present archaic and nonsensical electoral system of selecting Presidents prevails. But it is pleasing and interesting speculation. And who knows—it might happen.

Landon Choice Cost Roosevelt Votes, Foe Says

Bolton Cites Institute's Poll, Finds Groundswell Against Roosevelt.

Pointing to the poll of the American Institute of Public Opinion, published Sunday in The Washington Post, as proof of his statement, Representative Chester C. Bolton, of Illinois, chairman of the Republican Congressional Campaign Committee, said yesterday that "there is a general groundswell reaction throughout the country against President Roosevelt."

Bolton, at a press conference here, reminded the reporters of the results of the poll, which showed that President Roosevelt had lost considerable ground since the nomination of Gov. Landon of Kansas by the Republican Party at Cleveland.

He said he expected a great many Democrats to bolt their party, saying that many had told him they wanted to "get rid of Roosevelt" and then concentrate on 1940.

Bolton, who will leave shortly for his first conference with Gov. Landon since the latter's nomination, said the Republican campaign would be very difficult to wage because of the "tremendous expenditures of funds" by the Democrats. He added, however, that he expected the reaction against the President would bring many WPA workers, farmers who have received AAA benefits, and labor voters in the Republican camp.

Eastern headquarters at New York will be in charge of Representative Robert L. Bacon, of New York, and Carl G. Bachmann, recently in charge of Senator William E. Borah's nomination campaign, will be the chief of the Chicago office for the Congressional fight.

Senator John G. Townsend, of Delaware, will head the Senate activities of the Republicans in New York, and Senator Frederick Steiwer, of Oregon, will have charge of the Chicago office.

Bolton said that the Republicans are "certainly more hopeful than in 1934" of recapturing numerous Senate and House seats for their party, now greatly in the minority.

Sees Swing to Landon.

Winchester, Va., July 14 (AP).—Hollie B. McCormac, chairman of the executive committee of the Virginia Republican Organization, predicted a swing-away from the Democratic Party toward Gov. Alf M. Landon in a statement last night.

Basing his forecast on the poll of the American Institute of Public Opinion, McCormac said:

"That Virginia will not support the New Deal in the November election seems to be clearly indicated. * * * Seven per cent of the voters in Virginia have left the ranks of the New Dealers and joined the opposing forces. * * * Believers in the theories and policies of Thomas Jefferson have openly refused to be coerced into approving by their ballots, costly experiments and extremely dangerous policies in government."

He said it was likely the swing from the Democratic ticket in 1928 represented "the first decisive effort on the part of Virginia's voters to demonstrate a political independence that refused to adhere to outworn social and sectional politics."

Examination Ordered For Woman Poisoner

Albany, N. Y., July 14 (AP).—Gov. Lehman today named a commission of five men to examine "the physical and mental condition" of Mrs. Mary Frances Creighton, under sentence of death in Sing Sing Thursday for the poison murder of Ada Appelgate. The Governor asked that the men go to Sing Sing Prison at once.

Mrs. Creighton collapsed at Sing Sing, suffered a paralysis from fear two days ago, and was placed under the observation of physicians. She was sentenced to die after a trial in Mineola with Everett R. Appelgate, husband of the woman who was poisoned. Appelgate also is under sentence of death.

mittee and the Federal Advisory Council met often and exchanged views, but did not actually institute action. Yesterday's move is the first step taken by the board to boost the requirements since they were so empowered by the banking act of 1935.

Eccles, however, took pains to scout the possibility that the move would be construed as the beginning of a constant juggling or manipulation of the reserve requirements by the board. He said the action would be taken only when the circumstances warranted, and appeared confident this would not be necessary for a considerable period to come.

The board held that this is "an opportune time" for such an action, since reserves are widely distributed, with practically all member banks in a position to meet the increased requirements either by utilizing their excess balances with the Reserve banks or by drawing upon their excess balances with correspondent banks.

Canoe Overturns, Two Swim Ashore

Hurled into the Potomac when their canoe overturned as they were changing seats, two Washington boys yesterday fought their way to shore through more than 200 yards of choppy water.

They are Albert Schaeffer, 16, of Irving street northeast, and William Beard, 17, of 3517 Seventeenth street northeast. The upset occurred shortly below the R. F. & P. Railroad bridge.

The boys, attired in swimming trunks, righted the canoe and swam with the water-filled craft to the District shore near the Potomac Park tourist camp. They reached the seawall just as the Fire Rescue Squad, summoned by bystanders, appeared.

Hamilton Talk Starts Landon Drive in Maine

Tells Republicans' Rally Kansan Appeals to Intelligence.

By the Associated Press.

Bangor, Me., July 14.—John D. M. Hamilton, manager of the Landon Presidential campaign, told Maine Republicans tonight election of the Kansas Governor "will mean the return of common sense to Government and the return of Government to the American people."

"With your help we shall accomplish in November this aim," he said in a prepared speech opening the New England campaign.

Earlier, the red-haired chairman of the National Committee put in a full day conferring with party workers and leaders in Portland and Augusta.

Devoting much of his address to Gov. Landon and his record of accomplishments, Hamilton declared him a "human man and a tolerant one."

"Gov. Landon believes that a political campaign should appeal, in the words of Abraham Lincoln, to the intelligence and not to the passions and prejudices of the people," he said. "This does not mean he campaigns with gloves on. * * * But he campaigns cleanly and fairly."

Hamilton referred briefly to Democratic National Chairman Farley's recent characterization of Kansas as a "typical prairie State."

"Jim Farley not only made a slight error in political judgment in sneering at Kansas as a 'typical prairie State,'" said Hamilton. "He also implied it was nothing but prairie and thereby exhibited ignorance. We don't hold it against him.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Berryville, Va., July 14.—Smudges of fingerprints on a smoke-stained kerosene lamp that glimmered in a mountain home at dawn Monday when four members of a family died in beds of flames, were taken to the Department of Justice in Washington today.

On the butt of a shotgun, on a window pane and on the lamp, the fingerprints were smeared. They were taken to Washington by a local officer. Commonwealth's Attorney Edward McC. Williams ordered the investigation.

However, Sergt. Francis Funk, fingerprint expert of the Winchester Police Department, said he had identified the fingerprints on the lamp as those of Mrs. May Smallwood. This corroborated Acting Coroner A. P. Osborne's theory that Mrs. Smallwood murdered her own family and then killed herself.

Previously, an acting coroner had said that a mother, deranged by illness, had done the killing. He said Mrs. May Smallwood—divorcee and mother—had killed her mother, her two sons, had set their beds afire and then pressed a shotgun to her breast and ended her own life.

It may be a day, or several days, before outcome of the Department of Justice's investigation is known.

Joe Elsea, son and brother of the two slain women, and his friend, who arose at dawn to go to work found the bodies Friday. They saw smoke curling from the windows of the home, and they battered down the door.

They found Mrs. Susan Virginia Elsea dying on her cot. Mrs. Smallwood was dead from a bullet through her chest, and her two sons, Elbert, 23, and Alkin, 17, were lifeless in their beds upstairs.

Acting Coroner A. P. Osborne said at first that Mrs. Smallwood killed her family. He said he thought the woman was in ill health—that she shot her two sons, first, then killed her mother and then shot herself.

A coroner's inquest was originally set for today, but was postponed by the surprise fingerprint action.

The bodies of the four will be buried tomorrow at 11 a. m. The funeral services will be conducted by Dr. L. A. Parker in a little mountain church. The Rev. Clarence Lloyd, of the Boyce Baptist Church, will assist in the ceremonies.

Interment will be in a cemetery adjoining the church.

Mrs. Smallwood's former husband, a son of the county's sheriff, now is living in Pennsylvania. They were divorced 15 years ago.

Woman Kills Self As Climax to Party

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., July 14.—Climaxing a midnight beer party at the apartment of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Kelly, Mrs. Ola Collins, 25, fired a bullet into her heart from a revolver at 12:53 o'clock this morning, according to police.

Officers were at a loss for the motive of the former Front Royal (Va.) woman. Some time prior to the tragedy, the woman and Mrs. Kelly invited Robert Showalter to assist in carrying some beer to the apartment, police said.

Showalter, when questioned by officers, said they went to the apartment where the three drank beer and talked. Later, Showalter and Mrs. Collins went out for more beer. Some time after they returned, Mrs. Collins left the room and a few moments later they heard the shot, Showalter said. Investigating, they found Mrs. Collins on the floor. Dr. James Miller, when called, pronounced her dead. He said the wound was self-inflicted.

1,500-Mile Glide Is Aim Of Champion Du Pont

Lakehurst, N. J., July 14 (AP).—Richard C. Du Pont, outstanding American glider pilot, is sighing for new worlds to conquer—he wants to be towed into the stratosphere for a 1,500-mile glide.

His idea, the wealthy young Wilmington (Del.) sportsman explained here, would be to have a stratosphere balloon carry his sailplane 60,000 to 70,000 feet aloft. Then he would cut loose.

"Why, I could glide to either coast if I got a start near the center of the continent," he said.

Tonight, however, he had to be satisfied with powered aircraft.

He came to Lakehurst to fly on the airship Hindenburg to Germany, there to study glider construction for the Soaring Society of America.

Tenant Slain by Police After Row Over Rent

Los Angeles, July 14 (U.P.).—Nick Boblovich, 60-yar-old Russian, was shot and killed by police tonight when he allegedly refused to surrender after barricading his room against a landlord.

Boblovich assertedly went into a rage when the landlord, Harry Saylor, asked payment of six weeks rent. He piled furniture against the door and Saylor called police, who attempted to dislodge the Russian with tear gas bombs.

After three bombs were thrown into the room, Boblovich allegedly came to the window with a gun and shot at the officers. The detectives returned fire, killing the Russian with a fusillade of six shots.

Frank McCormick, Minneapolis; Samuel Philipson, Chicago; B. J. Gould, Chicago; Samuel Genis, New York; Benjamin C. Waller, Chicago; Robert Belmont, Chicago and New York; Harry K. Newberger, Chicago; A. L. Novak, Chicago; Maurice L. Chyenkus, Minneapolis; Max Oxman, Detroit, and Samuel Sherman, Meyer Wolfson, Frank Berger, Joseph Ricebaum and Albert Trause, all of Chicago.

The headquarters of the operations were in Chicago, according to Burns. He said Joseph Mendelson, Leonard Sutterman and Joseph Sherman were the active heads of the scheme. All of the companies, he said, were apparently owned by the same group and the company heads acted as "fronts" for the operations.

The activities, according to officials, combined the familiar "sell and switch" operations with "bucket shops" and actual manipulation of the market. There apparently was no dealing in fraudulent stocks.

According to officials, the alleged manipulators first sold their customers blocks of stocks in conservative corporations. Next, they would manipulate the stock of Stutz and National Service upward. High pressure salesmen would then persuade the customers to switch from their holdings to stock in one or both of these companies, buying it on margin. When enough sales of this kind were accomplished, the investigators said, the manipulators would depress the market in the two stocks, thus wiping out their alleged victims' margins.

The margins paid in by the victims, according to officials, would be almost clear profit to the alleged swindlers because, it is charged, they seldom actually bought stock on which their customers had made payments. This type of transaction is known as "bucketing." Usually the customers were required to put up 50 per cent margin.

Burns described Joseph N. Sherman as "the best stock salesman in America." Those whose names appeared as officials of the companies, it was said, were little more than "front," the salesmen actually transacting the business, usually over the telephone.

As an indication that there were few, if any, actual stock transactions, Burns pointed to the charge that at one time the alleged swindlers had actually "sold" 300,000 shares of Stutz stock, although there were were only 150,000 shares outstanding, and that at one time 3,000,000 shares of National Service stock had been sold, although there were fewer than 500,000 shares outstanding. The Stutz stock is listed on the New York Curb and the National Service stock is listed on the Boston exchange and traded on the New York Curb.

Burns said the operators were careful to sell only to persons of small means who would not embarrass them by meeting their margin calls and demanding delivery of their stocks. He said that some of the group had been in operation since 1919, but that the present investigation covered only the last three years. He added that the men under indictment comprised the last of the "big business groups in the security swindling field."

Very few of the victims, according to Burns, had any idea they were being swindled, simply believing the "breaks" were against them. He told of a bank cashier in a small Alabama town who had been "sold" 50,000 shares of stock. The cashier, he said, took money out of the bank's funds to meet the repeated demands of the stock salesmen. He finally was indicted for embezzling $40,000 from the bank and sent to the penitentiary.

Burns said there was little chance for the victims to recover any of the money they have lost.

3 Seized in Chicago.

Chicago, July 12 (AP).—Three of 21 men indicted today by a Federal grand jury at Gainesville, Ga., on charges of participating in a multi-million dollar stock swindle were seized by postal inspectors here.

They were Frank Berger, Henry Bernstein and Jospeh Mendelson, all of Chicago.

Pennsylvania's Relief Is Booed As Idle Depart

$45,000,000 Compromise Is Assailed, Immediate Aid Arranged.

By the Associated Press.

Harrisburg, Pa., July 14.—Shirt-sleeved "hunger marchers" reluctantly accepted the Pennsylvania Legislature's "compromise" offer to appropriate $45,000,000 for relief today, after terming it "the dirtiest slap ever given the jobless."

They demanded $100,000,000. They pleaded for 64 cents each a day. They insisted $45,000,000 spread from now until the end of January would not assure "even a decent" standard of living.

Assured by leaders the compromise appropriation was intended only for as long as it lasted, the "marchers," who stormed the Statehouse last night, howled from the galleries, booed speakers and held mass meetings on the broad steps of the capitol, began straggling homeward.

Cheer Resumption.

They cheered lustily, however, an announcement that relief, completely shut off eight days ago, would be resumed tomorrow. A bill was unanimously approved by the Democratic House authorizing transfer of $5,000,000 from special funds for emergency relief, $3,000,000 earmarked for the remainder of July.

The Republican Senate already has approved the proposal. New Deal Gov. Earle, who steadfastly opposed further transfer of special funds, sent word he would fly back to the Capital late today to sign the measure. He was on a speaking tour in western Pennsylvania, appealing to the voters to force the Republican Senators to approve his $55,000,000 tax bills.

The Senate prepared to rush through the necessary revenue legislation to cover the $45,000,000 relief appropriation which Democratic and Republican Senators agreed upon at a midnight session, with "marchers" storming the doors, milling about the rotunda and cheering their leaders speaking from every vantage point. State police kept watch, with riot sticks.

Session Ends in 10 Days.

With the end of the long fight in sight, legislators predicted tonight the special session called because of the relief crisis more than 11 weeks ago would end within 10 days.

The Democratic Administration, the first the Keystone State has had in more than 40 years, originally demanded nearly $80,000,000 for relief and other Commonwealth obligations.

The organization Republican majority in the Senate balked. The Democratic House rushed bill after bill in the Governor's program over to the Senate, where each measure was locked up in committee. The crisis came more than a week ago, with collapse of the relief system.

Karpis Enters Guilty Plea

six months after the June, 1933, Hamm kidnaping.

With Karpis convicted by his own statement, the trial of two alleged confederates of his in the Hamm kidnaping got under way immediately.

Remaining defendants were John (Jack) Peifer, St. Paul night club operator, indicted as "finger man," and Edmund C. Bartholomey, former Bensenville, Ill., postmaster, in whose home the Government charges Hamm was held during his four-day captivity.

Selections of a jury to hear their cases was started.

Two other defendants, also to be sentenced at the conclusion of the present trial, had previously pleaded guilty. One of them, Byron Bolton, reputed Barker-Karpis machine gunner, Sullivan said, would be the principal Government witness. The other is Charles (Big Fitz) Fitzgerald.

Twelve jurors had been selected tentatively.

Karpis' capture in New Orleans ended an almost three-year pursuit by Federal agents who sought him for nearly a score of other crimes, including numerous bank holdups, in addition to the kidnapings.

Raskob Out of Hospital; Treated for Leg Hurts

Hospital attaches and physicians refused—they said on Raskob's orders—to divulge the nature of his injury. They said it was not serious.

Extortionist Awaits Term.

New York, July 14 (AP).—Ernest Desmond de Hagen, also known as "Lord Desmond," pleaded guilty today to charges of grand larceny and attempted extortion and was remanded to the Tombs until August 14, when he will be sentenced. De Hagen was one of several persons indicted in extortion cases investigated following the complaint of Alfred E. Smith, jr.

U. S. May Enter Inquiry Into Nightriding Terror

Conway, S. C., July 14 (U.P.).—Activities of a band of white-robed nightriders, who enforce their primitive moral code with terror and the lash, tonight assumed an interstate character as investigation of the floggers spread into South Carolina.

The flogging of Monroe Fowler, 40-year-old tobacco grower, involved his transportation over a State line and for the first time opened the possibility that Federal agents might begin inquiry into primitive lashings in both Carolinas.

N. J. Jury to Act In Wendel Case If N. Y. Doesn't

Wilentz May Tell Story; Jury Foreman Talks to Federal Aid.

By the Associated Press.

Newark, N. J., July 14.—A Federal grand jury here promised today to take action in the Paul H. Wendel kidnaping—sequel to the Lindberg-Hauptmann case—if authorities in New York do not dispose of the matter.

"If New York does not dispose of this case, we will," said Julius S. Rippel, jury foreman, after the jury had questioned New Jersey's attorney general, David T. Wilentz.

Rippel said he had discussed the case with an assistant in United States Attorney General Cummings' office and had been told the question of jurisdiction would be determined shortly.

"Cummings could not be reached," Rippel said, "but I talked to his assistant. He indicated there seemed to be a question of jurisdiction and promised to let us know our province within the next two days."

The jury foreman said Wilentz gave the jurors a complete story of the Wenzel case.

"We know all the facts and are concerned only with our jurisdiction," he declared.

Wendell, former Trenton attorney, asserted he was kidnaped in New York on February 14 and tortured into "confessing" he killed the Lindbergh baby. He later repudiated the "confession" in a statement given Wilentz, but the Mercer County (Trenton) grand jury's investigation delayed for three days the electrocution of Bruno Richard Hauptmann for the murder.

Subsequently, Ellis Parker, chief of Burlington County detectives; his son, Ellis, jr., and three Brooklyn men were indicted by the Kings County (Brooklyn) grand jury on kidnaping charges. Extradition of the senior Parker to New York was refused by Gov. Harold G. Hoffman, who lauded the detective and assailed Wendell and District Attorney William F. X. Geoghan, of Brooklyn.

Gov. Hoffman's action caused counsel for Harry Weiss, Brooklyn cab driver, who was one of those indicted, to ask Federal intervention.

The governor expressed doubt the Federal Government would enter the case, saying Wendel's statements showed he was not taken by force across State lines.

Snake Torture In James Case Staged in Court

Dramatic Episode Enacted by Barber, Accuser in Woman's Death.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, July 14.—The rattlesnake torture the State charges Robert S. James inflicted upon his seventh wife, Mary, was re-enacted in part in superior court today—with James taking the role of the woman he is accused of murdering.

The dramatic episode was put on by counsel for the green-eyed barber in an effort to show Mrs. James could not have been tortured as Charles Hope, former sailor, has testified.

James lay stretched on an attorney's table—as Hope said his wife lay trussed on a breakfast nook table in the James home while the defendant thrust her bared foot into a box containing a rattlesnake.

Hope, whose story placed James in his present situation and who has pleaded guilty to first degree murder in the case, stood alongside.

The former sailor was supposed to seize James' foot and jam it into a duplicate of the original reptile box. Perspiration stood out on Hope's forehead. He seemed greatly agitated and angry.

When an altercation threatneed court guards and attorney hurridly stepped between the two men, James was helped off the table and Judge Charles Frick selected Hope to take the part of Mary James.

During the episode, the rattling of two snakes, Lethal and Lightning, could be heard. The serpents—the pair the prosecution says was purchased for torturing Mrs. James—were in a glass box behind the desk of the court clerk.

An attorney then placed the duplicate reptile box on a chair, which was adjusted to the level of the breakfast seat nook in the James home.

Defense Attorney Russell Parsons took the part of the defendant in the re-enactment of the crime as described by Hope.

"Now raise my leg and stick in my foot," said Hope. "I don't know exactly how James got hold of her leg because I was watching the rattlesnake. It looked like it was about to jump right out of the box."

The jurors rose to get a better view of the bizarre proceedings.

The defense presented snake experts whose testimony was intended to show a rattlesnake could not have struck Mrs. James on the foot as the State charges.

Roper Designates Air Traffic System

By the Associated Press.

As a preliminary move toward setting up a Nation-wide system of "airway traffic control," Secretary Roper yesterday designated 98 official "air highways."

The designated routes are those now in use by scheduled airlines and most are equipped with lights, emergency landing fields and radio facilities.

Under Roper's order, the "air highways" will be 50 miles wide, the limits extending 25 miles to either side of the center route between connecting airports.

The air routes will be used as a working basis for "traffic control" regulations, which will include rules on flight altitude and "blind" flying.

These regulations, which will be issued in the next few days, will become effective August 15.

Paralysis

Mississippi counties and alarm in Tennessee.

Opportunity for Test.

Widespread extent of the outbreak spreading rapidly since last month, provided him an opportunity to make conclusive tests of his nasal spray.

This week Dr. J. N. Baker, Alabama health commissioner, who is leading the fight against the disease here, sent instructions on use of the spray to all infected zones. The treatment may be a decisive factor in checking the deadly epidemic.

In tests conducted with animals, results were highly satisfactory. Previous experiments involving human beings have been inconclusive, since Armstrong could not take the rick of exposing humans to the deadly germs of paralysis.

Conclusive Proof Hoped.

With hundreds of adults and children exposed in the epidemic zones, however, a conclusive test of the spray's effectiveness appeared possible.

Basis of the spray is a sodium-alum, picric acid solution, designed to block entry of the deadly paralysis virus to the spine and brain by blocking off the ends of the olefactory nerves.

Tonight wholesale druggists at Birmingham and Montgomery mixed great quantities of the compound to rush to the infected areas.

Springfield, Ill., July 14 (AP).—Eight new cases of infantile paralysis were reported during the last week, the highest recorded incidence in any one week up to this date since 1932, Public Health Director Frank J. Jirka said today.

Post Staff Candid Photos and Underwood & Underwood

Spy Case

$10,000 bail for a further hearing in two weeks.

Mopping his brow with a fresh handkerchief, Farnsworth complained of being ill and asked to be sent to the hospital for a few days. He was examined at the District Jail, but the physician decided that he was not in need of hospital treatment and committed him to the jail infirmary.

Throughout the afternoon he made no attempt to obtain a lawyer and refused to see or speak to newspapermen. He had no visitors, not even his estranged wife, Florence, at whose residence he was arrested by two Department of Justice agents early yesterday after more than a year's surveillance. None of their four children visited him.

Confers With Puleston.

At the Japanese Empassy, all knowledge of any person known as Farnsworth or of any Japanese naval officer supposed to have dealings with him were denied. Although it had been understood that no diplomatic representations were to be made to the Japanese government, it was learned that Capt. Tamon Yamaguchi, Japanese naval attache, conferred with Capt. William D. Puleston, chief of naval intelligence, at 10:30 a. m. yesterday.

Commander Bunjiro Yamaguchi, assistant Japanese naval attache, at first denied any such conference had taken place, but, on further questioning, said the Farnsworth matter was not discussed. Later in the afternoon, Capt. Yamaguchi, it was learned, played golf with Commander John Creighton, of the naval intelligence, at the Army and Navy Country Club.

While this golf game was going on two other Japanese naval officers conferred with other officers in the office of naval intelligence. This latter conference, it was understood, was concerned with the forthcoming visit to the East Coast of the Japanese cruiser squadron, now on its way to Cuba.

Cases Not Connected.

Whether Justice and Naval officials believe they are coping against a ring of spies was still uncertain last night. Hoover said he saw no connection between Thompson's arrest and that of Farnsworth, but replied "no comment" to the question of whether or not he believed Farnsworth had associates.

The recent refusal by the Navy Department to permit newspapermen and cameramen to accompany the fleet on its annual maneuvers and a general tightening up in the giving of information and interviews throughout the department, has generaly been interpreted as signifying that considerable confidential material has leaked out.

Only a few days ago Harry T. Thompson, of Baltimore, Md., a former yeoman of the Navy, was sentenced to 15 years in prison for selling naval secrets to a Japanese naval officer, who has since left the country. Hoover said he saw no connection between Thompson's arrest and that of Farnsworth.

Several hundred persons, including cameramen and newsreel photographers had gathered on the sidewalk before Commissioner Turnage's office yesterday when Farnsworth was driven up in a large touring car with New York license plates. He was neatly garbed in a dark gray suit with a pin stripe and was handcuffed to Chief Deputy United States Marshall Thomas Ott.

Sways Unsteadily.

As he alighted from the car the former naval officer covered his face with his hands. He swayed unsteadily when he entered the outer room of the commissioner's office and ran his hands up over his perspiring brow and through his graying hair.

For several minutes as he waited to be called he squirmed in the leather chair. He clasped and unclasped his hands, dabbed at his forehead with his handkerchief and occasionally glanced around the room.

In a moderate, evenly pitched tone, U. S. Attorney Roger Robb read the complaint, which was signed by Max Rosen, a Department of Justice agent, and charged that on or about May 15, 1935, he had sold a book entitled, "The Service of Information and Security," to an officer of the Japanese navy.

Naval officers described the volume as a book on tactics, containing confidential instructions on the scouting of airplanes and aircraft carriers, the disposition and maneuvering of ships and ship movements. Originally written in 1916 by Rear Admiral William S. Pye, the book has since been revised several times.

No Copy Is Missing.

The book, it was explained, can be obtained by any naval officer if he signs for it. As far as could be determined, no copy of the book is missing, but naval officers said they thought Farnsworth had managed to obtain the book long enough to make photostatic copies of the pages and to return it before it was missed.

Asked how he pleaded to the charge, Farnworth's voice trembled as he replied:

"I plead not guilty."

When Farnsworth said he would like to get a lawyer and have the case postponed, Commissioner Turnage ordered him held in $10,000 bail for a preliminary hearing July 29. Still shaking, the former officer pleaded with the commissioner to be sent to a hospital "for a couple of days."

"I'm all shot," he said. "I've been suffering from gastritis. I've lost 30 pounds in two days."

After the arraignment, seated in the outer office of the commissioner, waiting to be taken to the District Jail, Farnsworth tried to dismiss the charges as "a lot of hooey." Tugging nervously at his short, dark mustache, he said that several papers relating to naval matters had been stolen from his home in Chevy Chase "last July I believe" but that the papers stolen were his personal property.

He admitted having possession of a copy of the confidential naval publication which he was accused of having betrayed to the Japanese, but described it as "antiquated" and "of no use today and not even marked confidential."

Admits Conversations.

He admitted having spoken with representatives of the Chinese and Japanese governments at one time about the possibility of assisting them in reorganizing their aviation corps and also said that at intervals since he was dismissed from the service he had had dealings with the Japanese government as a representative of the United American Bosch Co. He denied, however, that he had any "intention of doing anything against my country."

"I was trying to build back my reputation destroyed by the court-martial. I had no intention of doing anything against my country," he said.

Shock to Officers.

News of Farnsworth's arrest came as a shock to many naval officers who knew him before he was court-martialed as a brilliant and popular officer and one of the Navy's most capable fliers. They recalled that because of his early promise as an officer, the Navy selected him for postgraduate instruction in aviation at both the Naval Academy and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and that at one time he was personal pilot to Theodore D. Robinson, the Assistant Secretary of Navy.

Born in Chicago on April 13, 1893, Farnsworth was appointed to Annapolis from the Second District of Ohio, through the influence of the late Speaker of the House Nicholas Longworth, in 1911, graduating in 1915. He served successively on board the U. S. S. Kansas, Michigan and Montana. In 1917 while with the Galveston in Asiatic waters he was taken ill and after preliminary treatment at the Naval Hospital at Yokohama, Japan, was returned to this country on sick leave.

He qualified as a naval aviator in 1921. The following year he took a postgraduate course in aeronautical engineering at Annapolis and the year after, at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He also served with the Bureau of Aeronautics here, at the Naval Aircraft Factory at Philadelphia and as commander of VO squadron Six, his last station before the court-martial.

Found Guilty in 1927.

On October 3, 1927, he was tried and found guilty on charges of violating regulations issued by the Secretary of the Navy and of "scandalous conduct tending to the destruction of good morals" in service. The first charge, officials said, was concerned with a debt he contracted with an enlisted man in violation of regulations, and the second charge with "inducements to perjury."

Although generally popular with fellow officers, Farnsworth was known as "a man who was fond of his drinks," care-free and a bit reckless. The Naval Academy yearbook of 1915 described him under the nickname of "Themer" as belonging "to that class of happy-go-lucky, carefree mortals whose ready smile and good nature makes them, above all, good comrades and desirable shipmates. Had he lived in the days of the old Navy, he would have been famous for desperate deeds and hairbreadth escapes. His daring and reckless conduct has been the utter despair of the executive department during his little four-year sojourn at the academy."

Married immediately after graduation, Farnsworth and his wife had four children, Patricia, Herbert, John and Fred. His wife yesterday said they hadn't been living together "for eight years" and that they had been divorced "for three years."

Will Not Visit Him.

Asked whether she intended to visit Farnsworth in jail, she replied, "No. I'm sick and tired of it all. I have nothing at all to do with the whole business."

She said that while Farnsworth was visiting her Monday morning, two Department of Justice agents came and took him to headquarters for questioning. Although the Department of Justice said the arrest was made early yesterday, she insisted Farnsworth had been arrested the day before.

For more than a year Farnsworth has moved in the shadow of the Federal agents and naval intelligence officers. For several years after his court-martial he dropped from sight, but soon began circulating among friends in the service. Slightly more than a year ago he was reported to have sought confidential information from the wife of another naval officer. Acting on this tip the Naval Intelligence section placed Farnsworth on the suspect list and asked the Department of Justice to investigate.

A frequent visitor to the Navy Department, Farnsworth claimed to be a free-lance writer doing special articles on naval matters for magazines and newspapers. He frequented the Naval Library and once, it was reported, was found ostensibly asleep over a library desk.

The section of the United States code which Farnsworth is accused of having violated—the same section on which Thompson was tried—fixes punishment on conviction of not more than 20 years. Had the Nation been at war the offense would have been punishable by death.

Declared "Irresponsible."

Cincinnati, July 14 (AP).—The parents of John S. Farnsworth, former Naval lieutenant commander charged with conveying a secret U. S. Naval pamphlet to Japan, declared tonight Farnsworth had been "irresponsible" since he was injured in an airplane crash at Pensacola, Fla., in 1922.

The couple, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Farnsworth, of nearby Norwood, said the one-time naval officer had been treated in a private sanitarium here following the crash.

Sanctions Lifted, Italy Lands Cargo in England

London (Wednesday) July 15 (AP). Great Britain lifted sanctions from Italy at midnight, and early today the first consignment of Italian produce—peaches and plums—landed at Harwich.

Simultaneous with the end of sanctions the new treasury order came into force under which all debts falling due after today with respect to Italian goods will be payable to the Bank of England for the account of the Anglo-Italian clearing office.

The Board of Trade announced the restoration of general export licenses permitting the sale of British-made explosives and aircraft to Italy.

Deacons' Session Scheduled July 30

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 14.—Plans for the Deacons' Conference of the Winchester (Va.) Presbytery July 30 at Wardensville, W. Va., are being completed, Henry Moling, president of the association, has announced.

Dr. Robert A. Lapsley, jr., pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Roanoke, Va., will be the principal speaker. Sessions will be open to the public, but the program is planned especially for deacons, Moling said.

Dr. Wilkinson To Head College In Takoma Park

Missionary School Dean Is Chosen as President; Is Noted Writer.

Dr. Benjamin G. Wilkinson, dean of Washington Missionary College, Takoma Park, Md., and head of Columbia Union Conference of Seventh Day Adventists, yesterday was appointed president of the college at a meeting of the board of directors.

He succeeds Prof. Harbey A. Morrison, who recently was elected head of the educational department for the general conference. Coming to Takoma Park, Md., in 1900, Dr. Wilkinson served as chairman of the college board and Washington Sanitarium. He held the position of head of Columbia Conference for ten years. Before he came here he was in charge of the denominational work covering entire Europe and northern Africa, with headquarters in Paris. He now has some 40 schools throughout the Columbia Union under his jurisdiction. Although Dr. Wilkinson has been asked to serve as president of the college previously, he has always refused because of his many activities.

Queen Mary of England has written Dr. Wilkinson complimenting his writings. Dr. Wilkinson wrote several books on theology which the Queen read. He was one of the first preachers to broadcast over the radio. A few weeks ago Dr. Wilkinson returned from a six months' trip around the world, having done research work for the Columbia Union. While in China he narrowly escaped death in an airplane crash.

Dr. Wilkinson is a graduate of the University of Michigan where he received his A. B. and M. A. degrees. He also attended George Washington University, where he was given an M. A. degree. Born in Ontario, Dr. Wilkinson lived in North Dakota most of his boyhood life. He lives at 7120 Piney Branch road northwest, Takoma Park.

Hart, a Candidate For Congress, Dies

Hart was overcome by the heat Sunday afternoon while speaking at a National Union for Social Justice picnic.

Dead Man's Words Used In Wife's Murder Trial

Chicago, July 14 (AP).—The words of a man now dead, "She got me, Doc," were quoted in criminal court today at the trial of Mildred Mary Bolton, 39, charged with murdering her husband, Joseph Bolton, jr., in his insurance office June 15.

Attempting to prove the auburn-haired defendant fired the shots which took Bolton's life, the State called Lincoln Knutson, an elevator operator, who said he saw Bolton lying on the floor, fatally wounded, with a pistol in his hand.

"What did he say?" asked Assistant State's Attorney Morris Myers.

"'Get Dr. Smith.' Then Mrs. Bolton came up and he said, 'don't let her get this.' (Referring to the gun) she got me, Doc. I guess I'm through . . . keep that woman away from me.'"

Extortion Charge Holds Two Youths

Baltimore, July 14 (AP).—A Federal grand jury indicted two youths for extortion under the "Lindbergh law" today. It was the first time the law has been invoked in Maryland.

The prisoners are Emmett Hallie Creighton, 20, and William Jerome Mowbray, jr., 18, both of Cambridge, Md. They were accused to demanding $100 from Mrs. Fletcher Williamson, daughter of Levi Phillips, wealthy Cambridge packer.

The indictment contained two counts—one charging them with depositing the extortion letter in the mail and the other charging them with causing it to be delivered.

The exact nature of the threats contained in the letter has not been made public. The letter instructed Mrs. Williamson to put the money, wrapped in a white handkerchief, at the foot of a telephone pole on the outskirts of Cambridge. The pole was to be marked by a white cloth tied around it.

Motorcyclist Jailed.

Waynesboro, Va., July 14.—For driving his motorcycle while intoxicated Hiram Kelley, of this city, was yesterday sentenced to 30 days in jail, ordered to pay court costs of $10.70, and had his driver's permit revoked for one year by Trial Justice W. Terrell Sheehan. Kelley was arrested Sunday by Police Capt. H. C. Simpson.

Deputies Spirit Attack Suspect Away From Mob

By the United Press.

Anniston, Ala., July 14.—Roosevelt Collins, a strapping 25-year-old colored suspect, was arrested today by manhunters seeking the ravisher of a 25-year-old white woman, and spirited out of town while 1,500 muttering citizens packed a 10-block area surrounding the Anniston Jail.

Collins was hustled into a State highway patrol car, rushed toward Montgomery, Ala., and Kilby prison to prevent the possibility of outraged Alabamans taking the law into their own hands.

Sheriff's deputies said evidence discovered in Collins' home marked him as a suspect in the assault on Mrs. Lula Mae Hill, white, mother of three children.

The arrest came after streets of Anniston had surged with restless men for 24 hours while manhunters prowled through tangled vegitation of a woodland swamp in search of the attacker. After attacking Mrs. Hill, the man sought by officers wounded a posseman with a shotgun blast.

From the State Capitol at Montgomery, Gov. Bibb Graves ordered 50 more troops to augment the 200 already on duty here with the terse comment:

"We'll have no mob violence in Alabama."

Women Report 'Equal Rights' Fight Is Gaining

Miss Williams, of D.C., Tells Federation Rally of Campaign Work.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 14.—Progress in nearly every State in a movement to discourage discrimination against the participation of women in politics and civic and business life was reported today by Miss Charl Ormand Williams, of Washington, D. C., president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs.

"Reports from State chairmen were encouraging," she said in her report to the seventeenth annual meeting of the federation's board of directors.

State chairmen, she said, reported a large percentage of clubs working for qualified women for public office.

Plank Cited.

A plank submitted by the federation to both major political parties found expression in the Republican platform as follows, Miss Williams said:

"We are opposed to legislation which discriminates against women in Federal and State employment."

The Democratic Party, she said, did not include this plank in its platform, but party leaders promised to give attention to the matter of discrimination.

Miss Zoe Manning, of Tallahassee, Fla., said the Florida association had voted to sponsor legislation designed to clarify the legal status of women in the State.

Jury Duty.

"This proposed legislation," she said, "was designed to remove the penalty from marriage and permit a woman to be considered an intelligent human being whether married or single. It will also permit a woman to do jury duty and provides that no person, on account of sex, be disqualified from entering upon or pursuing any lawful business, vocation or profession, and men and women shall have equal rights in every way."

Mrs. Jessie Young, Shenandoah, Iowa, recommended that State federations demand appointment of one of their members to the State boards of Federal employment agencies so that "women's voices can be made more effective in employment projects."

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post, 9213 Clark Ave., Silver Spring, Md. Telephone Shepherd 2363.

A permit for establishment of a paint and varnish plant in the old shoe heel factory at Halpine was granted the Capital Varnish Works, Inc., of Washington, by the Montgomery County commissioners at Rockville yesterday.

Issuance of the permit was voted after Ray Ferguson, president of the concern, assured opponents of the plant that no objectionable odors or noise would result and that the building, which is to be remodeled, would not be converted to any other purpose.

It was stipulated by the commissioners that unless the plant operates without creating odors or noises that prove objectionable to residents of Halpine it will be voided.

Opposition to Plant.

Prior to the board's decision, Mrs. Joseph H. Bradley, Mrs. Charles W. Holmes, Harry Eaton, Mrs. R. Maude Hodgkins, Mrs. Eugene Ochsenreiter and Fred Bradley had signified their opopsition to the plant. They were represented by Attorney Robert B. Peter, jr.

Walter W. Dawson, local attorney and owner of the land, reprsented Ferguson. The petitioner also was supported by John R. Sullivan.

The board deferred action on the application of Frank M. Heath, retired Army sergeant, of Silver Spring, for commercial rezoning of Lots 1, 2 and 3 of Sligo Terrace for the purpose of opening a tourist camp.

Heath said the condition of the 30-acre recreational area of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission, which opposed the rezoning, had made it impossible for him to dispose of the land for home sites and his only alternative would be to open the camp to realize a return on his investment.

Agrees to Postponement.

He agreed to the postponement of action on his petition pending efforts by the county commissioners to have the park body clean up the recreational area. In that event, he said, he probably will attempt to develop the land for residential purposes.

In its resolution opposing the rezoning the park commission declared the land, facing Sligo Creek Parkway, is off the main routes of tourist travel, the camp is not a development that would be desirable to the community and that it would be located in close proximity to the Montgomery Blair Senior High School.

The commissioners voted to rezone the property of William E. Smith, along River road, near Friendship Heights, to permit the establishment of a store. The property is located close by other commercial property and the application was approved by the Park and Planning Commission.

A request from the North Chevy Chase citizens' committee for a reduction of the speed limit from 45 to 25 miles an hour along a portion of Connecticut avenue was received and referred to State authorities.

Lives Endangered.

It was pointed out in a letter from Mrs. G. Kenworthy, secretary of the committee, that a large number of pedestrians use the avenue and their lives are endangered by the lack of adequate sidewalks and the prevailing high speed limit.

The strip in which the lower rate is sought starts from a point 200 feet north of Chevy Chase Lake to a point 200 feet north of the intersection of Connecticut avenue and Jones Bridge road.

Mrs. J. Guy Neel, secretary of the Seven Oaks Manor Citizens Association, wrote the boards asking that the street markers in that subdivision be repainted and replaced wherever necessary.

Warning Signs Urged.

She also declared that the safety of children in that community made it advisable for proper signs warning motorists of the presence of children at play should be erected at the intersection of Clark and Franklin avenues, Brookside drive and Franklin avenue, Toll House road and Kingsbury drive.

Request for improvements along the road leading south from Martinsburg to the Potomac River was made in a letter from M. B. Hale.

The board was requested to attend the meeting of the County Commissioners Association of the Western Shore of Maryland at Frederick on July 23. The meeting will be held at the Francis Scott Key Hotel at 1 p. m.

S. Mason Hill, of Cumberland, secretary of the association, advised the board that plans would be discussed for a legislative program to be placed before the 1937 session of the Maryland General Assembly convening in January.

Senate Air Report Assailed by Roper

The recent report of the Senate Sub-Committee on Air Safety, accusing the Bureau of Air Commerce of politics and favoritism and holding it responsible for the airplane accident in which Senator Bronson Cutting was killed, was criticized sharply yesterday by Secretary of Commerce Roper.

"Glaring factual errors and serious misrepresentatiops exist in the committee's statements," the Secretary cnarged as he left Washington for New York, where he is to board a steamer to Europe.

Roper said he had instructed his subordinates to prepare a detailed analysis of the Senate committee's report which was read into the Congressional Record at the closing session of Congress by Senator Royal S. Copeland, chairman of the sub-committee. This analysis is to be submitted to the Senate commitee "as quickly as possible."

Dionne Baptism Sunday.

Callander, Ont., July 14 (AP).—The youngest brother of the Dionne quintuplets will be baptized in Corbell Parish Church Sunday if present plans materialise, it was said tonight. The week-old Joseph Robert Telesphore Dionne was reported in excellent health.

President Allots Fund For Religious Census

Secretary of Commerce Roper was notified yesterday that the President had arranged for allocation of funds with which the Census Bureau will take the 1936 census of religious bodies.

Since 1906 the Bureau has taken a similar census at two-year intervals and, the Secretary said, there has always been a wide demand for the reports. William L. Austin, director of the Bureau, will be in charge of the census.

56 Leave on Hindenburg.

Lakehurst, N. J. (Wednesday), July 15 (U.P.).—The dirigible Hindenburg left the Naval Air Station here at 12:04 a. m. (Eastern daylight time) today on the return leg of her fifth Aatlantic flight. Fifty-six passengers were aboard.

Townsend Convention

movement started by the late Senator Huey P. Long, of Louisiana, read the announcement of the revision to newsmen as Dr. Townsend stood nearby.

Earlier in the day Townsend outlined some of his political and economic views in a series of press conferences.

A half-dozen of his advisers sat about him as he talked. Frequently he called upon them for scientific information, his voice rising impatiently if they did not answer promptly.

Unicameral Plan Backed.

Dr. Townsend and his advisers advocated a one-house Congress, smaller in membership than the present 435 in the House of Representatives, the members to be chosen by town and neighborhood group meetings.

He said "partyism" is "un-American and undemocratic," predicted a working majority of Townsend supporters in the next House of Representatives and a gain in the Senate.

Representative William L. Lemke, the Union Party candidate for President, Townsend said, has been invited to serve on the organization's board of directors, but has not yet given his decision.

Whether the organization will support Lemke for the Presidency, Townsend said, rests with convention delegates. Already 9,000 have registered.

Against Landon, Roosevelt.

While he felt a third party would have little chance of electing a President, Townsend said of the Democratic and Republican parties:

"I will never vote for Roosevelt and I will never vote for Landon. I don't know who I'll vote for, but I would rather vote for a Socialist than either of them and the Lord knows I'm not a Socialist."

The first day's session will be given over to opening formalities, and a keynote speech by Otto A. Case, a member of the board of directors and State treasurer for Washington.

The first session ends at noon. In the afternoon, Dr. Townsend will deliver his message and officers will make reports.

Dr. Gerald L. K. Smith, of Louisiana, who describes himself as the "head man" of the Huey Long share-the-wealth clubs, is on the afternoon program for a discussion of Dr. Townsend's walk-out on a Congressional investigating committee.

The title is "Loyalty to Leadership," but Smith said:

"I will discuss this communistic New Deal that has been set up in Washington and which expresses itself in the persecution of Dr. Townsend."

Will Back Marland.

Oklahoma City, July 14 (AP).—The State Executive Board of Oklahoma Townsend Clubs threw its support today behind Gov. E. W. Marland in the Democratic senatorial runoff primary July 28. He is opposed by Representative Josh Lee.

Snake Torture In James Case Staged in Court

Dramatic Episode Enacted by Barber, Accuser in Woman's Death.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, July 14.—The rattlesnake torture the State charges Robert S. James inflicted upon his seventh wife, Mary, was re-enacted in part in superior court today—with James taking the role of the woman he is accused of murdering.

The dramatic episode was put on by counsel for the green-eyed barber in an effort to show Mrs. James could not have been tortured as Charles Hope, former sailor, has testified.

James lay stretched on an attorney's table—as Hope said his wife lay trussed on a breakfast nook table in the James home while the defendant thrust her bared foot into a box containing a rattlesnake.

Hope, whose story placed James in his present situation and who has pleaded guilty to first degree murder in the case, stood alongside.

The former sailor was supposed to seize James' foot and jam it into a duplicate of the original reptile box. Perspiration stood out on Hope's forehead. He seemed greatly agitated and angry.

When an altercation threatneed court guards and attorney hurridly stepped between the two men, James was helped off the table and Judge Charles Frick selected Hope to take the part of Mary James.

During the episode, the rattling of two snakes, Lethal and Lightning, could be heard. The serpents—the pair the prosecution says was purchased for torturing Mrs. James—were in a glass box behind the desk of the court clerk.

An attorney then placed the duplicate reptile box on a chair, which was adjusted to the level of the breakfast seat nook in the James home.

Defense Attorney Russell Parsons took the part of the defendant in the re-enactment of the crime as described by Hope.

"Now raise my leg and stick in my foot," said Hope. "I don't know exactly how James got hold of her leg because I was watching the rattlesnake. It looked like it was about to jump right out of the box."

The jurors rose to get a better view of the bizarre proceedings.

The defense presented snake experts whose testimony was intended to show a rattlesnake could not have struck Mrs. James on the foot as the State charges.

Roper Designates Air Traffic System

By the Associated Press.

As a preliminary move toward setting up a Nation-wide system of "airway traffic control," Secretary Roper yesterday designated 98 official "air highways."

The designated routes are those now in use by scheduled airlines and most are equipped with lights, emergency landing fields and radio facilities.

Under Roper's order, the "air highways" will be 50 miles wide, the limits extending 25 miles to either side of the center route between connecting airports.

The air routes will be used as a working basis for "traffic control" regulations, which will include rules on flight altitude and "blind" flying.

These regulations, which will be issued in the next few days, will become effective August 15.

Mississippi counties and alarm in Tennessee.

Opportunity for Test.

Widespread extent of the outbreak spreading rapidly since last month, provided him an opportunity to make conclusive tests of his nasal spray.

This week Dr. J. N. Baker, Alabama health commissioner, who is leading the fight against the disease here, sent instructions on use of the spray to all infected zones. The treatment may be a decisive factor in checking the deadly epidemic.

In tests conducted with animals, results were highly satisfactory. Previous experiments involving human beings have been inconclusive, since Armstrong could not take the rick of exposing humans to the deadly germs of paralysis.

Conclusive Proof Hoped.

With hundreds of adults and children exposed in the epidemic zones, however, a conclusive test of the spray's effectiveness appeared possible.

Basis of the spray is a sodium-alum, pieric acid solution, designed to block entry of the deadly paralysis virus to the spine and brain by blocking off the ends of the olefactory nerves.

Tonight wholesale druggists at Birmingham and Montgomery mixed great quantities of the compound to rush to the infected areas.

Springfield, Ill., July 14 (AP).—Eight new cases of infantile paralysis were reported during the last week, the highest recorded incidence in any one week up to this date since 1932, Public Health Director Frank J. Jirka said today.

Post Staff Candid Photos and Underwood & Underwood

$10,000 bail for a further hearing in two weeks.

Mopping his brow with a fresh handkerchief, Farnsworth complained of being ill and asked to be sent to the hospital for a few days. He was examined at the District Jail, but the physician decided that he was not in need of hospital treatment and committed him to the jail infirmary.

Throughout the afternoon he made no attempt to obtain a lawyer and refused to see or speak to newspapermen. He had no visitors, not even his estranged wife, Florence, at whose residence he was arrested by two Department of Justice agents early yesterday after more than a year's surveillance. None of their four children visited him.

Confers With Puleston.

At the Japanese Empassy, all knowledge of any person known as Farnsworth or of any Japanese naval officer supposed to have dealings with him were denied. Although it had been understood that no diplomatic representations were to be made to the Japanese government, it was learned that Capt. Tamon Yamaguchi, Japanese naval attache, conferred with Capt. William D. Puleston, chief of naval intelligence, at 10:30 a. m. yesterday.

Commander Bunjiro Yamaguchi, assistant Japanese naval attache, at first denied any such conference had taken place, but, on further questioning, said the Farnsworth matter was not discussed. Later in the afternoon, Capt. Yamaguchi, it was learned, played golf with Commander John Creighton, of the naval intelligence, at the Army and Navy Country Club.

While this golf game was going on two other Japanese naval officers conferred with other officers in the office of naval intelligence. This latter conference, it was understood, was concerned with the forthcoming visit to the East Coast of the Japanese cruiser squadron, now on its way to Cuba.

Cases Not Connected.

Whether Justice and Naval officials believe they are coping against a ring of spies was still uncertain last night. Hoover said he saw no connection between Thompson's arrest and that of Farnsworth, but replied "no comment" to the question of whether or not he believed Farnsworth had associates.

The recent refusal by the Navy Department to permit newspapermen and cameramen to accompany the fleet on its annual maneuvers and a general tightening up in the giving of information and interviews throughout the department, has generaly been interpreted as signifying that considerable confidential material has leaked out.

Only a few days ago Harry T. Thompson, of Baltimore, Md., a former yeoman of the Navy, was sentenced to 15 years in prison for selling naval secrets to a Japanese naval officer, who has since left the country. Hoover said he saw no connection between Thompson's arrest and that of Farnsworth.

Several hundred persons, including cameramen and newsreel photographers had gathered on the sidewalk before Commissioner Turnage's office yesterday when Farnsworth was driven up in a large touring car with New York license plates. He was neatly garbed in a dark gray suit with a pin stripe and was handcuffed to Chief Deputy United States Marshall Thomas Ott.

Sways Unsteadily.

As he alighted from the car the former naval officer covered his face with his hands. He swayed unsteadily when he entered the outer room of the commissioner's office and ran his hands up over his perspiring brow and through his graying hair.

For several minutes as he waited to be called he squirmed in the leather chair. He clasped and unclasped his hands, dabbed at his forehead with his handkerchief and occasionally glanced around the room.

In a moderate, evenly pitched tone, U. S. Attorney Roger Robb read the complaint, which was signed by Max Rosen, a Department of Justice agent, and charged that on or about May 15, 1935, he had sold a book entitled, "The Service of Information and Security," to an officer of the Japanese navy.

Naval officers described the volume as a book on tactics, containing confidential instructions on the scouting of airplanes and aircraft carriers, the disposition and maneuvering of ships and ship movements. Originally written in 1916 by Rear Admiral William S. Pye, the book has since been revised several times.

No Copy Is Missing.

The book, it was explained, can be obtained by any naval officer if he signs for it. As far as could be determined, no copy of the book is missing, but naval officers said they thought Farnsworth had managed to obtain the book long enough to make photostatic copies of the pages and to return it before it was missed.

Asked how he pleaded to the charge, Farnworth's voice trembled as he replied:

"I plead not guilty."

When Farnsworth said he would like to get a lawyer and have the case postponed, Commissioner Turnage ordered him held in $10,000 bail for a preliminary hearing July 29. Still shaking, the former officer pleaded with the commissioner to be sent to a hospital "for a couple of days."

"I'm all shot," he said. "I've been suffering from gastritis. I've lost 30 pounds in two days."

After the arraignment, seated in the outer office of the commissioner, waiting to be taken to the District Jail, Farnsworth tried to dismiss the charges as "a lot of hooey." Tugging nervously at his short, dark mustache, he said that several papers relating to naval matters had been stolen from his home in Chevy Chase "last July I believe" but that the papers stolen were his personal property.

He admitted having possession of a copy of the confidential naval publication which he was accused of having betrayed to the Japanese, but described it as "antiquated" and "of no use today and not even marked confidential."

Admits Conversations.

He admitted having spoken with representatives of the Chinese and Japanese governments at one time about the possibility of assisting them in reorganizing their aviation corps and also said that at intervals since he was dismissed from the service he had had dealings with the Japanese government as a representative of the United American Bosch Co. He denied, however, that he had any "intention of doing anything against my country."

"I was trying to build back my reputation destroyed by the court-martial. I had no intention of doing anything against my country," he said.

Shock to Officers.

News of Farnsworth's arrest came as a shock to many naval officers who knew him before he was court-martialed as a brilliant and popular officer and one of the Navy's most capable fliers. They recalled that because of his early promise as an officer, the Navy selected him for postgraduate instruction in aviation at both the Naval Academy and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and that at one time he was personal pilot to Theodore D. Robinson, the Assistant Secretary of Navy.

Born in Chicago on April 13, 1893, Farnsworth was appointed to Annapolis from the Second District of Ohio, through the influence of the late Speaker of the House Nicholas Longworth, in 1911, graduating in 1915. He served successively on board the U. S. S. Kansas, Michigan and Montana. In 1917 while with the Galveston in Asiatic waters he was taken ill and after preliminary treatment at the Naval Hospital at Yokohama, Japan, was returned to this country on sick leave.

He qualified as a naval aviator in 1921. The following year he took a postgraduate course in aeronautical engineering at Annapolis and the year after, at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He also served with the Bureau of Aeronautics here, at the Naval Aircraft Factory at Philadelphia and as commander of VO squadron Six, his last station before the court-martial.

Found Guilty in 1927.

On October 3, 1927, he was tried and found guilty on charges of violating regulations issued by the Secretary of the Navy and of "scandalous conduct tending to the destruction of good morals" in service. The first charge, officials said, was concerned with a debt he contracted with an enlisted man in violation of regulations, and the second charge with "inducements to perjury."

Although generally popular with fellow officers, Farnsworth was known as "a man who was fond of his drinks," care-free and a bit reckless. The Naval Academy yearbook of 1915 described him under the nickname of "Themer" as belonging "to that class of happy-go-lucky, carefree mortals whose ready smile and good nature makes them, above all, good comrades and desirable shipmates. Had he lived in the days of the old Navy, he would have been famous for desperate deeds and hairbreadth escapes. His daring and reckless conduct has been the utter despair of the executive department during his little four-year sojourn at the academy."

Married immediately after graduation, Farnsworth and his wife had four children, Patricia, Herbert, John and Fred. His wife yesterday said they hadn't been living together "for eight years" and that they had been divorced "for three years."

Will Not Visit Him.

Asked whether she intended to visit Farnsworth in jail, she replied, "No. I'm sick and tired of it all. I have nothing at all to do with the whole business."

She said that while Farnsworth was visiting her Monday morning, two Department of Justice agents came and took him to headquarters for questioning. Although the Department of Justice said the arrest was made early yesterday, she insisted Farnsworth had been arrested the day before.

For more than a year Farnsworth has moved in the shadow of the Federal agents and naval intelligence officers. For several years after his court-martial he dropped from sight, but soon began circulating among friends in the service. Slightly more than a year ago he was reported to have sought confidential information from the wife of another naval officer. Acting on this tip the Naval Intelligence section placed Farnsworth on the suspect list and asked the Department of Justice to investigate.

A frequent visitor to the Navy Department, Farnsworth claimed to be a free-lance writer doing special articles on naval matters for magazines and newspapers. He frequented the Naval Library and once, it was reported, was found ostensibly asleep over a library desk.

The section of the United States code which Farnsworth is accused of having violated—the same section on which Thompson was tried—fixes punishment on conviction of not more than 20 years. Had the Nation been at war the offense would have been punishable by death.

Declared "Irresponsible."

Cincinnati, July 14 (AP).—The parents of John S. Farnsworth, former Naval lieutenant commander charged with conveying a secret U. S. Naval pamphlet to Japan, declared tonight Farnsworth had been "irresponsible" since he was injured in an airplane crash at Pensacola, Fla., in 1922.

The couple, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Farnsworth, of nearby Norwood, said the one-time naval officer had been treated in a private sanitarium here following the crash.

Dr. Wilkinson To Head College In Takoma Park

Dr. Benjamin G. Wilkinson, dean of Washington Missionary College, Takoma Park, Md., and head of Columbia Union Conference of Seventh Day Adventists, yesterday was appointed president of the college at a meeting of the board of directors.

He succeeds Prof. Harbey A. Morrison, who recently was elected head of the educational department for the general conference. Coming to Takoma Park, Md., in 1900, Dr. Wilkinson served as chairman of the college board and Washington Sanitarium. He held the position of head of Columbia Conference for ten years. Before he came here he was in charge of the denominational work covering entire Europe and northern Africa, with headquarters in Paris. He now has some 40 schools throughout the Columbia Union under his jurisdiction. Although Dr. Wilkinson has been asked to serve as president of the college previously, he has always refused because of his many activities.

Queen Mary of England has written Dr. Wilkinson complimenting his writings. Dr. Wilkinson wrote several books on theology which the Queen read. He was one of the first preachers to broadcast over the radio. A few weeks ago Dr. Wilkinson returned from a six months' trip around the world, having done research work for the Columbia Union. While in China he narrowly escaped death in an airplane crash.

Dr. Wilkinson is a graduate of the University of Michigan where he received his A. B. and M. A. degrees. He also attended George Washington University, where he was given an M. A. degree. Born in Ontario, Dr. Wilkinson lived in North Dakota most of his boyhood life. He lives at 7120 Piney Branch road northwest, Takoma Park.

Hart, a Candidate For Congress, Dies

Hart was overcome by the heat Sunday afternoon while speaking at a National Union for Social Justice picnic.

Sanctions Lifted, Italy Lands Cargo in England

London (Wednesday) July 15 (AP). Great Britain lifted sanctions from Italy at midnight, and early today the first consignment of Italian produce—peaches and plums—landed at Harwich.

Simultaneous with the end of sanctions the new treasury order came into force under which all debts falling due after today with respect to Italian goods will be payable to the Bank of England for the account of the Anglo-Italian clearing office.

The Board of Trade announced the restoration of general export licenses permitting the sale of British-made explosives and aircraft to Italy.

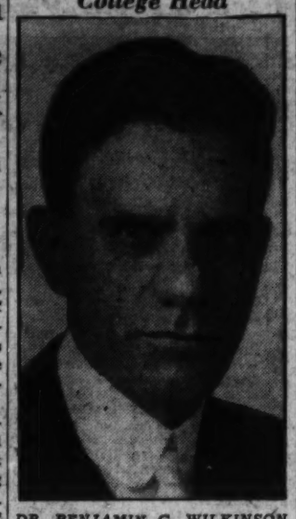
Deacons' Session Scheduled July 30

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 14.—Plans for the Deacons' Conference of the Winchester (Va.) Presbytery July 30 at Wardensville, W. Va., are being completed, Henry Moling, president of the association, has announced.

Dr. Robert A. Lapsley, jr., pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Roanoke, Va., will be the principal speaker. Sessions will be open to the public, but the program is planned especially for deacons, Moling said.

College Head



DR. BENJAMIN G. WILKINSON.

Extortion Charge Holds Two Youths

Baltimore, July 14 (AP).—A Federal grand jury indicted two youths for extortion under the "Lindbergh law" today. It was the first time the law has been invoked in Maryland.

The prisoners are Emmett Hallie Creighton, 20, and William Jerome Mowbray, jr., 18, both of Cambridge, Md. They were accused to demanding $100 from Mrs. Fletcher Williamson, daughter of Levi Phillips, wealthy Cambridge packer.

The indictment contained two counts—one charging them with depositing the extortion letter in the mail and the other charging them with causing it to be delivered.

The exact nature of the threats contained in the letter has not been made public. The letter instructed Mrs. Williamson to put the money, wrapped in a white handkerchief, at the foot of a telephone pole on the outskirts of Cambridge. The pole was to be marked by a white cloth tied around it.

Motorcyclist Jailed.

Waynesboro, Va., July 14.—For driving his motorcycle while intoxicated Hiram Kelley, of this city, was yesterday sentenced to 30 days in jail, ordered to pay court costs of $10.70, and had his driver's permit revoked for one year by Trial Justice W. Terrell Sheehan. Kelley was arrested Sunday by Police Capt. H. C. Simpson.

Dead Man's Words Used In Wife's Murder Trial

Chicago, July 14 (AP).—The words of a man now dead, "She got me, Doc," were quoted in criminal court today at the trial of Mildred Mary Bolton, 39, charged with murdering her husband, Joseph Bolton, jr., in his insurance office June 15.

Attempting to prove the auburn-haired defendant fired the shots which took Bolton's life, the State called Lincoln Knutson, an elevator operator, who said he saw Bolton lying on the floor, fatally wounded, with a pistol in his hand.

"What did he say?" asked Assistant State's Attorney Morris Myers.

"'Get Dr. Smith.' Then Mrs. Bolton came up and he said, 'don't let her get this.' (Referring to the gun) she got me, Doc. I guess I'm through . . . keep that woman away from me.'"

Deputies Spirit Attack Suspect AwayFromMob

By the United Press.

Anniston, Ala., July 14.—Roosevelt Collins, a strapping 25-year-old colored suspect, was arrested today by manhunters seeking the ravisher of a 25-year-old white woman, and spirited out of town while 1,500 muttering citizens packed a 10-block area surrounding the Anniston Jail.

Collins was hustled into a State highway patrol car, rushed toward Montgomery, Ala., and Kilby prison to prevent the possibility of outraged Alabamans taking the law into their own hands.

Sheriff's deputies said evidence discovered in Collins' home marked him as a suspect in the assault on Mrs. Lula Mae Hill, white, mother of three children.

The arrest came after streets of Anniston had surged with restless men for 24 hours while manhunters prowled through tangled vegitation of a woodland swamp in search of the attacker. After attacking Mrs. Hill, the man sought by officers wounded a posseman with a shotgun blast.

From the State Capitol at Montgomery, Gov. Bibb Graves ordered 50 more troops to augment the 200 already on duty here with the terse comment:

"We'll have no mob violence in Alabama."

Women Report 'Equal Rights' Fight Is Gaining

Miss Williams, of D.C., Tells Federation Rally of Campaign Work.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 14.—Progress in nearly every State in a movement to discourage discrimination against the participation of women in politics and civic and business life was reported today by Miss Charl Ormand Williams, of Washington, D. C., president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs.

"Reports from State chairmen were encouraging," she said in her report to the seventeenth annual meeting of the federation's board of directors.

State chairmen, she said, reported a large percentage of clubs working for qualified women for public office.

Plank Cited.

A plank submitted by the federation to both major political parties found expression in the Republican platform as follows, Miss Williams said:

"We are opposed to legislation which discriminates against women in Federal and State employment."

The Democratic Party, she said, did not include this plank in its platform, but party leaders promised to give attention to the matter of discrimination.

Miss Zoe Manning, of Tallahassee, Fla., said the Florida association had voted to sponsor legislation designed to clarify the legal status of women in the State.

Jury Duty.

"This proposed legislation," she said, "was designed to remove the penalty from marriage and permit a woman to be considered an intelligent human being whether married or single. It will also permit a woman to do jury duty and provides that no person, on account of sex, be disqualified from entering upon or pursuing any lawful business, vocation or profession, and men and women shall have equal rights in every way."

Mrs. Jessie Young, Shenandoah, Iowa, recommended that State federations demand appointment of one of their members to the State boards of Federal employment agencies so that "women's voices can be made more effective in employment projects."

Permit for Paint Plant Granted By Montgomery Commissioners

Action Taken at Rockville Meeting After President of Company Assures Opponents There Will Be No Noise or Odors.

A permit for establishment of a paint and varnish plant in the old shoe heel factory at Halpine was granted the Capital Varnish Works, Inc., of Washington, by the Montgomery County commissioners at Rockville yesterday.

Issuance of the permit was voted after Ray Ferguson, president of the concern, assured opponents of the plant that no objectionable odors or noise would result and that the building, which is to be remodeled, would not be converted to any other purpose.

It was stipulated by the commissioners that unless the plant operates without creating odors or noises that prove objectionable to residents of Halpine it will be voided.

Opposition to Plant.

Prior to the board's decision, Mrs. Joseph H. Bradley, Mrs. Charles W. Holmes, Harry Eaton, Mrs. R. Maude Hodgkins, Mrs. Eugene Ochsenreiter and Fred Bradley had signified their opposition to the plant. They were represented by Attorney Robert B. Peter, jr.

Walter W. Dawson, local attorney and owner of the land, reprsented Ferguson. The petitioner also was supported by John R. Sullivan.

The board deferred action on the application of Frank M. Heath, retired Army sergeant, of Silver Spring, for commercial rezoning of Lots 1, 2 and 3 of Sligo Terrace for the purpose of opening a tourist camp.

Heath said the condition of the 30-acre recreational area of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission, which opposed the rezoning, had made it impossible for him to dispose of the land for home sites and his only alternative would be to open the camp to realize a return on his investment.

Agrees to Postponement.

He agreed to the postponement of action on his petition pending efforts by the county commissioners to have the park body clean up the recreational area. In that event, he said, he probably will attempt to develop the land for residential purposes.

In its resolution opposing the rezoning the park commission declared the land, facing Sligo Creek Parkway, is off the main routes of tourist travel, the camp is not a development that would be desirable to the community and that it would be located in close proximity to the Montgomery Blair Senior High School.

The commissioners voted to rezone the property of William E. Smith, along River road, near Friendship Heights, to permit the establishment of a store. The property is located close by other commercial property and the application was approved by the Park and Planning Commission.

A request from the North Chevy Chase citizens' committee for a reduction of the speed limit from 45 to 25 miles an hour along a portion of Connecticut avenue was received and referred to State authorities.

Lives Endangered.

It was pointed out in a letter from Mrs. G. Kenworthy, secretary of the committee, that a large number of pedestrians use the avenue and their lives are endangered by the lack of adequate sidewalks and the prevailing high speed limit.

The strip in which the lower rate is sought starts from a point 200 feet north of Chevy Chase Lake to a point 200 feet north of the intersection of Connecticut avenue and Jones Bridge road.

Mrs. J. Guy Neel, secretary of the Seven Oaks Manor Citizens Association, wrote the boards asking that the street markers in that subdivision be repainted and replaced wherever necessary.

Warning Signs Urged.

She also declared that the safety of children in that community made it advisable for proper signs warning motorists of the presence of children at play should be erected at the intersection of Clark and Franklin avenues, Brookside drive and Franklin avenue, Toll House road and Kingsbury drive.

Request for improvements along the road leading south from Martinsburg to the Potomac River was made in a letter from M. B. Hale.

The board was requested to attend the meeting of the County Commissioners Association of the Western Shore of Maryland at Frederick on July 23. The meeting will be held at the Francis Scott Key Hotel at 1 p. m.

S. Mason Hill, of Cumberland, secretary of the association, advised the board that plans would be discussed for a legislative program to be placed before the 1937 session of the Maryland General Assembly convening in January.

Senate Air Report Assailed by Roper

The recent report of the Senate Sub-Committee on Air Safety, accusing the Bureau of Air Commerce of politics and favoritism and holding it responsible for the airplane accident in which Senator Bronson Cutting was killed, was criticized sharply yesterday by Secretary of Commerce Roper.

"Glaring factual errors and serious misrepresentations exist in the committee's statements," the Secretary cnarged as he left Washington for New York, where he is to board a steamer to Europe.

Roper said he had instructed his subordinates to prepare a detailed analysis of the Senate committee's report which was read into the Congressional Record at the closing session of Congress by Senator Royal S. Copeland, chairman of the sub-committee. This analysis is to be submitted to the Senate commitee "as quickly as possible."

President Allots Fund For Religious Census

Secretary of Commerce Roper was notified yesterday that the President had arranged for allocation of funds with which the Census Bureau will take the 1936 census of religious bodies.

Since 1906 the Bureau has taken a similar census at two-year intervals and, the Secretary said, there has always been a wide demand for the reports. William L. Austin, director of the Bureau, will be in charge of the census.

Townsend Convention

movement started by the late Senator Huey P. Long, of Louisiana, read the announcement of the revision to newsmen as Dr. Townsend stood nearby.

Earlier in the day Townsend outlined some of his political and economic views in a series of press conferences.

A half-dozen of his advisers sat about him as he talked. Frequently he called upon them for scientific information, his voice rising impatiently if they did not answer promptly.

Unicameral Plan Backed.

Dr. Townsend and his advisers advocated a one-house Congress, smaller in membership than the present 435 in the House of Representatives, the members to be chosen by town and neighborhood group meetings.

He said "partyism" is "un-American and undemocratic," predicted a working majority of Townsend supporters in the next House of Representatives and a gain in the Senate.

Representative William L. Lemke, the Union Party candidate for President, Townsend said, has been invited to serve on the organization's board of directors, but has not yet given his decision.

Whether the organization will support Lemke for the Presidency, Townsend said, rests with convention delegates. Already 9,000 have registered.

Against Landon, Roosevelt.

While he felt a third party would have little chance of electing a President, Townsend said of the Democratic and Republican parties: "I will never vote for Roosevelt and I will never vote for Landon. I don't know who I'll vote for, but I would rather vote for a Socialist than either of them and the Lord knows I'm not a Socialist."

The first day's session will be given over to opening formalities, and a keynote speech by Otto A. Case, a member of the board of directors and State treasurer for Washington.

The first session ends at noon. In the afternoon, Dr. Townsend will deliver his message and officers will make reports.

Dr. Gerald L. K. Smith, of Louisiana, who describes himself as the "head man" of the Huey Long share-the-wealth clubs, is on the afternoon program for a discussion of Dr. Townsend's walk-out on a Congressional investigating committee.

The title is "Loyalty to Leadership," but Smith said:

"I will discuss this communistic New Deal that has been set up in Washington and which expresses itself in the persecution of Dr. Townsend."

Will Back Marland.

Oklahoma City, July 14 (AP).—The State Executive Board of Oklahoma Townsend Clubs threw its support today behind Gov. E. W. Marland in the Democratic senatorial runoff primary July 28. He is opposed by Representative Josh Lee.

Stamp May Bear Anthony Bust By Artist Here

The bust, which Miss Anthony designated as "the best one that has ever been made of me," stands in Miss Johnson's Garden Gallery of historic personages at her studio at 230 Maryland avenue northeast. A similar oust is in the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York.

Miss Johnson's studies of Miss Anthony have been highly praised by critics. One is reproduced on the Bulletin published in Paris by the International Council of Women, distributed in 52 nations.

Miss Johnson's bust of Miss Anthony emphasizes both the strength and the spirituality of the suffrage pioneer. The sculptor describes it as expressing "the entire life of Miss Anthony."

Maryland to Give 11 Tests for Jobs

Baltimore, July 14 (AP).—The State Employment Commissioner will hold a series of 11 examinations for State jobs during the rest of July.

Harry C. Jones, employment commissioner, said the largest of these tests would be for junior and senior typists and stenographers. These examinations are open only to residents of Maryland counties. The jobs are with the county boards of welfare.

The closing times for applications for the examinations has passed, Col. Jones said, and no more applications will be received.

The first test will be held in Baltimore on July 24 for persons living in the central counties. Other examination places and dates are: July 25, Salisbury; July 3, Hagerstown; July 31, Leonardtown; August 1, Chestertown.

Navy Will Send Weather Expert On Hindenburg

Report of Reichelderfer May Influence Action on U. S. Dirigible.

Lieut. Comdr. Francis W. Reichelderfer, one of the Navy's outstanding aerological experts, was assigned yesterday as an official Navy observer on board the giant German dirigible, Von Hindenburg.

With him as observers on the Zeppelin's flight to Germany and back to this country will be Lieuts. M. D. Flaherty and Gerald D. Zurmuehlin. Zurmuehlin has already completed one trip on the Hindenburg as an observer.

Formerly head of the aerology section of the Bureau of Aeronautics, Commander Reichelderfer was one of the first naval officers to study the "air mass" analysis method of forecasting weather conditions that was developed in Norway after the war. It was largely on the basis of a report that he submitted that the aerology section of the Bureau of Aeronautics was organized and the old methods of weather forecasting dropped.

His report on "weather handling" of the Zeppelin on its trip is expected to be of considerable importance in the Navy's decision, soon to be formulated, whether it will sponsor the construction of a new giant airship to replace the fil-fated Macon and Akron.

Windstorm Damages Pennsylvania Crops

Harrisburg, Pa., July 14 (AP).—A heavy windstorm of gale-like proportions tore across sections of central Pennsylvania late today damaging buildings and crops and blowing down trees and poles.

Firemen reported 18 buildings damaged at Hummelstown.

Several narrow escapes from death or injury were reported.

The steel framework of the uncompleted high school gymnasium at Middletown was blown down.

Parole Board Still Hampered, Says Chairman

La Roe Cites Inadequate Staff, Funds in Report to Commissioners.

The staff, facilities and funds of the District Parole Board are still "inadequate," Wilbur La Roe, jr., chairman, said yesterday.

In a report of the board's activities to the District Board of Commissioners, he said:

"The results (of our work) do not satisfy us. Our staff and facilities are still inadequate. We are still without funds."

"But we are making progress."

The plea for funds came in an analysis of the board's work which showed a total of 59 men had been paroled from Lorton Reformatory in the last half-year.

Forty-three men were honorably discharged from parole by expiration of their terms, and 15 paroles were revoked, the figures showed. Of the 15, seven were for violation of rules, four were for committing misdemeanors and four were for committing felonies.

"During the period," the letter read, "we acted on 289 applications, denying 185 and granting 104. Many of these granted were for a period of only 60 or 30 days prior to the expiration of the term, to aid the prisoner in readjustment under parole supervision.

"Of the paroles under our supervision approximately 5 per cent were convicted on some new offense. The record of approximately 90 per cent of the men was perfect during this period. The parole board found jobs for practically all of these men.

"We also had under our jurisdiction during this period an average of 124 men whom we did not parole, and that is to say, men who had been denied parole but who were released at the end of their sentence minus allowance for good behavior. These men are made by law subject to our jurisdiction during the remainder of their maximum sentences. These men did not commit new felonies, 17 of them committed new misdemeanors and 9 violated the conditions of their release, making a total of 35 failures in this group of 124 men as compared with 15 failures in the larger group of 145 paroled men.

Bethesda Road Bid Rejected as High

Baltimore, July 13 (AP).—The State roads commission today announced it had rejected all bids for the improvement of Wisconsin avenue between Bethesda and the District line.

Dr. Homer E. Tabler, chairman of the commission, said the bids were turned down because all were too high, amounting to more than the estimated cost of the work. The project calls for paving the central part of the two-lane road, where car tracks were formerly. The paving will be of concrete over a 1.89 distance.

A MINIATURE GUARD over gin flavor is the "pilot" still where Hiram Walker tests each gin formula by a complete trial run. This double-check by test run insures the flavor being absolutely right.

CALL THIS A DIFFERENCE?
Yet it's no greater than the difference between old-fashioned and modern methods of distilling—and between various brands of gin. You certainly can taste the finer flavor in Hiram Walker's Gin, the only gin in the world distilled by the Controlled Condensation process.

MONDAY TO SATURDAY, ANY YEAR
Hiram Walker's Gin is always the same. Gin ingredients vary in flavor strength from month to month, according to soil and sunlight. Hiram Walker's Controlled Condensation process measures and compensates for such variations in each distillation formula.

HARD TO BALANCE

Early AAA Pay To Dry States' Farms Studied

Committee Considers Fall Benefits; Tugwell Off on Western Survey.

By the Associated Press.

AAA sources disclosed yesterday that part payment of soil conservation benefits to farmers in officially designated drought counties might be made during the early fall, well in advance of the December date previously planned.

The interdepartmental committee correlating Federal drought activities was said authoritatively to have discussed advance payments to supplement a $3,000,000 fund made available by President Roosevelt for WPA employment in the 12 drought States and 29 others.

During its session the committee also prepared a survey of feed supplies available to the 325 drought counties given emergency rating, and perfected plans for government loans to small producers for moving livestock into grazing lands and feedlots.

At Resettlement headquarters Administrator Rexford G. Tugwell planned to leave by airplane tonight for Bismarck, N. Dak., to assume personal charge of drought relief activities. He was to be accompanied by his assistant, Joseph L. Bailey.

Williams, assistant WPA administrator, who had planned to accompany Tugwell, canceled the trip last night because of the pressure of business here.

Chester C. Davis, former AAA chief, originally proposed that the soil conservation payments be made in the fall, and Howard O. Tolley, present administrator, subsequently said the bulk of the payments would not be made before December.

Spokesmen said it also was planned at first to make all payments at one time, based on a full check of compliance.

During the last several weeks, however, the AAA was reported to have received numerous requests that payment of at least the major benefits in those areas where farmers would be in need of funds to meet fall expenses be speeded up.

Major benefits, described by AAA as the "No. 1 payments," averaging $10 an acre for shifting land from soil-depleting to soil-conserving crops. The secondary benefits represent the Government's share of the cost, roughly 50 per cent, incurred in soil-building practices such as the planting of improved types of clover.

In the Western grain lands the farmer was permitted benefits on but 15 per cent of his base avreage. Thus, a farmer who normally seeded 100 acres of wheat, corn, oats and the small grains, would be entitled to primary payments of $150 if he retired his full acreage quota at $10 an acre.

Average $10 an Acre.

The majority of designated drought counties are in the grain States, although large blocks have been added to the list in the cotton-producing States of Georgia, South Carolina and Oklahoma. Cotton farmers were entitled to retire as much as 35 per cent of their base acreage, bringing soil conservation benefits there to approximately $350 on every 100 acres under compliance.

Some of the drought counties are in the tobacco and peanut growing areas where 30 per cent of the base acreage in tobacco was eligible for retirement and 20 per cent of the peanut acreage.

$3,000,000 Earmarked.

Announcement that the President had earmarked an additional $3,000,000 of 1935 emergency relief act funds for WPA jobs was made by Harry L. Hopkins, administrator.

Later he allotted $1,500,000 of it to the Soil Conservation Service to start drought relief projects in North Dakota, South Dakota, Montana, Wyoming, Minnesota, Kentucky, Tennessee, Virginia, South Carolina, Georgia, Missouri and Oklahoma.

The money, he said, will be paid out in wages to drought-distressed farmers employed on soil erosion work, flood control, forestation and recreational developments.

Officials said work projects would be undertaken in virtually all the 385 counties now designated for emergency treatment, with perhaps 40 projects starting immediately in the Dakotas, Montana and Wyoming.

Varied Types of Work.

Employment, they said, would be offered in the construction of dams, reservoirs, water diversion ventures, preparation of meadow waterways, cleaning and developing natural springs, planting forage crops in contour strips or along terraces, and in preparing land for the seeding of terraced crops for cultivation.

The interdepartmental drought committee, announced a Government sheep-purchasing program will be started this week in southwestern North Dakota. The sheep, officials said, will be purchased from farmers without feed, shipped and resold to feeders in the northeastern part of the State.

Funds to finance the movement of sheep, it was announced, will be provided by the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation and the North Dakota State Welfare Board. If the plan proved successful it was expected to be placed on an interstate basis and used for the movement of cattle.

Rains Moving Eastward.

Chicago, July 14 (AP).—Rain and cool weather traveled eastward tonight to end the North Central States' 12-day siege of torridness, heat deaths and crop losses.

As it sped, one private estimate of economic loss from drought damage to crops disclosed an aggregate of $1,000,000,000 to spring wheat, small grains, corn, forage, livestock and dairying in the Northwest and to Dixie's cotton and other acres.

Suggestions for future provision against disaster included one by National Master Louis J. Taber, of the National Grange. He told a Rochester, N. Y., interviewer that Federal crop insurance protection should be arrang d for dry farm regions.

The race between the cool front and crop deterioration attracted close attention on the Chicago Board of Trade. Corn prices there were lower, indicating traders' belief that a halt to damage would materialize. September delivery of corn closed 1⅞ to 2½ cents down at 79⅞ to 80½.

Estimate Billion Loss.

Private estimators calculated that despite the advancing relief, heat and drought had taken a billion-dollar crop damage bite. Department of Agriculture statisticians, however, declined to make any dollar basis computations for losses.

The statement of Secretary Wallace that no food shortage is imminent attracted considerable notice. But milk price advances in scattered cities and a hike of 1 cent in the price of the nickel loaf of bread in Los Angeles were reported as due to the drought.

Two large distributors here announced today a 1-cent a quart increase in milk prices. This makes their retail price 12 cents, effective Thursday.

Other distributors were expected to follow suit in conformity with the agreement between the principal producers and distributors organizations allowing a 50-cent boost to farmers. This makes the return to farmers, $2.08 per hundredweight.

The raise was ascribed to the drought.

At Lincoln, Nebr., milk prices were lifted 1 cent a quart for the same reason, effective today. The price has been 10 cents.

At Sheridan, Wyo., cattle trails toward market were crowded with shipments. Cattlemen said the moisture would bring little permanent relief from drought. A WPA representative in South Dakota said common misfortune in the drought and desire to prevent its recurrence had led cattlemen and sheepmen, traditional foes of the range, to bury the hatchet and work together for water conservation.

rail and highway traffic in Northeastern Montana.

Breeze in Michigan.

Michigan was blessed with a 20-mile breeze from Lake Huron, a breeze which forced the mercury down at Port Huron, Saginaw and Bay City, where all-time highs had been established the day before.

Detroit's top was 103.

Sorrowing crowds still packed the morgue, which was taxed to capacity with its heat wave dead, but the rain was falling within 50 miles of the city, and was expected to reach there hourly.

At Eliose Hospital three additional deaths among the aged and infirm brought the toll among the old folk to 93 since last Wednesday. When County Auditor Edward H. Williams found himself unable to purchase electric fans for the hospital, he confiscated a shipment in the Detroit railroad yards.

In many parts of the drought area the rainfall was greeted by citizens. Some South Dakota towns turned out almost to a citizen and offered thanks for the showers, which splattered on sunbaked roofs and seared roadways.

Boys and girls waded in mud puddles, and domestic animals flocked to suddenly swelling creeks for water. Here and there in the orchard country of the Central West, where the rain was heavy enough, bits of dried leaves and dried fruit fell in miniature seas of mud.

With its usual tolerance of heat waves, Washington perspired, but its toll was slight yesterday as it waited to get its share of the rain.

Esther H. Langbone, 22, of Fort Wayne, Ind., a sightseer, collapsed at 700 Jackson place northwest. She was taken to Emergency Hospital.

Two others felt the effects of the sun. They were Gilbert Long, 25, of Arlington, Va., and Lucille Minor, 15, of Arlington, who also were taken to Emergency. Neither is in a critical condition.

Thus far 10 have died from prostration or drowning in Washington and nearby Virginia.

Boston Mayor Boomed For Seat in U. S. Senate

Boston, July 14 (AP).—A close political ally of Mayor Frederick W. Mansfield of Boston tonight said papers were being circulated for Mansfield as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator. The announcement came from City Assessor David B. Shaw.

The mayor is in Europe on vacation. If he enters the race he will oppose Gov. James M. Curley for the Democratic nomination to the seat now held by Senator Marcus A. Coolidge (Democrat), Clinton. Coolidge, away on vacation, has not announced his plans.

Violence Flares Anew In Dallas Taxi Strike

Dallas, Tex., July 14 (AP).—Violence flared anew today in Dallas' recently broken taxicab strike.

A downtown gun battle and the severe beating of two drivers prompted Police Chief Robert Jones to threaten to "put the whole force" into action to stop what he termed "gangster methods."

Five men were arrested and charged with assault, growing out of the slugging of G. E. Harrison and W. G. Crader, cab drivers.

No persons connected with strike violence ever will be granted a license to drive a cab in the city, Chief Jones said

La Plata Area Crops Damaged by Storm

Special Dispatch to The Post.

La Plata, Md., July 14.—Hail seriously damaged crops in this vicinity Sunday. The storm, which was preceded by a high wind, was felt only in a narrow path the length of Charles County.

The hail shredded growing crops and in some instances stripped corn and tobacco stalks. Several farmers lost their entire crops, and the damage is believed to be near $100,000.

Milk Shortage Fears Slight at Cumberland

Cumberland, Md., July 14 (AP).—A "slight possibility" of a milk shortage confronted this city, beset today by a new flare-up of the heat wave.

The temperature climbed to 107 degrees at 3 p. m., but a west wind brought a 100-degree reading at 4 p. m. Overcast skies gave rise to hopes the section might receive its long-needed rain soon.

Dr. Joseph P. Franklin, health officer, said the drought had brought a "slight possibility" of a milk shortage, but there was no immediate danger. He explained local dairies and pasteurizing plants had asked permission to obtain milk from farms other than those regularly supplying them, because the farmers had reported a shortage of water and grass was reducing their yield of milk.

Theft Suspects Held.

Chambersburg, Pa., July 14.—Lured to a lonely spot on the outskirts of town Sunday by two young men who, he said, promised to take him where they could get liquor, Thomas Flory, 43, of Chambersburg, R. D. 1, was beaten and robbed of $17. Flory identified his assailants as Ralph Stoner, 27, and Robert Kemp, 26, both of this place. Stoner and Kemp denied the charge. Charles of felonious assault and robbery were filed against the pair by Police Chief H. S. Byers.

Windstorm Rocks Town.

Tupelo, Miss., July 14 (AP).—Tupelo, scene of a disastrous tornado last April which cost 231 lives, was struck early today by a windstorm that unroofed several buildings and caused undetermined property damage. The storm was accompanied by lightning and thunder. It lasted about 30 minutes. No one was reported injured.

Ex-Actress Loses Suit To Remain Beall's Aid

Mineola, N. Y., July 14 (AP).—Red-headed Patricia Reynolds, former actress, lost her right to be secretary to Charles W. Beall, 65-year-old retired banker and collector of wild animals, when he denied her charge today that he was prisoner of Ninon Bunyea, another former actress.

Beall, appearing in county court on an order obtained by Miss Reynolds, who complained she was barred from his estate Saturday and that he was being "restrained" by Miss Bunyea, had a black eye. But neither he nor four bodyguards with him would explain how it happened. Under the court's decision, Miss Bunyea, a brunette, retains her position as Beall's secretary which she had surrendered temporarily to Miss Reynolds while appearing as a "tiger woman" in a film.

Civil War Near As Rebel Army Rallies in China

War Lords of Southwest Gird for Battle With Nanking Adherents.

By the United Press.

Hong Kong, July 14.—Rebellious troops, commanded by southwest war lords demanding war with Japan and the overthrow of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, Nanking government dictator, mobilized for civil strife today.

The southwest political council and the executive councils of Kwantung and Kwangsi provinces, both ordered dissolved by the central executive committee of the Kuomintang (National Peoples Party), met in joint session and elected Gen. Chen Chi-Tang, Canton overlord, commander in chief of the armed forces of the southwest. The action was a direct slap at Nanking's order that Chen he replaced by Gen. Yu Han-Mou, follower of the generalissimo.

War Plans Under Way.

Preparations for immediate hostilities were launched with reports that Nanking had ordered Yu to attack Kwangtung. His troops already are on the border of Kwangtung. He flew from Nanking to take command in the field with the intention of fighting his way to his new post at Canton, Chen Chi-Tang's stronghold.

With indications that Yu's forces would advance at once from Tayu, commanders at Canton dug trenches and built barbed-wire defenses on the outskirts of the city.

All available troops were rushed northward to meet the threat of Chiang's forces. The Nanking troops were expected to drive simultaneously into Kwangtung and Kwangsi provinces.

Chiang Rejected Offer.

Canton reports indicated the issue was joined when Chiang Kai-shek, given a mandate to make war on Kwangtung and Kwangsi by the C. E. C., Telegraphed Chen Chi-Tang and Gen. Li Tsung-Jen and Gen. Pai Tsung-Hsi, Kwangsi commanders, asking them to "take a trip to a foreign country."

He announced he had appointed Yu Han-Mou to be pacification commissioner of Kwangtung, and Huang Shao-Hung, now governor of Chekiang Province, to the same post in Kwangsi.

The ousted generals said they would remain at their posts until the end, pursuing a policy of armed resistance to Japanese aggression as well as to the Nanking dictator.

Mrs. Dill Files Plea.

Spokane, Wash., July 14 (AP).—Rosalie Jones Dill filed motions in superior court today to obtain restoration of her maiden name and compel her husband, former Senator Clarence C. Dill, of Washington, to turn over certain personal property he holds.

The premier urged the Left to repeat the pledge it made when the Popular Front was formed—to remain ever united, to foil intrigue which sow suspicion and reap division.

Blum cautioned his followers not to go too fast. He indicated that strikers no longer should resort to occupation of factories. He urged that precipitate action by the workers would make the task of the Government impossible and would cause the Popular Front to crumble.

During the military review, United States Ambassador Jesse Isidor Straus fainted. He was removed to his residence at the American Embassy, where his physician announced that his condition was not serious and that he was in no danger.

The first disorders of the day were not serious. The police prefect announced three arrests in the Champs Elysees following the military review.

Police restored order and crowds thinned on the Champs Elysees late in the day.

Heavy guards were to be maintained throughout the Champs Elysees district until midnight.

Observers, reviewing the events of the day, considered that the Paris proletariat gave an imposing display of the power of the masses as warning to their Fascist opponents.

Three Slain in Spain.

Madrid, July 14 (AP).—Three persons were slain and 13 wounded in new outbursts of Spanish political passion today.

Two lost their lives and six were wounded in clashes between Assault Guards and Fascists returning from the funeral of Jose Calvo Sotelo, kidnaped and killed early Monday by men in the uniforms of Assault Guards.

One worker was killed and seven wounded in fights between striking Syndicalists and Socialists in the Cuatro Camino section of Madrid.

Congress and strategic points of the capital were heavily guarded. Observers feared the political repercussions of the Calvo Sotelo assassination might be serious, since Republican members of the Popular Front were much disturbed by a possible slip in the Left coalition.

To add to the government's troubles, 60,000 coal miners in Asturias threatened to resume their strike Saturday unless they get the back pay which they have been promised.

Dardanelles Pact Held Up by Britain

Montreaux, Switzerland, July 14 (AP).—A British warning against "undue optimism" as to a Dardanelles accord created an impression tonight that Great Britain has not approved certain decisions of its Montreaux delegation.

The outstanding difficulty, it was understood, concerned the rights of belligerents to send warships through the straits to the Black Sea.

A Russo-British compromise, written by Joseph Paul-Boncour, the French delegate, was submitted to the British government. Under it, the British were reported to have acceded to freedom of passage for Russian warships in time of peace while accepting limited freedom for the British navy.

Agreement was reported reached on other points of a Dardanelles convention with the exception of the British proposal for continuance of a form of the present straits commission and Russia's demand that states in the Dardanelles area be free to send warships through the straits to aid anyone of their number who might be the victim of agression.

Newsboys to See Fight Film Today

About 400 Washington Post carriers will be the guests of Sidney Lust, manager of the Cameo Theater, Mount Rainier, Md., and their own newspaper today at 4 p. m. for the showing of the pictures of the Schmeling-Louis fight.

The youths will journey to the theater in automobiles and buses, and view the film in a group. Use of the theater has been extended to the carriers by Mr. Lust.

4-Power Pact Called Solution To Ills Abroad

Britain Declared to Believe France-Reich Accord Is Essential.

By the Associated Press.

London, July 14.—A four-power pact between Great Britain, France, Italy and Germany cropped up again as a possible solution for Europe's problems today.

While Britain moved to postpone this week's Brussels Locarno conference pending efforts to obtain co-operation of Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini from the outset, informed sources said the government believed reconciliation of Franco-German divergencies, with Germany on an equal footing, was a prime necessity for the peace of Europe.

These sources also assumed Mussolini could not afford to be left out if such an agreement with Berlin were reached.

The British were understood to be persisting in this attitude despite French claims that any four-power negotiation should be preceded by a meeting of British, French and Belgians to record the failure of Rhineland negotiations.

It also was reported France feared a four-power pact would alienate Russia and nullify the Franco-Soviet mutual assistance agreement.

Authoritative quarters in Brussels threw no light on the question of when the Locarno powers are likely to meet. Officials stated Premier Paul van Zeeland, who called the conference originally for Thursday, was waiting for British and French views and for Italy's formal answer to the Locarno invitation.

On The Statute Books.

The importance of the Federal Circuit Court decision ordering the Associated Press to reinstate a discharged employe appears to be twofold. The suit was the first direct test of the constitutionality of the national labor relations act and the underlying principle of collective bargaining was upheld unanimously by the three judges in New York. Of further interest is the fact that the Associated Press immediately sent to all its members the unvarnished story of its discomfiture.

In other recent cases the circuit courts have been asked to pass on the applicability of the act in cases pressed by the board. It has been ruled that employes engaged in purely productive jobs, whether or not their employers enter otherwise into interstate commerce, do not come within the purview of the board.

In the case of the Associated Press, however, the argument turned primarily on the constitutionality of the act. The press association had appealed a ruling of the National Labor Relations Board that the discharge of an employe who was a member of the American Newspaper Guild was "unlawful." The court found first that the act was fairly based on the commerce clause of the Constitution and that it did not interfere with the "due process" provisions of the Fifth Amendment. Having determined that the employe was directly engaged in interstate commerce the court declared the board to be acting within its powers in interposing to guarantee him his rights to bargain collectively. Of course, the opinion noted, the employer "remains the master of the operation of his business."

Eventually some case under the national labor relations act will come before the Supreme Court for a final opinion. In view of the court's adverse verdict on the Guffey coal act, the outlook for sustaining constitutionality is none too bright. Its supporters pin their hopes largely on the argument that whereas the coal act undertook to regulate mining in explicit detail, the labor relations act aims only to avoid industrial strife without regard for hours, wages or prices.

But whatever the Supreme Court's ruling, the New York decision is a useful reminder that this legislation is on the statute books, to be regarded as constitutional until authoritatively declared otherwise. The action of the Associated Press in promptly broadcasting the order adverse to its case could with advantage be observed as an example by any employers who are disposed to be critical of this law on grounds of policy as distinct from constitutionality.

Mr. Blanton Woos The Voters.

It is not surprising that so much interest is being shown here in the contest between Representative Thomas L. Blanton and Judge Clyde L. Garrett for the Democratic Congressional nomination in the Seventeenth District of Texas. Ordinarily Washingtonians give little attention to the political difficulties encountered by members of Congress in seeking re-election. In this case, however, local residents could not possibly remain aloof without also manifesting indifference to the most acute municipal problems of their own city.

Theoretically, of course, Mr. Blanton is the representative of some 240,000 persons living in 12 counties of central Texas. Actually, far too large a portion of his time is devoted to complicating the problems of the District of Columbia. His self-imposed dictatorship in local affairs completely overshadows his activities in behalf of his own constituency. And it cannot be said that sorrow would be the predominant note in these parts should the primary on July 25 put an end to what is commonly called "Blantonism" in the District government.

It would be much more logical to have Mr. Blanton stand for election in the District of Columbia. Since that would be impossible, as well as highly undesirable for the Congressman, the District will content itself with hoping that the true story of Mr. Blanton's activities here will be told in Abilene and surrounding territory. Presumably the Congressman's record in this respect is one reason for Judge Garrett's declaration in favor of the preservation of local self-government.

Normally it would be unnatural for the people of the District to take sides in the choice of any candidate by a party primary. But there is nothing normal in the case of the Congressman who has set himself up as a little Hitler for the Capital City. It is for Mr. Blanton's constituents to decide whether his attempt to boss the voteless District is the most important function of the representative they send to Congress. But if they need help in making up their minds there is plenty of evidence, such as the notorious questionnaire to local teachers, which Washingtonians would be glad to furnish for unbiased consideration.

All Out Of Step But Stanley.

The address delivered before the Public Affairs Institute of the University of Virginia by Stanley Reed is significant chiefly because of his position as Solicitor General of the United States. Mr. Reed's appeal was, properly enough, for a liberal interpretation of the Constitution. But some of the arguments he used convey the impression that he utterly misconstrues the function which the charter of 1787 plays in American government.

"Surely the founding fathers," said Mr. Reed, " . . . could not have intended their Government to be helpless in the emergencies of today." That much is obvious. From this general platitude, however, he proceeded to the conclusion that the organic law "is a living, vital institution whose function is to guide and not to curb necessary governmental processes." In more direct language this appears to mean that the Constitution should be conveniently ignored every time a new problem arises involving the division of governmental powers.

Nothing stands out more plainly from the Constitution itself than the fact that those who drafted it intended to establish a government of laws, as distinguished from a government dominated by men. Of course they did not expect the Government in 1936 to be helpless in the midst of complicated problems totally unforeseen in 1787. But they did insist that every Administration operating under the authority of the charter they framed should seek its objectives through constitutional means. And they certainly provided that the Constitution should be amended, rather than chloroformed, in order to keep it abreast of modern conditions.

The provisions in the organic law for a government of checks and balances are so clear as to be unmistakable. If that system is to be preserved it is essential that there should be judicial check on what Mr. Reed euphemistically calls "necessary governmental processes." To relax constitutional restraints under our dual system of government would speedily give rise first to intolerable chaos and then to a dictatorship. Such loose talk from the Solicitor General is cause for serious reflection upon the course the Administration might take if it were free of the restraining influence of the Supreme Court.

The question also arises as to whether Mr. Reed was voicing the opinion of the Administration of which he is a part when he declared that the Constitution is not a "code of laws" written to meet specific conditions, but merely "a statement of principles." If that is the attitude of the Department of Justice, it certainly goes a long way toward explaining the misfortunes of the New Deal in the courts.

For the courts, as well as the people, still accept at face value the declaration within the organic law that "this Constitution, and the laws of the United States which shall be made in pursuance thereof; and all treaties made, or which shall be made, under the authority of the United States, shall be the supreme law of the land . . ."

Off For The Olympics.

The American Olympic team—the largest ever to represent the United States—sets sail today from New York in what may be described as a sea-going gymnasium.

On the top deck of the liner bearing most of the 395 athletes to Germany, a 200-yard track has been constructed so that the runners' muscles will not go soft. The ship's pool has special apparatus to keep even the distance swimmers in condition. The University of Washington crew will find rowing machines installed. A 65-foot cage will allow pentathlon entrants to keep their arms limber. And many other special arrangements, even down to the provision of particular foods to suit each trainer's diet, have been made for the contingent which will represent the United States at Berlin.

When it is considered that this is only a part of the elaborate outlay needed to produce an Olympic team—that hundreds of expensive athletic plants throughout the country were required to develop the successful candidates as well as the thousands of less able athletes against whom they sharpened their superiority—the question arises as to whether modern sports have not been overdone. Some reassurance may be found in the fact that even the first Olympic competitors of 2,000 years ago were similarly pampered. If custom is any criterion, lavish expenditures for athletics are justified.

The ruins at Olympia on the Peleponnesus bear witness. Aside from temples and treasure houses, extensive remains of a gymnasium, hippodrome, visitors' house and training quarters have been uncovered. So careful were the excavations that a fair picture of the original scene may still be had. And it is noteworthy that much careful and presumably costly effort went into the construction of the athletic buildings. The Spartans, the Elians and later the Romans spared no expense on their best runners and hurlers.

Such expenditure is not wasted today. At the moment, sports pages are filled with accounts of the champions' prowess. The rest of the year, however, the columns deal mainly with the endeavors of less famous athletes. Though only a small minority of these will ever come close to an Olympic berth, all are pointing toward one. The glamour of the Olympics is one of the incentives that keep hundreds of thousands of boys and girls throughout the country striving to improve and develop themselves. The cost of entering the United States in the games once every four years is not merely relatively trivial. Those who make the requisite voluntary contributions may also be sure that it is a good investment in clean living.

Drought And The AAA.

Secretary Wallace has done well to scotch alarmist propaganda concerning a shortage of food as a result of the drought. Some reports of crop destruction appear to have been greatly exaggerated. Speculators have taken advantage of the prolonged dry and hot weather in various agricultural areas to boost their own profits. Undoubtedly the picture of desolation and distress in the "dust bowl" has been painted blacker than it really is.

A representative of The Post who returned from a trip through the Middle West late last week found much more excitement over the situation here than is the case in the parched areas of Wyoming, Nebraska or Iowa. Too many politicians as well as speculators are inclined to overestimate damages and suffering so they can claim the more credit for providing relief. By discrediting propaganda of this sort Secretary Wallace has rendered a service to consumers and farmers alike.

The agricultural regions of America constitute an immense area. Only a relatively small part of this crop land is in the critical section of the drought belt. And even where high temperatures and drought have wrought extensive havoc some crops that have been properly cultivated may yet escape serious damage. In many cases grain crops have already been harvested. A calamity far worse than any which now threatens would be necessary to deprive the United States of an adequate food supply.

When all excited reports about food scarcity have been laid aside, however, it is evident that recurring periods of drought do constitute a serious national problem. As Secretary Wallace says, "the events of the past four years, drought included, tell us that a sound national program for agriculture is not only necessary but that it is imperative." No one is likely to dissent from that conclusion. But what is a "sound national program?"

Certainly the idea that crop production over our immense agricultural domain can be scientifically regulated from Washington has proved fallacious. Drought has no more respect for the AAA than for a one-mule farmer. Nor can agriculture as a whole be placed on a secure footing by the indiscriminate payment of subsidies. In face of the national problem of utilizing our land resources to the best advantage and organizing farm groups to look after their own interests, the AAA's adjustment efforts appear as ineffective as they have been expensive.

Congress will doubtless be concerned over the welfare of the farmer for many years. But the program ultimately adopted is not likely to center either in crop reduction or in centralized control. Rather it may be expected to strike at the man-made causes of drought, as the new AAA is already feebly attempting to do; to encourage more useful employment of land in semi-arid sections; to foster diversified and self-sufficient farms, offering a permanent living to families as opposed to temporary profits for large-scale agricultural operators, and to develop some sort of crop insurance that will not stem from governmental subsidies.

It is obvious from Secretary Wallace's speech on the drought that he envisages some of these long-range objectives. But he does not yet appear ready to admit that the permanent program of which he speaks will require a rather sharp break with what the AAA under his direction has attempted to do.

The Work Of Butchers.

Yesterday's revolting story of a hanging in Arizona, so badly bungled that the victim hung 33 minutes before dying, follows closely on another from nearby Richmond, where a convicted man plunged headlong off a gallery in a desperate attempt to meet death elsewhere than in the electric chair. Notwithstanding extensive injuries, he was patched up in plaster casts and after two hours suffering was led on to his ordered doom. Both incidents will be seized by opponents of capital punishment as arguments against the death sentence. And, indeed, it will be difficult to offer adequate reply to either.

Society takes pains to see that slaughterhouses are operated as humanely as possible. The Constitution is explicit in forbidding "cruel and unusual" punishments. The will to minimize the agony of death, made doubly bitter when ordered by law, is plainly evident. What was lacking in the two incidents mentioned above was the effort.

Carelessness explains both of them. In the first case, the noose slipped sideways and in the second the convict was inadequately protected from his own despair. The officials and guards involved in both should be made to taste some part of the misery caused by their own inexcusable neglect.

An English lecturer is making a tour of the United States telling people how to use their leisure. Those who attend his lectures need to be told.

Substitutes For Uplift.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Several appropriate annotations may be suggested to Franklyn Waltman's quotations from Rudyard Kipling's "The Gods of the Copybook Headings." Whether or not they have equal erudition with Mr. Waltman's article in The Post of July 11 is not material. They would, I think, constitute a more correct application of Kipling's verses to the present economic and political situation than the clever political writer's attempt to interpret these rhymes as akin to a condemnation of the New Deal.

"We were living in trees when they met us," says Kipling, and Mr. Waltman quotes this, implying that "they" were the leaders of the New Deal. Soon after we come to the line, "But we found them lacking in uplift," the word "them" being a fitting one for New Dealers in Mr. Waltman's estimation. As a matter of history, while I am not sure that any Americans were "living in trees" when Mr. Hoover was given his walking papers by the United States and Mr. Roosevelt was elected, a lot of them were worse off than if they had been inhabiting arboreous homes. The poor devils in numerous cases didn't have homes as good as a well-leafed tree. They were living in boxes, in miserably constructed huts, and sometimes in parks and streets.

"But we found them lacking in uplift." Maybe so, if you mean the type of "uplift" that consists of highbrow, steel-cold explanations of the Constitution intended to prove that the people's government has no right or power to relieve human suffering and assure wages and jobs. Undeniably the New Deal has been rather unconcerned about this sort of "uplift." Richberg remarked, "You can't eat the Constitution." Nor can you eat the opinions of the Supreme Court—I can think of even better uses of some of those opinions, uses that may seem vulgar and plebeian to our plutocratic pedants. And you can't eat "uplift," either. But multitudes of Americans have eaten gladly the tangible things made available to them through relief, public works, CCC camps and other agencies. These were less metaphysical than "uplift," but they did satisfy empty and aching stomachs.

"Strike Up The Band."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Mme. Roland's famous utterance in the days of Terror finds its echo in these times of high-pressure labor organization and high-pressure opposition thereto: O Organization, what economic crimes are committed in thy name!

Has Mr. John L. Lewis found it a fact that the operators absorbed the increased cost of a successful strike for higher wages in the coal fields? And does he suppose that Mr. Irvin and Mr. Grace will pare dividends in the event of a victory for organized labor in steel?

The beetle-browed champion of industrial unionism knows that such was not and will not be the case. The innocent bystander—the consumer—is always caught in the cross-fire and will once again be sacrificed. Five thousand added to the cost of the county bridge fabrication—a thousand more on a culvert contract—and a penny increase per pound of barbed wire. Strike up the band! The moguls of both industry and labor have captured another citadel.

"Last" Dionne?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I note in an editorial in The Post of July 13 regarding the Dionnes that you say "This last child of the Dionnes." Just what does your esteemed editorial page mean by "last?" Are you suggesting a degree of omniscience in connection with the Dionnes? Or is it merely that you think an even dozen is enough?

However, after looking up the word "last," I note that the dictionary gives you some support.

Life Is Real.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

It is not my intention to be critical of anyone who receives the courtesy of having his material printed in the columns of your fine paper. Yet it may not be out of place should I venture an attempt in trying to allay the spirit of that letter appearing in your issue of July 6, entitled "Another McKinley."

Without endeavoring to stretch the scope of my imagination, it would appear to me that this author is of the l'Allegro descendants of Samuel Johnson. Should we profit by the experiences of such great men as Johnson, we would early in life become aware of the subterfuge mantled in the tawdry raiment of pleasure. But would anyone, after careful reflection, insinuate that the office of the President or Vice President of these United States is one to be utilized for the purpose of satiating one's vanities of pleasure?

Surely my friend has read somewhere, at sometime, that dynamically constructed poem that cries aloud in its obvious meaning:

Life is real, life is earnest
And the grave is not its goal.

I cannot imagine anyone believing that any man would seek after the Presidency for any purpose other than service; service to his people, service to his country and service to his faith, which is but another conception of the meaning of religion.

Mole-Hill Morality.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

There is always graft in Government and the more Government there is the more graft there is. There is no escaping it and it can be limited only by limiting Government. Every political period is characterized by a dominant graft form; that is, by the way the participants in Government obtain their profit, and the graft form of a particular period is adopted because it is the most expedient method of profit under particular conditions. In one age it was commerce, in another exploration, and so it goes.

Because of the feeling of insecurity arising from our wealth-destroying depression, the Government job has become the means by which participants in Government achieve their ends and that is why today we see so many hundreds of bureaus and so many hundreds of jobs. The citizen who would denounce mere dishonesty and frown on other graft forms thinks nothing of this greatest graft in all history going on right before his eyes. People are always appalled by the quality of graft and never by the quantity.

Anglo-Saxon mole-hill morality is unsuited to the times of today and must make way for an intellectual morality that will look at the result and the quantity and not merely at the quality.

Where Credit Is Due.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I have observed that the papers are very liberal in giving credit where credit is due, but there are two groups that have been rather neglected in receiving their share.

The teachers are occupying a rather ungrateful position in laying the foundation for the future citizen. The American children are so much more active and vigorous than in any other nation, they are harder for a teacher to handle.

The police are also ones who are subject to more criticism than praise. The public demands protective laws, and when a policeman trys to enforce the law, there is always someone to holler about it. Everyone will agree that the task of the Police Department in the Capital of the Nation is much harder and requires more diplomacy than in any other city in the country.

An Argument For Unionism

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The numerous advances made by organized labor in industry are only the results of the great struggles, activities and interests displayed by its membership. All progress is made by well directed effort intelligently put forth. This is truer of the progress made by organized labor than any other group due to the fact that no other cause on earth encounters the bitter and relentless opposition that labor faces every time it seeks to make an advance.

As usual the cry of communism, radicalism, socialism and every other ism except unionism will be hurled at those who seek to organize the steel workers. No individual who believes in economic justice can deny the truth of the statement made by one labor leader, that the steel industry had made hundreds of billionaires and millionaires, yet the worker, the part-producer of this great wealth, had yet to be found worthy of his hire.

Every industrial worker and his friends know that in the so-called company union and open shop peace and harmony are myths; they have no freedom of contract, their every move is counseled and advised by the company or the individual employer, yet "Observer" in last Wednesday's Post would have us believe all is serene in these "job-fear" organizations and dubs any and every individual who seeks to better the workers' condition as an irresponsible agitator, red or what not.

In my opinion the man who belittles the labor movement and holds it up to scorn is only giving evidence of his own stupidity and lack of intelligence. This is the age of organization. Turn wherever you will and you are face to face with organization in one form or another. Here and there some individual may stand out in the limelight. But investigation will show that after all this individual is merely representing some vast organization of men, money, or power.

Every bit of progress that has been made is the result of organization. The shortening of hours, raising of wages, elevation of working conditions, and securing favorable legislation can be measured by the yard-stick of organization. Organized labor does not now, nor has it ever, carried on a campaign of destruction. It is a constructive movement, which has made a greater contribution than any other agency toward building up our much-boasted American standard of living. It must be apparent, therefore, to our many friends that if the wage earners are to obtain justice and economic independence, it must come through collective effort, under the leadership of men of their own choosing.

In a word, the workers must, if they wish to be free in all the word implies, carry on their campaign to organize those who are still outside of the movement, so they may present a solid front to those who challenge their right to economic justice. And if we are truthful with ourselves we will acknowledge that where the greater percentage of organization is maintained, greater benefits result to the employer, to the worker, and the morale of all concerned is on a higher plane.

Sincerely yours,

Here's Food—For Thought!

Post Office, Wednesday.

IT begins to look as if our Nation-wide search for the perpetrator of fruit salad would soon be rewarded. We have heard nothing, as yet, from Director J. Edgar Hoover and his G-Men, but Judge Joseph Danziger—who, as a true gourmet, shares our detestation of the poisonous concoction—sends in a most promising report.

To wit:

"At an early age—8, to be exact—I pilfered a book from the forbidden section of my father's library, sneaked to the attic and there, by moonlight, curdled my blood with 'The Murders in the Rue Morgue.' For months afterward, I could not pass a moonlit window without scalp-creeping anticipations of an orang-outang framing himself in the opening. However, from Poe to Sherlock, Gaboriau to Reggie Fortune, was a logical progress; I have qualified as an expert in the classic deductive method of crime detection.

"And so I can tell you how to find that Enemy of Society who invented fruit salad.

"Do you remember when fruit salad first became popular? It was at the same time that the verb 'to contact' was smuggled into the vulgar vocabulary. And what the former offense is to the palate the latter offense is to the ear.

"I suggest—nay, I insist—that there is more in this than mere coincidence. I am sure that the same criminal is demonstrably guilty of both felonies.

"Speedy action, however, is necessary. Ice cream with mayonnaise dressing threatens us. And so does the noun 'contaction.' Stop this offender—stop him, in the name of all your colleges, from Brillat-Savarin to myself, from Chaucer to Mr. Povich!"

Measures will be taken.

Nevertheless, and in the meantime, we rest not without comfort upon the effects produced by our recent praise for the Pennsylvania-Dutch cuisine. For instance, from her summer place at Orrtanna, Pa., Margaret A. Johnston writes us of indulgence in calf's head soup under the very shadow of that great house which was built near Lancaster by Pennsylvania's only President—whereby we mean Pennsylvania's only President so far.

"Your column on 'Dutch' food," says Miss Johnston, "recalls 'Dutch' phrases. Have you heard this Lancaster County one? Over a broken electric doorbell was the following notice:

BUTTON WON'T BELL—BUMP!

"'It wonders me'," she proceeds, "if you know of the opening to the public of the old home 'Wheatlands' of James Buchanan in"—— surely, she means "near!"—— "Lancaster We drove there to renew our acquaintance with it. We knew it when it was occupied by George Wilson, who, when he was a bank clerk of 21, bought it on credit. Until he was 60 he stocked it with every piece of antique furniture he could find. Now the city has taken it over—and it is worth the trip to see it. But worth the trip also was what followed: We had dinner with nearby friends—and, if you please, they gave us calf's head soup!"

Nor is that all.

The fruits of industry grow slowly, but they grow exceeding fine. It is many a year since first we yearned for a meal with the Gourmet Society of New York. And now, at long last, we have received the coveted invitation.

Somebody sent J. George Frederick our candid commentary on his standard Pennsylvania-Dutch cookbook whereupon he has gallantly written us:

"If you ever get to New York, look me up. I'm president of the Gourmet Society; you might like to attend one of our dinners.

Casual? Not at all. The true gourmet is ever mock-modest concerning his meals.

Besides, Joseph Hergesheimer has been invited, too. And Mr. Frederick concludes:

"You may be interested in hearing that Landon has bought half a dozen copies of my book and written me quite glowingly about it. He's a Pennsylvania-Dutchman—you knew it, didn't you?"

But we know something about Lititz that even Mr. Frederick J. Haskin doesn't know. In his usually perfect "Answers to Questions" he tells an inquirer who asks where, in America, pretzels were first made:

"In Lititz, Pa. Back in 1810 a German vagrant visited that little town and imparted to a baker . . . the secret of making and baking the cake that became known as the bretzel, and, within the last 25 years, the pretzel."

Mr. Haskin, we give you our word that Lititz pretzels were pretzels, and not bretzels, when we went to Beck's Academy in Lititz—and that was at least a short while before 1911!

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler.

A Man's Friends.

A Man in Public Life sometimes places his honor in the hands of trusted friends who can bring discredit upon him by abusing that trust.

The relation between Mr. Roosevelt and James A. Farley is a shocking illustration.

Mr. Roosevelt is a man without guile, so frank, sincere and innocent of sordid political motives that he cannot bring nimself to believe that the bald, bland plotter who gave us Farleyism can be guilty of questionable doings. Mr. Farley enjoys the trust and personal friendship of the President, and look what he has done under cover of the good man's confidence in three long years.

• • • •

Unknown to Mr. Roosevelt, who would feel low in his mind if he ever learned the truth, Mr. Farley has recommended many men for public office solely on their political qualifications and induced the President to approve their appointment in the honest belief that they were patriots of exceptional ability. He has even appointed men to certain new jobs for which no apparent excuse existed, representing to Mr. Roosevelt that these tasks were absolutely imperative if the Nation was to be saved.

• • • •

When Mr. Farley goes to Mr. Roosevelt and tells him the country needs an expert scrapbook keeper to cut out newspaper clippings and paste them up and that he can get an ideal man for the work at $6,000 a year. Mr. Roosevelt looks into Mr. Farley's open, beaming countenance, which masks the cunning of his soul, and takes his word for it, never inquiring whether the appointee is a deserving Democrat or whether they could get the same work done by one of the Negro reception messengers in his spare time.

If it is a Federal judge that they are naming, Mr. Farley, of course, being a sordid spoilsman, will consult the political record of the candidate and confer with the Democratic leaders of the man's home district. His idea, of course, is to distribute the jobs among the boys to keep them loyal, and he doubtless remembers, too, that an organization judge, exempt from certain income taxes, will kick back to the party funds, as a free-will donation, an annual percentage of his salary.

It is also considered a good thing, under the spoils theory of politics, to have party men on the Federal bench who will remember who gave them their jobs and give the Administration the benefit of the doubt on some of the close ones. If an Administration should clean out all the political opponents on the Federal bench it would never be necessary for the Government to pick its spots in prosecuting political opponents. As matters stand, however, judges being appointed for life, there are always some holdovers who cannot be relied on to see things in the correct, patriotic light.

Mr. Roosevelt, being absolutely nonpartisan in matters affecting the country's welfare, would be horrified to hear that he had ever given his indorsement to any judge merely on the recommendation of a local political leader. Fortunately for him, he probably never will hear it, because Mr. Roosevelt is an idealist and alturist of the purest ray, and he hears only nice things.

Mr. Roosevelt's only rule in appointments is pre-eminent fitness for the position, and he probably hasn't the faintest idea that he has been appointing only Democrats. He never even asks a man's political faith, and that nobility of soul has been a deplorable weakness, for it has enabled the sordid spoilsman who gave us Farleyism to build up a political machine in the Government service without Mr. Roosevelt's suspecting as much.

• • • •

The President, you may be sure, had no inkling that the income tax prosecutions against Huey Long's men in New Orleans might be an act of political coercion against some boys who had stepped out of line. And you may be equally sure that when the Department of Justice finally called off the prosecution, due to a change of atmosphere, after Huey's death, Mr. Roosevelt regarded that as merely a routine incident in the administration of the courts. He probably was pleased to learn that the boys were falsely suspected and were innocent, after all. It is always nice to learn that suspected men are good men, after all, and that a terrible miscarriage of justice has been prevented.

But there you are.

Mr. Roosevelt trusts a man and gives him great authority.

And how does that man repay that confidence? He repays it by building up the monster of Farleyism absolutely unknown to Mr. Roosevelt.

Trolley Cars

company has called here as witnesses all have testified that service has improved and accidents diminished as the number of one-man cars in their cities has increased.

Bennett himself introduced tables yesterday to show that some 11 cities, including Brooklyn, Buffalo, Dallas and Kansas City, have 100 per cent of one-man cars. New York has 83 per cent, Philadelphia 54 per cent, Baltimore 51 per cent and Boston 88 per cent. Among the cities that have a smaller per cent than Washington's 15 are Detroit, Cleveland and San Francisco.

Asks Benefit.

Bennett was the last "company witness" to appear at the hearing. Toward the end he was catechized by Mrs. Luther R. Maddox, of the Columbia Heights Citizens Association.

"What would be the benefit to the public of putting one-man cars in operation?" Mrs. Maddox asked.

"The public," Bennett replied, "would be benefited by the adding to the prosperity of the company, because unless the company is prosperous it can't give the public proper service."

"Will there be a reduction in fare?"

"We now have the lowest fare of any city of comparable size, considering the cost of operation."

Bennett then reminded Mrs. Maddox that his company has a petition with the P. U. C. for an increase in fares.

Replying to a question about the reduction in the number of car employes, Bennett said that nobody would be laid off; that the company would allow the normal turnover—due to deaths, resignations, etc.—to absorb the surplus personnel.

"Wouldn't it be more economical if you reduced the salaries of executives?" Mrs. Maddox asked.

"If," said Bennett, "all the executives worked for nothing the saving wouldn't be as great as that involved in the installation of one-man cars."

Fewer Accidents.

Bennett introduced tables to show that one-man cars here have been involved in fewer accidents than those manned by a motorman and a conductor. A duel of statistics and interpretations followed between him and People's Counsel Roberts.

Bennett's table showed that in 1924 one-man cars had a percentage of 29.5 accidents for every 100,000 miles traveled, whereas two-men cars had a percentage of 45 for every 100,000 miles traveled.

The table showed that every year since then the percentage of accidents for one-man cars has been lower than that for two-man cars, the figures for 1933 being 31.8 per cent for the one-man type, as against 40.8 for the two-man type.

People's Counsel Roberts, however, brought out that the two-man cars are used in rush-hour traffic more than the one-man cars.

He also made some calculations with Bennett's own figures to show that accidents involving two-man cars have decreased by 22 per cent since 1924, whereas those involving one-man cars have decreased only 10 per cent.

Roberts drew the conclusion that if the company had continued with 100 per cent of two-man cars, the number of accidents would have been fewer.

At today's session of the hearing, representatives of citizens' associations and others opposed to the one-man car will testify.

Breckinridge Supports Landon

pocket for personal expenditure and the stimulation of business.

"4. Greater freedom from hatred and strife between the various elements of our population.

"5. The ending of all threats to the freedom of the press and radio.

"6. The ending of all threats to the independence, efficiency and integrity of the judiciary.

"7. The ending of the present and future menace to the American system of constitutional freedom existing in the philosophies that control the directing minds of the present Administration.

"Gov. Landon's word is good. He will perform his promises. He is direct. He has no hidden purposes.

"On November 3 the American people will have a great test of their common-sense, intelligence and devotion to the true principles of their national life."

Breckinridge's bolt of the Democratic ticket recalled to observers the "take a walk" speech delivered before the American Liberty League by Alfred E. Smith, and the anti-Roosevelt open letter addressed to the delegates to the Philadelphia convention and signed by five Democrats: Smith, former Governor Joseph B. Ely of Massachusetts; Bainbridge Colby, Secretary of State during the Wilson Administration; Daniel Cohalan, former New York Supreme Court justice, and James A. Reed, former Senator from Missouri.

Regarded as Threat.

This letter, published on the eve of the Democratic convention, was regarded by delegates there as a bolt threat. None, however, has declared publicly for Landon so far.

John Thomas, of Idaho, friend of Senator William E. Borah and his former colleague in the Senate, visited Landon with E. G. Bennett, of Utah. Prior to the Cleveland convention both had supported Borah for the Republican nomination.

Tomorrow was set aside by Gov. Landon for campaign conferences with Col. Frank Knox, of Chicago, the Republican Vice Presidential nominee.

"We came to go over the situation in the Northwestern intermountain States," Thomas said. "Republican chances are improving all the time. Landon has an appeal to our people and a fine chance to carry the Northwest.

"The people believe that he understands their problems and will prove an able, courageous, sincere administrator of public affairs."

Bennett, long a business associate of Marriner S. Eccles, governor of the Federal Reserve Board, added:

"I was very much interested in Borah's nomination. Failing of that, I feel a very splendid selection was made in Gov. Landon."

Bennett was the Republican member of the first three-man board named by President Roosevelt to administer the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

When Eccles divorced himself from banking affiliations to join the Reserve Board, Bennett succeeded him as head of the First Security Corporation, with headquarters at Ogden, Utah.

Thomas said he had talked recently with Borah. But aside from noting that the veteran Senator was seeking re-election and had announced he would not bolt the national party ticket, he declined to discuss his plans or comment on reports that a London-Borah conference would be arranged for later in the campaign.

Works on Speech.

Landon spent relatively little time in his office today, preferring the quiet of the Kansas executive mansion for working on his July 23 acceptance address and receiving a few visitors.

Archie Bobbitt, former Indiana State auditor, and M. J. Hanrahan, of the Indiana Republican committee, were callers, Hanrahan saying he was making advance arrangements for a motor caravan to the notification ceremonies.

Former Gov. Dan Turner of Iowa and Don Berry, Indianola, Iowa, who represented the State on the Republican platform committee at Cleveland, spent an hour with Landon.

Turner said they "discussed the farm situation as it affects the Middle West."

"As a result of this platform and the candidate we find sentiment in Iowa is going back rapidly to the Republican banner," he stated.

Mrs. Hoyal Picks Aids.

Chicago, July 14 (AP).—Mrs. Robert Lincoln Hoyal, in charge of women's activities in the Republican national campaign, today appointed as her two assistants Mrs. Ernest B. Griffin, of Grant Park, Ill., and Mrs. A. C. Carlson, of Willmar, Minn.

The two women, she said, would be in charge of special organization among groups of women voters.

Mrs. Griffin was State women's chairman of the Illinois Republican central committee in 1920 and in the same year was in charge of women's activities for the preconvention campaign of former Gov. Frank O. Lowden of Illinois, then a Republican candidate for Presidential nomination.

Mrs. Carlson was national president of the American Legion auxiliary in 1935 and for three years prior to 1935 was chairman of the auxiliary's child welfare committee and traveled widely.

Since 1924, with the exception of two years, she has been State central committeewoman from Minnesota. She was the first woman in her home county to serve on a jury and was the first woman vice chairman of the Kandihohi County, Minn., Republican committee.

"Will Landon carry your section?" Thomas was asked.

"Without question," Thomas said. "Republican sentiment is growing very rapidly."

"Was Senator Borah's part in the campaign discussed?"

"No," Thomas replied. "Senator Borah usually speaks for himself. I will say that Borah will receive the Republican nomination and be re-elected to the Senate."

Turner told newsmen that while "we're not underestimating Mr. Roosevelt as an opponent," Iowa would give its electoral votes to Landon.

Another visitor expected to arrive late for a conference Thursday was Frank Gannett, the publisher, a pre-convention Borah supporter.

Mrs. Herman L. Borneman, vice president of the Women's Republican Club of Buffalo, N. Y., and Mrs. J. N. Winkler, secretary of the University Republican Club, Buffalo, called to meet Landon.

"I told him we will carry my State and that Erie County was for him 100 per cent," Mrs. Borneman said.

Coast to Coast Tour.

Tentative campaign marching orders for Col. Frank Knox call for 2½ months of coast-to-coast speaking tours, the Republican Vice Presidential nominee said today.

The itinerary, mapped out by the Republican National Committee and the colonel's political contact man, Clarence Brown, would start with a swing into the Northwest, probably about the middle of August.

Early in September Col. Knox woud lend a hand in the Maine campaign, appearing there, tentatively, on September 4, ten days before the closely watched Maine elections.

A swing into the Southwest would follow. He would then campaign in the general West, make an Eastern excursion, and set out for Arizona, New Mexico and California.

Voters' Questionnaire.

The League of Women Voters yesterday announced the contents of a formal questionnaire by which it will seek to put Senate and House candidates on record as to their stand on public policies.

Information compiled from these questionnaires, the announcement said, would be made available to the League membership and to the public.

Issues on which the candidate will be asked to state his position include:

Extent to which the Federal Government should assume responsibility toward social legislation and public welfare.

Extension of merit system to include all postmasters and employes of new Federal agencies which become permanent.

Enactment of new food, drug, and cosmetic law.

Approval of trade bargaining through reciprocal agreements to obtain tariff reduction.

Fatal to Liberties, Says Ex-President's Brother; Fahey Praises New Deal's Wealth Sharing; Radio's Political Policies Are Debated.

By the Associated Press.

Charlottesville, Va., July 14.—Henry W. Taft, New York attorney and brother of the former President, declared tonight it would be fatal to the liberties of the Nation to weaken the power of the Supreme Court as an independent branch of the American Government.

Speaking on "The Constitution in the Light of Modern Trends" before the Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Virginia, he asserted that every American citizen should understand the "dangerous results" which may flow from a disregard of the spirit and letter of the Constitution.

"Unless the citizen of this country, and especially responsible public officers, accept as final the decisions of the Supreme Court, soon or late our system will crumble," he said.

"Unsound experiments in government may be alluring to those who give them no close study, and sophisticated arguments may mislead even the intelligent. But the most stubtle danger comes when some temporary discontent is seized upon to cause a drift toward socialism or autocracy or dictatorship."

He referred frequently to "New Deal" policies which Harold Ickes, Secretary of the Interior, is expected to defend Friday night when he and former United States Senator Hiram Bingham, of Connecticut, a Republican, discuss "Representative Government versus Dictatorship."

Taft asked what ground there was to think that with the recovery of normal conditions American people would have to enact permanent "socialistic legislation, and noted that "the apostles of change seem to think that they will and that they cannot create, through their own initiative, enterprise and thrift, a normal economic and social status.

Dictatorships Soon Fall.

"They postulate the permanent helplessness of the American people and from that argue that organic changes in our Constitution must be made so that we may compete with the dictatorships of Russia, Germany and Italy, under systems which have avowedly abandoned the idea that the liberty of the individual is a proper aim of government—a conception alien to the thought, history and character of the Anglo-Saxon race.

"European dictatorships with planned social and economic schemes may for a time be effective. But in a democratic country the quest for such expedients would endanger our liberty if they undermine our constitutional safeguards. If they are matters of transient political policies they can be resisted by the people at the polls. But the prevailing propaganda is directed at a complete abandonment of our protection against unregulated democracy and seeks a resort to some form of autocracy, whether it be sovietism, fascism or Nazism, or be called by some term less offensive to our ears.

"But if you give the American people a chance to recover their balance, they will need no Government subsidies or social regulation or economic aid which cannot be furnished to them under the Constitution."

John H. Fahey, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, declared no government "has ever done so much for business properly conducted as the Roosevelt Administration," and described the Roosevelt objective as a more equitable and widespread distribution of the "immense wealth we are able to produce."

He said it "must be apparent to all" that evils and defects responsible for the depression must be remedied and a better order established.

"Complicated modern civilization can no longer depend on the simple and silly 'natural cause' prescription to cure twentieth century depression," he said.

Raymond G. Swing, former editor of the Nation, described two major dangers facing radio today as those of continued poor editing and the sale of time for political purposes.

The principle that radio companies may derive revenue from selling political time is "fundamentally repugnant to democracy," he said, adding that the present method of handling public affairs over the air presents them "in such a muddle of confusion that listeners are unable to cope with the flood of material."

Lambdin Kay, general manager of station WSB, the Atlanta Journal, declared on the other hand that the American Broadcasting System merited "everlasting credit" for "plugging along in the public interest," despite tempting material rewards.

Maj. Charles J. Calrow, consultant of the Virginia State Planning Board, urged "the earnest and impartial attention by the political economist and the students of constitutional law" to the "no man's land of government."

Ezekiel, Carver Join In.

Dr. Mordecai Ezekiel, economic adviser of Secretary Wallace in the Department of Agriculture, and Dr. Thomas Nixon Carver, professor emeritus of economics of Harvard University and director of the research staff of the Republican National Committee, joined in a discussion of the need for research in politics before the round table on the political scene.

Research is no substitute for native shrewdness based on wide experience, Carver said, but it may become a valuable aid in politics as in almost every other field.

"Those who believe that ignorance and prejudice dominate our democracy," he said, "will concentrate on how to get votes with very little regard to how to promote general welfare. Politicians who believe that our democracy is reasonably intelligent and can be further educated will believe that the question of getting votes can take care of itself if the general welfare is actually promoted."

Sees Much to Be Done.

Ezekiel said the "New Deal" had scored successes in many fields based on research, but that much remained to be done.

"Research as a basis for industrial policy is still largely undeveloped," Ezekiel pointed out. "As yet no such broad attack upon the economic problems in business and industry is being made as was launched upon economic problems of finance and agriculture more than a decade ago."

Robert S. Henry, assistant to the president of the Association of American Railroads, speaking before the round table on business and government, declared that "the Government's greatest service in transportation would be to establish equality of treatment and opportunity for all forms and agencies of transport and for the Government which uses them all."

Willys R. Write, of the United States Bureau of Air Commerce, predicted increased importance for air commerce in business and social life with the establishment of airway traffic control, plans for transoceanic schedules and rapid advances in flying equipment.

U. S. 'Big Business' Attacked by Howes

Pierre, S. Dak., July 14 (AP).—W. W. Howes, acting Postmaster General, attacked "big business," syndicate newspapers, the Liberty League and the Republicans in a keynote address at the Democratic State convention here today.

Howes declared Gov. Alf M. Landon, Republican Presidential candidate, was selected by the Liberty League. He referred to the Kansas Governor as "the type of candidate that can get lost in a crowd of three."

"We are going to vote this fall in a fight, a real fight," he said, "to see whether America is going forward in the next 50 years or going backward. It is either going forward with Roosevelt or backward with Landon."

"Every newspaper in the United States, whether it is for Roosevelt or not," he said, "carried the greatest advertising for Roosevelt every day on its financial page."

Lucy Gibbons Morse, 'Abolitionist,' Dies at 96

New York, July 14 (AP).—Mrs. Lucy Gibbons Morse, author and abolitionist in pre-Civil War days, died last night at her home. She was 96.

A native of New York City, Mrs. Morse was the granddaughter of Isaac T. Hopper, an active figure in carrying on the work of the underground railroad.

Her father, James Sloan Gibbons, was the author of the civil war song, "We Are Coming, Father Abraham, Three Hundred Thousand Strong."

Talmadge Cuts Taxes.

Atlanta, July 14 (AP).—Gov. Eugene Talmadge reduced the State tax rate from 4 to 3 mills today, thereby saving Georgia taxpayers an amount estimated by the comptroller general's department at $1,000,000. The three-mill rate is the lowest the State has had since 1900.

Protests Open Rebellion Trial In Puerto Rico

Police Search Witnesses, Attorneys as 8 Face Island Court.

By the Associated Press.

San Juan, Puerto Rico, July 14.—The trial of eight Puerto Rican Nationalists on charges of conspiring to overthrow the United States Government by force opened today amid bitter protests by defense counsel against the searching of attorneys and witnesses.

Attorney Toro Nazario, representing Pedro Albizu Campos, Nationalist leader, who is on trial with seven others, demanded dismissal of the charges on the ground the sessions were not public because of rigid police precautions against disorder.

Never in the history of the island, he said, had defense counsel been searched. He also declared women witnesses had been humiliated by the search process.

Jurors Chosen.

The court, however, ruled the United States Marshal had not exceeded his duty in ordering the trial restrictions.

Twelve jurors and two alternates were chosen by midday to pass on charges that the defendants conspired to overthrow the Government by recruiting soldiers and inciting to revolution.

Two of the 14, William Fernandez, an alternate, of Brooklyn, and D. P. Campbell, of Tennessee, were born in the United States.

Judge Robert Cooper ruled out inquiries by counsel regarding the jurors' ideas concerning the Nationalist Party or insular independence. That, he said, was not at issue.

Albizu Silent.

Albizu, Harvard-educated president of Puerto Rico's Nationalist Party, sat with his young attorneys during the jury selection, but did not address the court. The other defendants remained apart.

District Attorney Cecil Snyder began his outline of the Government' case during the afternoon. Col. Amos W. W. Woodcock, former United States dry law director, is assisting him.

Albizu and the others were arrested following the slaying last February of Col. E. Francis Riggs, insular police chief.

Gov. Sholtz Named New Ruler of Elks

Los Angeles, July 14 (AP).—Invested as grand exalted ruler, Gov. David Sholtz of Florida told the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks today "the appalling truth" is that European dictators have "many admirers" in America.

"Today, we of America are too smug and self-satisfied," the Governor told the convention.

Other officers elected were: Fred B. Melman, Oakland, Calif., grand esteemed leading knight; Lester C. Ayer, Portland, Me., grand esteemed loyal knight; H. B. Brewer, Casper, Wyo., grand esteemed lecturing knight; Sidney Brudenstein, New Orleans, grand tyler; George M. Thompson, Charleston, S. C., grand inner guard; J. E. Masters, Charleroi, Pa., re-elected grand secretary; Dr. E. J. McCormick, Toledo, Ohio, re-elected grand treasurer; William T. Phillips, New York, grand trustee, and Judge John McClelland, Atlanta, Ga., grand trustee to complete Gov. Sholtz's unexpired 3-year term.

Summer Revue From Big Stem Now at Lotus

By Chanticleer.

The first complete mid-summer revue is on view at the Lotus this week, dropping in direct from the Big Stem and highlighting a Broadway cast of entertainers. The eight Abdallah Girls back up the principals in novelty, acrobatic and specialty numbers. Featured are Franco and Faye, direct from an engagement at Philadelphia's Acadia; Crater and Healy, comedy and eccentric numbers; Kay Koch, specialty soft shoe artist, and Mavis and Beatrice, acrobatic routine. Bill Strickland and the Capitolians provide the tunes, Ray Donohue vocalizing.

Maryland Club Gardens has decided that it was about time some night club prepared food especially for drinking folk. Chef Russell maintains that some foods go with firewater and others do not. He's been studying the matter for years. Just what he diagnoses and prescribes depends in part on your cocktail menu, but he does guarantees that what you get tastes good and insures your tummy against those dreadful flipflops.

There's just one female employe on the Powhatan Roof—and naturally enough plenty of attention was given to filling that job. She's the cigarette vendor, and she just had to be right. The result is Babs—and they'll stack Babs against any cigarette girl in the local precincts.

Of all the virtues of air-conditioning always present in the minds of the executives at the Hamilton, the big treat usually is centered in the Rainbow Room. The problem is to exploit the comfort of the air-cooled dine-and-dancery and yet make it perfectly clear that Moe Baer and his orchestra inject a "hot" note at all times.

How's your truckin' these days? The Vincent Costello Post, No. 15, American Legion, is sponsoring a trucking contest at Chevy Chase Lake tonight and tomorrow night, and if your feet are agile enough you might get one of the substantial prizes.

More acrobatics of the breath-taking type feature the floor bill at the Shoreham this week. The Wiegand Troupe, genuine circus performers, play about on a spring board (teeter-totter, as a matter of fact). They toss each other about in the atmosphere and generally disport themselves in hair-raising gyrations of one kind and another. Ruthania and Malcolm are back. They're favorites of long standing. They'll undoubtedly do their famous comedy dance in which Ruthania carries her partner from the floor.

The Federal Diary

By Betty Read.

Bids for the construction of the Government Printing Office's new warehouse will be released within a week or two, it was announced yesterday.

All around the old red brick building in North Capitol street, between G and H streets, new structures will rise in the future, but the warehouse will be the first and according to the officials, the most needed of all.

At present some 25,000,000 Government papers are being stored in inadequate buildings and, when all the supplies have been gathered in one spot, there will be a considerable saving in time and work.

It's going to be quite a sporty-looking building of three stories with simple lines and will boast a sunken flower garden—much to the amusement and de ght of some of the office's officials. They smile about it, but they like the idea just the same, even though they may not admit it.

One of the great time-saving features of the new building will be the installation of the presses to print the Government money orders and postcards. At least one freight-car load of them goes out every day and in the new building there will be railway sidings to permit 18 cars to anchor under the roof and be loaded and unloaded without the present necessity of trucking.

For 20 years various Public Printers have urged Congress to enlarge the present plant, but it was not until the last Congress that anything much was done about it.

Perhaps the printing innovations of the present Public Printer, J. E. Giegengack, in making the Government's publications artistic and appealing, turned the trick and interested the men and women on Capitol Hill.

Under the present administration, color printing, illustrating and artistic outlays have been introduced in the place of colorless and dull-looking booklets and pamphlets of former years.

We recorded the hour of departure for the annual moonlight cruise of the D. C. Federation of Federal Employes Unions Thursday evening at 7:30. That was the hour set by one of the officials, but it now seems that he was going on super-standard time, for the correct hour of departure is 8:30 p. m. (Eastern standard time).

And speaking of Federal Employes Unions, the largest lodge of the American Federation of Government Employes elected its delegates last night to the annual convention in September, in Detroit. The delegation of eight from the Internal Revenue Lodge will be the largest at the convention and includes Charles Hoffman, Ira Y. Bain, Larue E. Tanner, Irene C Gantt, Henry C. Iler, Mrs. Mae M. Kinney, Mrs. Maude M. Anderson and R. A. Babb. Eight alternates were also elected.

"Are You Awake" or "Omwa Mumba" as they would say in the Belgian Congo, is what Miss Florence E. Marshall, a secretary in the office of the general counsel of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, wants to know.

It's not just an idle query on her part, but is the title of a book of verse which came off the presses day before yesterday, of which she is the proud author.

She has been writing verse for many years, most of it for commercial greeting card manufacturers, and being a frugal and wise New Englander from Weare, N. H., she saved these extra pennies and took herself to Europe several years ago. Now she has come out with her first volume and has sold a couple thousand copies in advance, which makes her think another European trip is not too far distant.

She entered the Government service in 1918 in the War Department and after a few years there was transferred to the Treasury Department. About five years ago she took her present job.

E. Claude Babcock, president of the American Federation of Government Employes now on leave of absence with pay, pending the acceptance or refusal of his resignation at the annual convention in Detroit, evidently has no idea that he will be recalled to the head of the Government Employes Federation. Today he announced he had become president of a new company with offices in the Press Building, the Annuity Association, which is devoted to a life annuity plan for Government employes.

The proceeds are to be invested in Government securities and any employe can pay in as much as he wants, either spasmotically or on a regular schedule.

There are a number of other features of the plan, but it is interesting that Babcock should have begun something he hopes will be permanent, in view of his resignation pending before the convention.

It is fun to drop in at the various Government offices and bureaus and chat, and the other day at the Bureau of Fisheries we found out that they now are using goat meat for fish food and although it has not been thoroughly established, it looks as if this meat would be as good for the fish in the hatcheries as the more expensive heart and liver combination on which they have been thriving in the past.

And another interesting thing is that Japan has sent Prof. Seiji Kanda, of the Imperial Fisheries School, to this country on an extended tour to study our fisheries, especially those for salmon and herring. Japan is about to introduce methods of regulating its fishing industry and wants to know how Uncle Sam does the job.

Miss Mae A. Schnurr, assistant to the commissioner of the Bureau of Reclamation, is back in Washington again after addressing the meeting of the American Society of Agricultural Engineers at Estes Park early this month.

She told of the work of the late Dr. Elwood Mead, former commissioner, and paid a tribute to his accomplishments. He was posthumously awarded the Cyrus Hall McCormick Gold Medal "for exceptional and meritorious engineering achievement in agriculture" and the gold insignia of his eminence was accepted after Miss Schnurr's speech by his widow, Mrs. Mary L. Mead, who attended the meeting with her family.

Perry L. Stevenson recently has been made chief of the British and Orient section of the foreign tariff division of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. He has served in the bureau for many years and is regarded as an expert in his line.

Culbertson on Bridge

Garbled Messages.

Half of the minor tragedies of life, I believe, are caused by ill-chosen words—words that do not convey to the listener the true meaning of the speaker. Just so in contract. Players make certain bids on the naive assumption that they are sending an explicit message to partner; the message may indeed, be explicit, but diametrically opposite from the bidder's intention.

That was the case in today's hand.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 club	3 spades	Pass	Pass
Pass

I have given the bidding exactly as my correspondent stated it. In explanation of his three spade bid, he wrote:

1. "I, playing South, suspected East's bid of being a physic, and pre-empted to shut off comunication between opponents, at the same time visualizing game for our side. Was my bid sound? If not what was the proper bid?

2. "Was my partner justified in passing with his strong trump support—one and one-half honor tricks, and opponent's suit well stopped? What should he have bid?"

Referring first to the three spade bid and the explanation thereof, the inconsistency fairly leaps at one. If South "suspected a physic" why should he fear the opponents "getting together?" Far better to encourage it! With South's bone crusher, including a good holding in opponent's bid suit, there was every reason to urge, rather than dissuade West to "join the party." It must not be understood by this that I indorse Sourth's suspicion of a physic. I am merely pointing out that if he thought a certain way he should have acted consistently.

Now, as to the other part of his statement that "at the same time he visualized game for his side" I should think he would! But he didn't go about reaching it in the right way. His three spade bid undoubtedly conveyed to partner the idea that the (South) held such a hand as:

Spade, A K 10 9 8 7 5; heart, 6; diamond, Q J 10 4; club, 2.

This would have been ideal for "shut-out purposes, containing little defensive strength, but about seven to eight playing tricks.

To express the strength actually held South should have made a take-out double of one club. Even two spades, though a much stronger bid than a pre-emptive three spades, would not have done justice to South's hand. True, the response to be expected from North was hearts, but there would be no danger in showing the spade suite at a higher level.

As to North being justified in his pass to three spades—it is a close point. Visualizing such a hand as the one suggested above (with which there would be no play for game), obviously a pass was correct. On the other hand, South's holding could be no stronger and yet fit much better making a game a laydown. All in all, it was probably unwise for North to "hang" one trick short of game. But the crux of the whole quiestion is that North should not have been given such a problem!

Streams in Maryland Will Get 300,000 Bass

Baltimore, July 14 (AP).—The Conservation Commission expects to plant nearly 300,000 bass in Maryland streams this year, officials of the commission said today. Nearly 200,000 have already been placed in streams and ponds.

Up to two weeks ago, a total of 163,000 bass had been planted. Fifteen thousand have been stocked in Frederick County streams since then, and 6,850 in Antietam Creek and in the Potomac River at Millers Landing and Sawmill.

An additional 12,000 will be planted in Somerset County waters within the next few weeks.

On the Air Today

When Maj. Edward Bowes and his so-called amateurs were bought up by a new sponsor and announcement made that the show, beginning in September, would be presented Thursday nights from Columbia stations instead of Sunday nights over N. B. C. facilities, a great many things happened of the type that changes listener's program habits.

In the first place, no one has wanted in the past to pay for a program over Columbia between the hours of 8 and 9, when the major held forth over an N. B. C. network. The Bowes show commanded too great a listening audience.

Even Eddie Cantor gave it up as a bad job last winter. He tried a half hour show "opposite" Bowes and came to the conclusion that it was futile to try to compete with so popular a program.

But when Bowes was booked for a new night and hour, Columbia sold the Sunday night hour that practically went begging last winter. Nelson Eddy will have one-half the period, Cantor the other.

It is interesting to note that the sponsor who released Bowes did not release the Sunday night time. It is their plan, at this moment, to move the Rudy Vallee variety show to the hour being vacated by the major.

Your speculation as to why Bowes' present sponsor let him go is as good as mine. I haven't made any effort to learn whether it was because of a larger offer to the amateur king or for some other reason. I do know that many "wise guys" along Radio Row believe the major has a doubtful year ahead. In other words, a serious question as to whether he can hold his popularity for another season.

I doubt very much whether Bowes cares. He has made literally barrels of money from his enterprises growing out of exploiting radio talent.

A few weeks ago a program listing, "Community Sing," innocently appeared in notes from the Columbia network. Little by little changes were made in the program innovations added, showmanship injected as the tests with studio audiences brought out the feature's good and bad points. In the course of a few weeks only the program shifted to the commercially sponsored column—not for once a week, but twice.

A year ago I raised my small voice in objection to the trite and stilted patterns employed by radio production and brains. I insisted that broadcasting needed a strong hypodermic of garden-variety things to appeal to a mass listening audience that would appreciate the human element.

And it is gratifying to note that "Vox Pop" has enjoyed more than a full year on the air, the immediate acceptance of "Professor Quiz," the refreshing nonchalance of the Crosby show and the successful introduction of the "community sing" idea. And other trends toward appealing to human nature simply and directly.

Which leads me to propose with some temerity that some resourceful and enterprising air production agency provide one of those informal Saturday night jamborees so delightfully associated in many listeners' minds with the early days of broadcasting, before the networks made "timing" and "pattern" the essence of the art.

It is probably too much to hope for, but what fun it would be.

Miss Offutt's Wedding Set For Aug. 19

Marriage to Mr. Ellwood Chesley Will Be at Mountain Home.

Bridal Wreath to Be of Blossoms Worn By Four Generations.

August 19 has been set as the date for the wedding of Miss Nelle Thornton Offutt, daughter of Mrs. Ellwood Offutt, of Chicago, and the late Mr. Offutt, to Mr. Frederic Francis Chesley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Willoughby S. Chesley, of Washington.

Miss Offutt is the only granddaughter of the late Col. Nelson Thomasson, of Chicago, at whose summer home, Monte Vista, near Oakland, Md., the wedding will take place. The estate, which is now the summer home of Mrs. Nelson Thomasson, jr., is on the crest of a high hill and commands a view of four States—Maryland, Pennsylvania, which is about 20 miles distant; Virginia, the most remote, and West Virginia, only 3 miles away.

The weather permitting, the ceremony probably will take place out of doors. The French windows of the drawing room open onto the terrace of a white garden, planted several years ago all in white flowers, which will form the setting or at least the background for the simple ceremony which is planned.

The bride will wear her mother's wedding dress and the lace bridal veil which was worn by the bridegroom's mother. The orange blossoms with which it will be held will be a wreath formed of blossoms worn by four generations of brides in her family. Those worn by her maternal great-grandmother are made of white kid. There are also those worn by her grandmother and those worn by her mother, which are of wax. Her own are made of mother-of-pearl.

Miss Offut was introduced to Chicago society at a tea given by her aunt, Mrs. Nelson Thomasson, jr., in her home on Astor place and at a ball given by her mother at the Palmer House. She was educated at Garrison Forest School in Baltimore and Dobbs Ferry in New York.

Mr. Chesley attended Staunton Military Academy and Georgia Institute of Technology and is now studying law at the National Law School.

Mrs. Offutt and her daughter are spending the summer at their home, Hazelhurst, in Oakland, Md.

Her brother, Mr. Nelson Offutt, married Miss Agnes Edelen, of Baltimore, on May 23, and their wedding was one of the important social events of the spring season there. Another brother, Mr. W. Seymour Offutt, several years ago married Miss Emily Battelle, of Chicago.

Dr. de Bianchi Ill in St. Louis

Minister Postpones Mexico Trip; Will Return to Capital.

The Minister of Portugal, Dr. Joao Antonio de Bianchi, who left on Saturday for Mexico with Mme. de Bianchi and her daughter, Miss Sibilla Skidelsky, was prostrated by the heat in St. Louis, and will return to Washington the end of the week. He will be accompanied by Mme. de Bianchi and Miss Skidelsky.

Although obliged to postpone his trip to Mexico indefinitely, the Minister will leave in September for a cure at Carlsbad in Germany. Then he will go with Mme. de Bianchi and his brother, Mr. August de Bianchi, who has been visiting in Washington, to their home on the Madeira Island, to visit their mother, Viscountess Valleparaiso.

Swedish Envoy Guest At Bar Harbor Dinner

The Minister of Sweden and Mme. Bostrom were the ranking guests at the dinner given in Bar Harbor on Sunday evening by Mr. and Mrs. Frank Foster Skillman, of Cincinnati. It was the largest dinner of the season.

Among other guests from Washington were Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Langhorne, whom the Minister and Mme. Bostrom are visiting; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Sweeney, Mme. van Kaathoven and Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton McCormick-Goodhart.

Will Go to Pocono Mountains

Mr. and Mrs. Lockhart at one time resided in Washington for a period of 18 years, when he was on duty with the State Department. They have been in China for 12 years, returning to Washington every four years on leave.

Army Couple Wed at Fort, Go to Canada

Will Visit West Point on Return Trip; to Live at Fort Riley.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Lieut. Robert Hollis Strauss and his bride, the former Miss Betty O'Malley, are spending most of their honeymoon in Canada, abandoning their original plan to go directly from Washington to West Point where they first met two years ago, when Lieut. Strauss was a cadet there.

They will come back by way of West Point to visit Lieut. Strauss' uncle, Gen. William Connor, superintendent of the Military Academy, and Mrs. Connor, and will go from there to Fort Riley, Kans., where Lieut. Strauss has been stationed for a year.

The weather changed the wedding trip plans. Last Friday, when the heat record for July 10 in Washington was broken, was the day of their wedding at Fort Myer Chapel and the prospect of remaining in this part of the country did not appeal to them. A day's delay was required for Lieut. Strauss to obtain permission to go out of the country, so they stayed over as guests of Capt. and Mrs. William A. R. Robertson, at Bolling Field, Friday night.

Supper at Astor.

Mrs. Robertson planned to go to New York the next day by train to join Capt. Robertson, who was flying there, and the bridal couple persuaded her to go with them instead. The three of them started at 5 in the morning for New York. That night, joined by Capt. Robertson, they celebrated with a second wedding supper at the Astor. The next day Lieut. Strauss and his bride left for Canada.

They will return to visit Gen. and Mrs. Connor at West Point for several days and expect to arrive in Fort Riley by August 15. There they will be welcomed by Lieut. Strauss' fellow officers at a party which is being planned in their honor.

The bridegroom's parents, Lieut. Col and Mrs. Harold A. Strauss, have left on their return to Wright Field, Ohio, where Col. Strauss is stationed. Although he is a graduate of the Naval Academy and served for five years in the Navy, Col. Strauss later went to the Air Corps and is now in that division of the Army service.

Lieut. Hines, Jr., Here for Duty

Arrives at Fort Myer With Mrs. Hines and Her Sister.

Lieut. John L. Hines, jr., who has been assigned to Fort Myer for duty, arrived at the post with Mrs. Hines last evening. Mrs. Hines' sister, Miss Betty Williams, is with them.

Lieut. Hines is the son of Maj. Gen. John L. Hines, retired, former chief of staff of the United States Army. Although he was a student at West Point while his father was stationed here, he has visited frequently at the Capital.

Lieut. and Mrs. Hines have been visiting his father and mother at their summer place near White Sulphur Springs, W. Va.

Among the Washingtonians who are at present at the Greenbrier Hotel in White Sulphur Springs is Miss Edith Clarke, of Washington, who is competing in the West Virginia tennis tournament. She was runner-up last month for the championship of the District of Columbia, which she lost to the defending champion, Miss Mary Cootes, of Alexandria.

Mrs. Richard R. Ely and Miss Louise Ely, of Manila, Philippine Islands, are guests at the Dodge while in the Capital.

The Washington Scene

By the Poe Sisters.

The Pacific Coast by streamline train is the aim of Mrs. Nicholas Longworth and her daughter, Miss Paulina Longworth, who will leave their home in Cincinnati tomorrow for a six weeks' stay in the West. The Longworths will travel by streamline train and Paulina, now 11 years old, is looking forward to the experience as an adventure.

En route, Mrs. Longworth and her daughter will stop off at Albuquerque, N. Mex., to visit Mrs. Albert G. Simms, formerly Representative Ruth Hanna McCormick. After a few days' stay there the party will go to Los Angeles. Because of Paulina's great interest in the movies, they will visit Hollywood and no doubt meet many of the stars.

Journeying up the coast, they they will stop in San Francisco for several days. Mrs. Longworth has not been on the Pacific Coast since 1915 and Paulina has never been further west than Chicago.

On their return to Cincinnati, Mrs. Longworth and her daughter will go to a ranch in Wyoming owned by Mrs. Simms, where they will remain several weeks so Pauline, who is a devoted horsewoman, may see some rough riding and new phases of her favorite sport.

Mrs. Longworth expects to come to Washington for short stays this fall before she opens her house on Massachusetts avenue after Christmas for the remainder of the season.

Mrs. Mary Jones And Mrs. Imbrie Sail Tomorrow

Miss Keats, Descendant of Poet, Ends Visit Here to Former.

Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie and Mrs. Mary MacCracken Jones will sail tomorrow from Baltimore, on the City of Baltimore, to spend the summer abroad.

They will rent a car in London and travel through the English countryside. Mrs. Imbrie has many friends at Sandhurst, the British West Point, and they have arranged for her to stay in a barracks at the military school. They also will visit friends in Hampstead.

After a trip through the Caledonian Canal, they will travel through Scotland and Ireland and then will visit Wales, where the parents of Mrs. Jones' husband have a home. They have set no date for their return.

Miss Aice Lee Keats, who has been visiting Mrs. Jones and Miss Hazel Edgar here, has left for her home in Urbana, Ohio. She is the only living direct descendant of the poet, John Keats.

Skinner-Morgan Troth Announced

The engagement of Miss Louise Converse Morgan, granddaughter of Mr. J. P. Morgan, to Mr. Raymond Skinner Clark was announced yesterday in New York by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Junius Spencer Morgan, according to an Associated Press dispatch.

Miss Morgan made her debut several years ago at her parents' home near Glen Cove, Long Island. She attended Miss Chapin's School. Mr. Clark was graduated from Harvard last month and was the captain of the Harvard crew. No date was set for the wedding.

New Leader Of Navy Yard Arrives Here

Adml. Defrees' Successor to Assume Command This Morning.

Rear Admiral and Mrs. George T. Pettengill and their son, Mr. Willard Van Horn Pettengill, have arrived at the Washington Navy Yard, where Admiral Pettengill will formally assume his post as commandant this morning. The traditional 13-gun salute will herald the event at 10 o'clock.

Admiral and Mrs. Pettengill have been making their home in Long Beach, Calif., since 1935, when he took command of Battleship Division 2, on the Pacific Coast. Their younger son, who is with them here, has been attending Dartmouth College, where he will be a senior next year.

For the last month, Admiral Pettengill has been on leave and he his family have been visiting friends in the East. They motored here from Long Island Monday and will be in their quarters at the Navy Yard today.

Their older son, Mr. George T. Pettengill 3d, whose engagement to Miss Anne Dieffenbach, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hagen Diffenbach, of Newark, N. J., was recently announced, is in New York City, where he is associated with the Central Hanover Bank & Trust Co.

Mrs. Pettengill is known as a charming and gracious hostess and it is expected there will be much social activity on the post when the season opens.

Admiral Pettengill succeeds Rear Admiral Joseph I. Defrees, who left the Navy Yard June 11, going aboard his flagship, the U. S. S. Bushnell, to San Diego to take over command of the submarine squadron of the fleet. Admiral and Mrs. Defrees, who has always been distinguished by her smart and becoming clothes, their son, Joseph, and daughter, Miss Helen Defrees, will make their home in San Diego, where Mrs. Defrees and the family went by train.

Mr. Bellerini Lands In U. S. Tomorrow

Commander G. Bellerini, newly appointed Commercial Attache of the Italian Embassy, will arrive in New York tomorrow aboard the Rex and will come to Washington next month.

He succeeds Signor Romolo Angelone, the retiring Commercial Attache, who has made his headquarters in New York. Commander Bellerini will divide his time between that city and the Capital.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Mother of Three, Who Would Rear Them Properly, Tells Handicap of Living With Husband's Parents.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: After much worry over my problem I am coming to you, hoping to receive a fresh viewpoint, if not a solution of it. My husband is very poor and cannot support me and our three children, so we live with his parents who are also poor, but we manage to scrape along somehow. I have always been poor, but was taught to be courteous and gentle in manner and to find enjoyment in the better things of life, such as music, art, good literature and so on. Also, I was taught the beauty of honest work well performed.

* * * *

I long to bring up my children in precisely the same manner, dedicated to the same ideals, as outlined in your column some time ago by a correspondent who signed herself "Mother of Four." How I admire her stand! But I am hedged about by protesting in-laws, who thwart every attempt I make to teach my children self-reliance and usefulness. I cannot keep at sword's points with them all the time, and yet I cannot give up my desire to teach my children along the lines set forth by "Mother of Four." I must depend upon those people for a living, although I hate doing so.

* * * *

Can you give me some suggestions as to how I may overcome the family's protests, or can you help me to develop a philosophy of life which will make the situation endurable? I am at my wits' end to know what to do. Any help you can give me would be more than appreciated.
Sincerely. PERPLEXED.

A Trying Situation.

DEAR PERPLEXED: God help the mother who must rear her brood under the jaundiced eye of a houseful of know-it-all relatives, be they in-laws or her own kith and kin, who feel it their privilege to criticize her every act and challenge her every decision. The mother who weathers such an ordeal with a moderate measure of success, turning out tolerable worthwhile children in the face of almost insuperable handicaps, is deserving of a martyr's crown and the highest seat in heaven.

* * * *

There are no hard and fast rules which anyone can lay down for any other to follow in such a set-up. The mother who is called upon to cope with such a situation must rely largely upon her own mother wit to help her solve her problems day by day. It has been said, however, that the play bond is the strongest bond between individuals of any age, and I would suggest that you, in this situation, try to be as happy a comrade to your children as you can possibly be. Enter into their little problems; try to see their side of things, try to win their confidence and their confidences; enter into their games, go walking or fishing, or picnicking or berrying or flower hunting with them (since you say you live in the country); build up a mutual sympathy of mind and spirit between yourself and them which no amount of interference can burst asunder.

* * * *

Continue to be courteous and soft spoken; continue to explore the rich realms of music, art, literature, and so on. Teach your children these things, even as you were taught them. Even if you can get only a few words of conversation with them each day, out of earshot of your in-laws, it will be so much to the good. Every constructive thing you say in these years, every constructive thing you do, is seed sown in the fertile soil of their young minds, which cannot help but bear sound fruit in later years.

* * * *

Whatever you require of your children, give them in a quiet aside the full reason, clearly and simply worded, of why you require it. If you explain to them that you wish them to do thus-and-so so that when they grow up to be men and women they will be brave, strong, able men and women, they will almost involuntarily respond—if they are still in their formative years, that is. It may be necessary to take up implements of subtle warfare against your in-laws. In quiet talks with your children, you might tell them how children do in homes where they live only with their father and mother; how they dress themselves unaided keep their things in order; how they set the table and dry the dishes; and that all this is done in order that they may become increasingly resourceful, self-reliant, self-sufficient, independent, and of help to others.

* * * *

You might build in them a desire which matches your own, to some day have a place where they can live in quiet peace and orderly dignity and generous kindly consideration for all; and show them that the only hope of achieving this end is to develop those fine traits of character which you visualize for them. Teach them they cannot make fine dreams come true if they bicker and quarrel, and lie and evade responsibilities, and shirk small tasks—no matter if grandmother and grandfather quite innocently encourage them in misdoing by casting doubt on the wisdom of their parents' ways.

M. H.

And Call It Accident

By Mrs. Belloc Lowndes

Chapter 34.

IT WAS RUTH who broke the heavy silence. "I want to tell you both that I have a good deal of money left—I mean in the Mayflower Trust in London. There is ample money there to produce one play, maybe two, but I fear that what I can't do now is to buy the lease of the Mayfair Theater."

She looked round as she said those words, and felt startled at what she saw there, for the expression on Iris' face was hopeless, as well as desperate. And it was in a despairing voice that Iris exclaimed: "I felt sure something was wrong."

But what was this Philip was now saying? Iris knew by the tone of his voice that it was important, and she listened intently.

"Look here, Ruth! There's one thing I do want you to do for me, and I beg you to do it as a kindness to myself."

"Of course I will, Philip. What is it?"

She was grateful to him for taking this momentous, and indeed crushing news, in so quiet a way.

"I beg you not to tell any one of this misfortune of yours till we're back in London. You see, I'm really in the middle of my negotiations with the Mayfair Theater, and if I can have a little time with everything apparently going smoothly, I believe I may be able to get someone to back at any rate your first production."

"But I can do that," she said quickly.

Philip Gives Advice.

She knew, now, that what she had, and still felt for John Pendervil, had been, nay, was, a mixture of gratitude, respect for a fine character, and pity. Indeed, to tell the truth, she had honestly believed that pity is akin to love. She now knew that the old saying is false as regards the physical relations of a man and a woman.

She went over to the walnut tallboy which stood opposite the four-post bed, and opened the lowest drawer. There she had put a miscellaneous collection of things she believed she would not be wanting during her stay here, yet which she had not wanted to store before leaving America. She had had them packed in a separate traveling box, and they all belonged to her early life. Letters, papers of different kinds, even little gifts she had received as a child, and had not liked to destroy.

And now she took out from the back of that drawer a large envelope, somewhat grimy-looking, and inscribed in a round, boyish hand, "For Miss Ruth Starling."

She drew from the envelope something she had not looked at for years. It was the valentine George Dwight had sent her when he was 12 years old, and she three years younger.

She remembered, now, with a smile and a sigh, how pleased she had been to receive it. And she remembered another thing—she had been slightly disappointed when she had discovered that it was from George Dwight, and not from a grownup gentleman.

Her mother had wanted to put it away, because it was supposed to be close on a hundred years old, and its age made it valuable, as well as quite a curiosity. But she had kept it, always, and as she now held it in her hand, tears came into her eyes.

Memories of the Past.

Round the colored central picture was a lace design, with at each corner a tiny cupid in relief, complete with bow and arrow. At the top of the picture was a funny little cottage inclosed in a heart, and inscribed, "To be let with immediate possession."

By the gate sat a winged cupid in quaint little pink shorts, and a steep path meandered down between two hedges and a little wood. The path was inscribed, "Love Lane Leading to Hearts' Cottage," and at the end of the lane, by a gate, sat a girl in a pink frock, while close by was yet another little winged cupid, bearing in his left hand a torch.

Within a flower garland formed of roses, forget-me-nots and pansies, were the following three verses:

"I have a little heart to let,
The rent is—Constant Love.

Before I fix a public bill
Upon the front as usual,
I think it best to offer you
My dear—the first refusal.

And if a freehold you prefer
And from it ne'er will sever,
Instead of Knocker, fix a Ring,
And then 'tis yours forever.

Ruth knew that the heart, which had now become such a big and generous heart was still all hers forever.

Encourages Women Composers

MME. MANA-ZUCCA,
of Miami, Fla., accredited as the most prolific living composer, is visiting friends in Washington. She has published over 500 compositions, including music for all instruments as well as voice.

Mme. Zucca Says Success Knows No Sex

Composer Says Women's Chances in Music Never Greater Than Now.

By Ethel Ehlen.

CONTRARY to opinions of many seasons, Mme. Mana-Zucca, noted musician and composer, believes that sex is no barrier to success in this day and age. "If a woman has brains and uses them wisely, she has just as much chance as a man, to forge ahead in her chosen profession," she emphatically declared. This is particularly true of music, avers Mme. Zucca, as the opportunities in this line, including composing, were never greater, or real talent as much encouraged, as it is today. She predicts that the future will bring numerous women composers of music, even though there has been a sad representation in the past, and at the present.

Mme. Zucca arrived in Washington today as a guest of Felicia Rybier, famous Washington pianist.

Credited with being the most prolific of living composers, having published over 500 compositions, Mme. Zucca knows wherein she speaks! She has often been referred to as a human dynamo of energy. Inspiration for her work is gathered from varied sources—a parade, a dance, nature, internal forces—and is often spasmodic. Her piano is always near—in the living room during the day and another, in her boudoir at night. She likes writing at night, although many of her pieces were composed in the wee small hours of the morning.

Versatility and originality are the keynotes in the vast library of Mme. Zucca's compositions. "If a person has many moods, why not express them all, instead of just one?" she inquired. To prove the value of the statement, Mme. Zucca has contributed music for virtually all musical instruments: orchestrations, songs of numerous themes, musical comedy, operas, children's songs and piano selections. Her "I Love Life" and "Nichavo" are among her better-known songs. All of her music, both voice and instrumental, is used by leading artists. She is now writing music for a Chinese grand opera.

At the age of 4, this prolific composer made her debut, playing standard compositions and improvisations. And, at the age of 8 years, she created a sensation playing a Beethoven Concerto with the New York Symphony Orchestra, under Walter Damrosch. Since then, she has studied both in the States and abroad and appeared in concerts, as a pianist and singer.

Besides being a musician and composer of note, Mme. Zucca is also a wonderful organizer. She founded and organized a music club in Miami, Fla. (her home), and has been instrumental in bringing and presenting to this city some of the world's best artists.

Mme. Zucca's husband, Irwin Cassel, a fine musician himself, writes the majority of the lyrics for her songs. "Lyrics, like everything else, have changed with the trend of dimes," remarked Mme. Zucca, "while the themes are the same, they are now couched in every day language and are more realistic than poetical." A lyric does not have to be sad to be beautiful, believes Mme. Zucca, and one does not have to suffer in order to write an appealing love song; the main requisite in writing lyrics, as in writing anything else, she decrees, is a vivid imagination.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

New Light on Spinal Sclerosis.

A disease, long known and recognized under the title disseminated sclerosis, has been influenced within the past few years by a special type of feeding. Five years ago two British physicians, Goodall and Slater, attacked the problem on the theory that it might be a manifestation of some food deficiency. They were led to this belief by the fact that beriberi (polyneuritis) is known to come on whenever the body lacks a reasonable quantity of vitiman B, which is present in the germ of rice and wheat.

In their early experiments liver was employed inasmuch as it not only stores but manufactures one or more vitamins. Following this plan a few patients showed so much improvement that studies on a large scale were undertaken. Many of those treated in 1931 have continued to gain and a few have recovered entirely.

But what is the disease? It usually appears in early adult life before the age of 35, and is not due to social diseases, as many have supposed. It is called sclerosis because isolated patches of nerve tissue in both the spinal cord and the brain become swollen; later these areas harden and resemble whitish scars. Degeneration of the coverings of the nerves takes place.

Early symptoms may include double vision and weakness of the control muscles of the bladder and the rectum. In addition, coarse tremors appear in the hand when it is used: for example, on picking up an object or when the patient is asked to touch the tip of his nose with the forefinger. As the disease progresses the speech becomes slow and drawling. Although remissions occur, multiple sclerosis as a rule is slowly progressive and may lead finally to helplessness. In well-established cases the mental state becomes weak and the victims are extremely emotional. The loss of power of the muscles may be such as to make control of the legs and arms difficult.

In their most recent report Goodall and Slater describe their experiences with fifty subjects, in which a considerable amount of fat soluble vitamin was employed, the feeding of liver being continued at the rate of half a pound two or three times each week. Patients were encouraged to carry on their ordinary activities as far as possible. Those who were not able to guide accurately the movements of the hands were instructed to practice simple exercises such as writing, putting together jigsaw puzzles, etc.

Walking Restored.

The treatment outlined failed only in those cases in which the symptoms had been present for two years or longer. In one, a school teacher, recovery was complete after two years; in another, with moderately severe symptoms, the patient now walks well and has resumed the major portion of his duties. A light attack in an active professional man was followed by complete recovery. Of 20 advanced cases, walking was restored in four, the power of the sphincter muscles reappeared in two others, and in practically all some improvement was observed. One in particular, a hitherto hopeless invalid, is now able to walk well.

While the series reported is not large enough to warrant sweeping conclusions, it is of great significance that vitamins and liver have brought about a beneficent change. We must retain our sense of caution, however, inasmuch as in many instances disseminated sclerosis tends to improve spontaneously—only to relapse at a later date.

Know Your World

ALERT, PROGRESSIVE people know the world around them. They keep up on news events, and one of their short cuts is to use a good map.

"What State separates Lakes Michigan, Superior and Huron?" some one asks you with a grin.

Do you "fall" and say "Why, it's two States, Wisconsin and Michigan?" Let's hope you know your map, and reply "Michigan." Can you even be sure just which is the next State east of Louisiana?

What nation lies between Germany and Russia? Do you think of Poland immediately?

To understand the news, to follow the growth of your own country, the movements of your friends—in short, to be an intelligent, modern person, you must own some good, up-to-date maps.

Our handy "International Atlas" has the facts you want in compact form. Ten maps in full color. Charts showing airline distances between cities in the United States and other countries. Up-to-the-minute facts on populations, products, governments.

Sun Shelter Vital Need On Vacation

Gradual Hardening Against Undue Exposure Should Be Long Process.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

THE SMITHS had a vacation of three weeks in the country. In these three weeks they felt that they must build up the children for the remaining 49 weeks of the year, so they went about the business of giving them plenty of sunlight and fresh air with great vigor. All the children, even the year-old baby, were at once put into their sun suits and taken to the beach, where they stayed from breakfast to bedtime.

Somehow the treatment failed to work. Sunburn was the least of their troubles, though the oldest child, who was quite blond, was so blistered that it was years before the skin recovered. The first night two of the children were nauseated, the baby ran a high fever and seemed on the verge of collapse. It was a tired and bedraggled family that finally returned to the comparative shelter of city life

A three-week vacation makes a gradual hardening somewhat of a problem. For the first week, at least, successive hours of sunlight on the bare skin are harmful. Sun suits had better be kept for the last week or ten days, and the children dressed in protective clothing, however thin, except when they are bathing.

Things That Make Women More Beautiful

Fragrance That Will Exalt, the Final Test of a Perfume.

By Mignon.

(The Mignon who writes this column does not sell, indorse or manufacture any cosmetics.)

IT ALWAYS has seemed to me that a perfume should exalt one. After all, it is one of these necessary luxuries that women would rather go without lunch than not have, and there is a perfume now, the name of which promises that you will be exalted—provided it is YOUR choice of a fragrance. The bottle I had was one of these with a so-called "tester" in it, which means a glass projection on the cork which you lift out and sniff, or rub behind your ear.

I sniffed—and sniffed—and sniffed and in a minute I found myself going back for another sniff or two. If that perfume doesn't lift you out of the doldrums, I don't know of anything that will. If you want something more expensive that you can have—a new evening dress, for instance—buy a couple of drams of this perfume and it will make you forget, at least temporarily, the things you can't have.

I think that women are rather foolish to put their perfume on their clothes, although this particular one is very light colored and, so far as I know, does not leave a stain. If you put it on your flesh, the warmth of the body releases the fragrance and your clothes become perfumed without being discolored or harmed in any way. The ideal place for perfume application, I claim, is on the inside of the elbows, where the skin is soft and warm. If you rub a little on your hands and then rub your hands over your hair it will give a very faint scent to the tresses, which is especially nice for people who go dancing.

Neighborhood Manners Held Vital to Child

Should Be Trained to Be Polite Both Inside and Out.

By Margaret Wallace.

MANY WASHINGTON mothers, in common with mothers of other cities, train their children carefully in home manners, but neglect their neighborhood manners.

This is poor preparation for life from a social standpoint. When a child steps out of his own door he steps into a world of other people.

The well-bred child has consideration for neighbors. He will be careful to wish his elders a polite good morning. The boy or girl who would not push past an older person in his home will sometimes make innocent passersby scurry to the curb to avoid being run over by a careening express wagon or a group of roller skaters.

Boys and girls who would not think of entering a neighbor's house uninvited will walk or run back and forth across well kept neighboring lawns, and even trample flower beds. They swing on their neighbors' gates and spread out their dolls on a neighbors' steps.

Query—My small daughter visits a neighbor's children each morning. They have a large yard to play in while we have only a very small one. They invite her to luncheon every day. The mother simply sends the maid over to tell me my daughter is staying to luncheon. I do not like her to stay all the time. I would like to have my neighbor's children lunch with us sometimes. I have not met the mother. Should I call? We lived in the neighborhood first.

Answer—Yes, you should call at once and express your thanks for the kindness shown your daughter. You should invite the children to luncheon. If you cannot invite them to play in your yard on account of its size, you could arrange a picnic somewhere or some other entertainment for them.

Query—The little boy next door rings my door bell constantly. His parents seem to think it is a joke, but we find it annoying. He is only 4, and his mother says he does not know any better. Do you think 4 is too young to teach him to be polite? His elder sister and brother, 10 and 12, watch him do it and do not say a word, but just laugh.

Answer—A little boy of 4 or much younger can be taught consideration for others. The older boy and girl are very remiss. You should call on the parents when the children are not around and tell them politely but firmly that you find the behavior of their small son very annoying. Ask them to put a stop to the practice.

Query—I have two daughters, 11 and 12. Their friends in the neighborhood, girls of their own age, have formed the habit of coming in and out of my house as though it were their own. I find this very inconvenient at times, as I have a husband and two sons. They even come at meal times. Do you think I could ask them to ring the bell and ask if they can come in? My daughters object very much to me doing this. They claim all the girls do it at all the houses in the neighborhood. Of course, I have instructed my daughters not to enter any house without being invited and they abide by this rule.

Answer—Yes, you can ask the girls to ring the door bell before they come in your house. If it is not convenient to have them come in, they can be told your daughters are not able to receive company at that time, and ask them to come another time.

New Transparent Tape Keeps Packages Neat

If you haven't the rare gift of doing up packages neatly, you will find comfort in having among your wrapping essentials, a spool or two of the new transparent tape that requires no moistening to stick loose edges as neatly and tightly as you please. It comes on a metal spool which has a sharp-toothed extension for severing off the exact amount needed.

Other ideal purposes to which the tape may be applied are mending torn book pages, sheet music or other printed papers where it is desirable to preserve readability. You may use it to cover and hold labels on fruit jars or jelly glasses or for temporary repair of broken window glass. There are two less-than-an-inch widths.

Washington's Future Hostesses Learn to Cook

Harris & Ewing.

Home Entertaining Classes Held By 21 High School Girls

Party Cooking Chosen as Summer Project Under Directors of Girl Reserve Department and Camp-Stay-at-Homes of Y. W. C. A.

By Dorothea Duncan.

WASHINGTON'S YOUNG HIGH SCHOOL lassies who are spending the summer at home are not languishing for something interesting to do. These young women have taken upon themselves a project of their own devising and are spending two of their mornings each week with Miss Mabel C. Cook, executive of the Girl Reserve department and director of the Camp-Stay-at-Homes of the Young Women's Christian Association.

Under Miss Cook' guidance and supervision 21 Washington high school girls are learning the art of entertaining, and according to their instructor, are showing a flare of talent which will result in their becoming the perfect hostesses of the next generation.

Party cooking was selected by the group as their project for the summer. They are learning to plan, prepare and serve interesting refreshments for the type of entertaining which they will eventually do in their own homes.

Each of these two weekly classes is divided into two periods—the first is one of planning and the second one of preparation of the many interesting dishes that might be served for an at-home party. Some of the special cooking projects for their summer course include salads, fancy sandwiches, punches and mints.

Their course will terminate in August, and by that time, Miss Cook says, they will be full fledged hostesses in their own right. The girls are planning a party for each of their last two meetings. The first will be a picnic and the second a tea party. All refreshments will be planned and prepared by the girls, and they will, of course, act as hostesses for each party.

Of interest, too, among the summer activities at the Young Women's Christian Association, is the cooking class for camp-stay-at-homes, which numbers as many high school boys as girls among its members. These classes are held twice a week, in the evening.

The first part of the summer will be spent in learning to prepare all approved camp dishes—goulash, baked beans, scrambled eggs, bacon, biscuits, etc. After basic principles of this type of cookery have been mastered members of the class will have the fun of testing their skill in the open, for they are planning for their last two meetings an outdoor picnic breakfast and a luncheon.

Glass 'Rings' Erased By Prompt Oil Rub

If an alcoholic mixture should by unhappy chance be upset on your polished furniture, prompt action with sweet oil can save the day. Otherwise, the alcohol will dissolve the shellac and leave an ugly stain, which can only be disguised by complete refinishing.

Heat spots on furniture will disappear if rubbed in linseed oil and polished. When ink is spilled, use a blotter to absorb the surplus, then rub with turpentine cloth and polish until dry.

Ox-Tail Soup Origin Is Traced to 1793

Noble Beggars First to Use Them for Food.

Ox-tail soup, which enjoys great popularity as "something a little different" in the food category, had an interesting origin, according to C. Herman Senn, author of many books about food.

During the Reign of Terror in Paris, in 1793, many of the nobility were reduced to starvation and beggary. The abattoirs sent animal hides fresh to the tanneries without removing the tails, and in cleaning the hides for tanning, the tails were tossed aside.

A beggard noble asked for and received a tail, which he took to his lodgings and speedily converted into the first dish of the now-famous soup. He told others of his ingenuity, and the tanners were subsequently so much annoyed with requests for ox tails that they put a price on them.

SCALLOPS A LA NEWBURG

1 pint scallops
3 tablespoons butter
1 teaspoon lemon juice
1 teaspoon flour
½ cup cream
2 egg yolks
2 tablespoons sherry
Salt and cayenne

Put scallops on omelet pan and cook in 2 tablespoons butter 3 drain thoroughly, cut in halves, and cook n two tablespoons butter 3 minutes. Add lemon juice and cook 1 minute.

Melt remaining butter, add flour, and stir until blended; then pour cream on gradually, while stirring constantly. Bring to boiling point, add egg yolks, slightly beaten, scallops and sherry. Broccoli Soup Urged to Begin Summer Meals

A DELICIOUS cream of broccoli soup is just the right beginning for a summer meal of cold salad, cold meats or other chilly dishes.

The following recipe will provide just the type of cream soup every member of the family will enjoy, for it is smooth and creamy but not too thick, and the proportions will permit generous servings.

Cream of Broccoli Soup.

1 pound broccoli
5 cups boiling water
1¼ teaspoons salt
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons minced onion
3 chicken bouillon cubes
1½ cups hot evaporated milk
Pepper

Select tender green broccoli. Wash thoroughly in cold water. Split thick stems two or three times. Cook in boiling water in an open kettle until tender, about 20 minutes. Drain. There should be 2½ cups liquid. If not, add water. Chop broccoli, then press through a coarse sieve. There should be 1½ cups pulp. Add liquid drained from broccoli, salt, pepper, butter and onion and bouillon cubes. Heat to boiling, add milk and serve at once. Yield, 5 cups.

Man of House Finds Icebox Thing of Joy

Mechanical Refrigerators, Well Filled, Provide Way to His Heart.

MOST women are inclined to think that the mechanical refrigerator is their own special household convenience, but any housewife who has ever spied on friend husband as he enjoyed a late snack from their refrigerator realizes that the man of the house appreciates the advantages of mechanical refrigeration as much as she does.

Times have changed, but the way to a man's heart still lies through his stomach, via a well stocked refrigerator. When the refrigerator is automatically controlled, and especially when it contains a built-in thermometer, as do so many of the newer models, the homemaker need have no fear of food spoilage, for she has constant visible proof that a 40-50 degree temperature, necessary for safe preservation of foods, is maintained at all times. So she does not hesitate to keep her refrigerator full of the substantial foods that men appreciate—meats, cheese and the like—and the cold bottled beverages that make the before-bed snack complete.

Low cost of operation, together with savings in the family budget made possible through quantity food purchases and economical use of left-overs, are other features of the modern automatic refrigerator that appeal to the man of the house.

Billboard Features Six Live Terriers

Residents of Chicago were surprised, the other day, to see a billboard containing six live Boston terriers. This scheme, which was an idea of one of the largest meat companies which manufactures dog food, was made possible through the medium of air-conditioning.

The terriers are comfortably situated in a roomy shed whose triangular front projects from the center of the billboard. The health of the occupants is assured by the equipment provided, which insures a 30 gallon water tank, blue-lighted kennels, Venetian blinds and a $6,000 air-conditioning system.

Blue Cornflowers Make Bright Patch in Garden

Blue cornflowers and bright coreopsis make a brilliant color patch in many a garden. Both are rampant growers and rampant seeders and there is likely to be need for a firm hand in pulling up surplus plants that are crowding less vigorous competitors. Equally good with the cornflowers is the yellow marguerite (Anthemis tinctoria), with an equally clear but less vivid yellow.

The plant has uncommonly good foliage, with leaves divided in a somewhat fernlike effect and with flowers borne on long, wiry stems, desirable for cutting. A plant will grow into a good-sized clump in two or three seasons, but it retains a compact and erect form that does not intrude on neighbors. It has a fairly long season of bloom and continues as a good neighbor to larkspurs and delphiniums.

FAVORITE FOODS of FAMOUS FOLK

Creole Gumbo as Served in Home of Senator Rose Long.

By Pattie Ellicott.

NOW THAT CONGRESS has adjourned, Senator Rose Long, of Louisiana, is in New Orleans with her interesting little family. It is safe to conjecture that the children are enjoying some of the favorite dishes of the Long household prepared under their mother's direction.

The late Senator Huey P. Long often declared that homemade cake was one of the causes of their romance. Mrs. Long is a famous cook and when in Louisiana no meal is served unless planned by the Senator and the cook's operations are watched by her with care during the preparation of that particular meal.

Naturally Creole dishes predominate on the Long menus. Guests and the family always rejoice when Creole gumbo is on the list of good dishes for the day.

It is made after this traditional receipe.

SENATOR ROSE LONG.

Creole Gumbo.

6 hard shell crabs
1 pint fresh cooked shrimp
1 pint small oysters
2 slices breakfast bacon
2 quarts soup stock or cold water
1 quart fresh okra
2-pound can tomatoes
1 onion, chopped
2 tablespoons flour
1 chopped green pepper
Salt, pepper, cayenne.

Drop live crabs in boiling water two minutes. Remove from water, take off hard shell and claws, remove spongy part, then wash crabs and claws clean, using a brush, if necessary. Cover crabs and claws with soup stock or water in soup pot, let boil rapidly at first, then reduce heat.

Fry bacon in skillet, remove from fat and put in soup pot with crabs. Brown onion and flour in the bacon grease, add okra cut in round slices, stir occasionally while browning. It may be necessary to add more fat while cooking okra. When okra is lightly browned, add tomatoes, green pepper, cayenne, salt and pepper, cover skillet, simmer slowly 15 minutes, then turn contents into pot with crabs. Cook slowly and steadily 3½ to 4 hours. Add shrimp and oysters 20 minutes before serving.

Recipes Using Tapioca Sought In New Contest of The Post

TAPIOCA MAY NOT BE a favorite dessert in every home, but nevertheless it occupies a permanent place on every pantry shelf, for it is a culinary ingredient of great importance. Though tapioca is commonly known as the basis for many desserts, it also is an important ingredient in lending just the right "stick-to-itiveness" to meat loaves, the proper consistency to chilled fruit or meat stock soups and to fresh fruit or berry pies, etc.

For these reasons tapioca is being spot-lighted this week as the theme of The Post's current recipe contest. Dorothea Duncan is asking for your favorite recipe in which tapioca is used as an important ingredient. It may be a dessert, if you wish, or a recipe for some other dish in which tapioca has assumed a new role.

Cash wards will be offered for the five best recipes. The first prize will be $5, the second $3, and the three remaining prizes $1 each.

Send your recipes to Dorothea Duncan in care of The Washington Post, and be sure to mail them in time to reach this office not later than Saturday morning.

Fruit and Ginger Ale Ambrosia

THE sparkle of ginger ale combined with the mellow, delicate flavor of pears is something to linger over and make one wax eloquent on the joys of being able to share in such festive food.

All that sounds very airy and bubbly, but you will think the description quite correct when you have eaten of this ambrosia. All there is to it is ginger ale and canned pears frozen to the proper degree of consistency. It does require a mechanical refrigerator.

Drain the juice from a can of pears and arrange the pear halves in the bottom of a refrigerator pan. Measure the amount of syrup from the fruit and to it add an equal amount of ginger ale; blend them together and pour over the fruit. Freeze until the syrup portion is mushy. At that particular stage the fruit will not be frozen and it is the ideal time to serve it.

Serve the fruit in a dish with plenty of the frozen mush with it and you will feel that a hot summer day has no dread for you or your family. If an extra dash of finish is desired, add a bit of whipped cream when ready to serve.

After the family have enjoyed pears try fixing canned peaches the same way. Either the slices or halves may be used. Pineapple and apricots are good prepared the same way; in fact, any combination of fruit is good to use.

This frozen mixture is grand to serve by itself as a dessert or beginning course of a meal, and it is equally interesting to feature for the dessert with some cream cheese, chopped nuts, or possibly a little chopped candied ginger. Beware of using too much ginger, as it is powerful in flavor and will overshadow the fine flavor of the fruits as well as give too much "bite." In other words, it adds to the finished product in small amounts, but not in large amounts.

Large Gold Safety Pin Used to Secure Purses

Paris (AP).—Designed for summer occasions when handbags and purses are in the way is a gadget consisting of a large safety pin from which dangle two small purses, one for change, the other for make-up. The pin fastens preferably to the belt, is a gold one, and the leather purses are heart-shaped.

Avoid Daily Cooking.

Keep cool by keeping out of the kitchen sounds like a recommendation that means short rations for the family or a series of cold-cut meals, but many women have learned that quantity cooking done several times a week will relieve them from the necessity of daily sessions in a hot kitchen.

Corned Beef In Spaghetti Tasty Dish

Salmon or Tuna Fish Also Blend As Ingredient For Casserole.

THE FLOURISH or embellishing touch that can be given a can of spaghetti is unlimited, and while we all agree that it is convenient to serve spaghetti without doing anything to it, we also admit that when we take an extra few minutes to add the crowning touch of flavor the family respond with joy and satisfaction.

Make a casserole of spaghetti with corned beef. Corned beef comes in cans of convenient size to use and there is no trouble to get it ready—just open the can, cut the meat into cubes, and combine with the spaghetti. For an even more elaborate touch, fry a little onion and green pepper in some butter or oil, then add the corned beef cubes, blend with the spaghetti, and pour in a casserole. Bake in the oven until thoroughly heated and serve with pride.

Salmon and tuna fish blend well with canned spaghetti, too. Select either one of the fish. Again the canned variety is most convenient to use, and mix it with the spaghetti. Arrange in a casserole and cover the top with buttered bread or cracker crumbs. Bake until the mixture is hot and the crumbs well browned.

Combining eggs and bacon with spaghetti is one of the pet methods of serving these foods on a picnic or camping trip. Fry the bacon first, remove it from the pan, and break into pieces. Meantime, break eggs into a bowl, allowing one for each serving, beat until light and stir into the spaghetti. Add the bacon, pour into the hot bacon fat, and cook until the eggs are set as much as desired. This may be stirred as for scrambled eggs, or it can cook through slowly to resemble an omelet. Either way is good. If there is too much bacon fat in the pan pour some off into another dish and save it for future use.

The next time you serve spaghetti try one of these flourishing touches and see if it doesn't make the family beam with appreciation.

New Beer Soup, An Unusual Dish, Growing in Favor

An unusual summer dish and one that promises to become popular is called beer soup. To prepare: Cook ¼ pound butter and 1 cup flour over a slow fire until brown. Add 2 quarts of beer, season to taste with salt and pepper, a little sugar and a small stick of cinnamon. Boil slowly for 20 minutes. Just before serving, add 1 pint of cream and serve in soup plates with dry toast.

Of course, the best-known food in which beer is used is Welsh rarebit. Prepare it as follows: ½ pound cheese grated; 1-3 to ½ cup beer; ¼ teaspoon salt; dash of cayenne. Put all ingredients in double boiler, stir constantly until cheese is melted and smooth. Serve at once on toast or crackers.

Beer also adds an unusual flavor to salad dressing. Try this recipe: ½ cup olive oil, ¼ teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon paprika, ¼ teaspoon white pepper, 8 tablespoons vinegar or lemon juice, 1 teaspoon sugar, 4 tablespoons beer. Rub sides of jar with clove of garlic. Put all ingredients in jar with a cover and shake until well blended. Serve very cold.

Dutch Sampler Lends Color To Kitchen or Utility Bag

By Alice Brookes.

Wise words indeed, are those of the gay Dutch sampler you'll hang in your kitchen, or embroider on a utility bag. Ever so easy in 8-to-the-inch cross stitch, in a gay assortment of colors, or different shades of one color: you'll find it a popular item at a bazaar. In pattern 5600 you will find a picture 10 x 14 inches; a color chart, material requirements; illustrations of all stitches needed.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Washington Post, Household Arts Dept., 259 West 14th street, New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and pattern number.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

THEY FELL in love way back in grade school days, and they've adored each other ever since. Their home is a pleasant place to visit, maybe because the right-side-upness of their lives is reflected here . . . that sort of thing does more for the design of a house than fancy furniture or spectacular colors as a matter of fact.

But their furniture and colors are nice too. So is the house, first of all. It's a made over place that they've added to as they got raises. Not a pretentious place at all, but charming in an English cottage sort of way. The furniture is more or less provincial English too, although there is some colonial maple here too. The ceilings have rough hewn beams in the living room and dining room and the walls are plastered and painted white. Blue and white curtains hang at fat square windows and there are big blue and white plates hung about on the wall. The floors are bare and waxed, with some small Oriental scatter rugs in warm colors. Part of the furniture is slip covered in a sunflower material and part of it is in a plain blue. In the dining room they have both yellow pottery and blue and white pottery for the table. And here the chair pads are in yellow.

Two things we like best about these rooms though . . . one of them is the fireplace which is in warm red bricks with shiny brass fire dogs and andirons and a little low settle that stands beside it. The other thing we like is the way they use fresh flowers in this room . . . always flowers in orange color, yellow or blue in the summer season. And in the winter, they have bowls of oranges and blue grapes.

Fried Chicken Prize Recipes Varied

Mrs. Elizabeth Hawxhurst Wins First Award in Post Contest.

IT IS definitely settled in the mind of the judge of The Post contest for last week that every woman has her own idea as to how chicken should be fried. Take just the subject of the frying substance, for example. Some approved butter, others a combination of butter and lard or butter and vegetable shortening, fat back, or bacon drippings, while others used olive oil or corn oil, or just one of the already mentioned shortenings. Even the size of a frying chicken was a disputed matter—anything from 1½ to 4 pounds was suggested. The oven method as well as the open flame method was favored, especially by those women who liked a large chicken.

From an almost overwhelming number of fried chicken recipes, the following were selected as prize winners and the recipes appear below for your approval. Mrs. Elizabeth Hawxhurst, 3604 Ninth street northeast, is awarded the first prize of $5 for her recipe for fried chicken. The second prize, $3, goes to Mrs. A. P. McPherson, 104 West Thornapple street, Chevy Chase, Md., for her recipe for chicken in wine. The three remaining prizes of $1 each go to Mrs. Joseph Ireland, 719 Third street northeast, for her recipe for fried chicken creole, to Mrs. A. Snider, 116 South Henry street, Alexandria, Va., for her recipe for special fried chicken, and to Mrs. Thomas W. Haworth, 132 Thirteenth street southeast, for her recipe for favorite Sunday supper fried chicken.

Fried Chicken.

Cut a frying chicken into small pieces, legs, wings, two parts of breast and back. Cut gizzard into small pieces, add heart, tips of wings and neck. Put into saucepan with one onion, ½ pint tomato juice, 1 teaspoon kitchen bouquet, ½ pint water and 1 teaspoon salt. Bring slowly to a boil and simmer 1½ hours.

Break one egg into a plate and add one heaping teaspoon salt. Beat slightly. Dip each piece of chicken into mixture and then into cracker meal.

Heat 3 tablespoons of olive oil or other frying fat (olive oil does not burn easily) in a frying pan. Put in the chicken and cover. Fry until a golden brown on both sides, about 20 minutes.

Remove chicken when done and add one heaping tablespoon of white or whole wheat flour. Stir and add slowly the strained stock. Cook 20 minutes. Serve in a separate bowl or over chicken, as preferred.

Chicken in Wine.

Prepare chicken as for frying, jointing to make individual servings. Dredge each piece in flour, then fry in olive oil until brown. This will take about three-quarters of an hour.

Chop ½ pound of mushrooms, 2 sprigs of parsley, a tiny onion together. Salt and pepper to taste. Put this chopped mixture into a pan with 1 scant cup of cooking wine and let it boil one minute. Then add 2 tablespoons of the oil in which the chicken was fried. Pour sauce over the chicken and serve with sliced cucumbers and with small pieces of toast fried in butter as garnishes.

Fried Chicken Creole.

1-3 pound spring chicken
1½ tablespoons flour
¾ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper

Singe, clean and quarter the chicken. Combine the flour, salt and pepper, and dust the chicken with the mixture. Melt and heat enough drippings or other fat to comfortably cover the bottom of a large, heavy frying pan. Put in the chicken, and fry over a moderate heat until brown on one side. Turn, reduce the heat and continue cooking for about 30 minutes or until the chicken is tender. Transfer to a heated platter, pour over creole sauce and surround with rice timbales.

Creole Sauce.

2 tablespoons vegetable fat
2 tablespoons minced onion
4 tablespoons minced green pepper
3 tablespoons washed, chopped mushrooms
2 tablespoons flour
1 cup tomato juice
½ cup consomme or bouillon
6 sliced stuffed olives
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper.

Melt the fat, add the onion, green pepper and mushrooms, and pan fry for five minutes. Add the flour, blend, and gradually add the tomato juice and consomme. Cook and stir until the mixture thickens. Add the olives; season to taste with salt and pepper and serve.

Special Fried Chicken.

Select about a 3-pound fowl or 2 pounds of thighs and breasts. Chill on ice for several hours then wipe dry, dip each piece in beaten whole egg, or milk is nearly as good, and roll in flour. Fry in equal parts butter and lard, or rather brown it nicely all over at a fairly high temperature in an open skillet.

In the meantime have this filling prepared:

½ cup highly seasoned sausage
2 cups coarse dry bread crumbs
2 eggs, well beaten
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
¼teaspoon very finely chopped parsley
½ small head lettuce
1 small onion
2 tablespoons melted butter
Milk to moisten.

Remove sausage from casing and place in mixing bowl. Chop onion, lettuce and parsley very fine. Add all the ingredients and mix well together, using only enough milk to moisten (usually 2 or 3 tablespoons). Form into eight or ten balls and lay over and around the browned pieces of chicken. Add ¼ cup boiling water to pan, cover tightly, and steam over low fire for one hour or until chicken is tender. Use a heavy iron skillet, a large roaster or casserole.

Both the chicken and chicken balls are good served cold with a vegetable salad. If the meal is to be a hot one, brown the drippings from the pan and make a gravy, using about 2 cups of water or substituting ¼ cup milk or part milk and part water. Thicken with 2 tablespoons flour, season with salt and pepper and serve hot with mashed potatoes.

Favorite Sunday Supper Fried Chicken.

Prepare chicken as usual for frying. This can be done in the morning and placed in the refrigerator until ready to cook. For a 4-pound chicken use a long, narrow pan with low sides—a cookie pan is just the thing. Butter pan slightly, place pieces of chicken close together, then brush each piece sparingly with melted butter, pepper and salt and sprinkle lightly with flour, and place in broiler about 6 inches below flame. When browned turn and repeat cooking on other side. Some of the thick pieces require an extra turning or two. About three-quarters of an hour is required for the cooking. After removing chicken from pan, scrape the browned essence into a skillet, thicken with flour, add milk and when of desired consistency, strain. A delicious cream gravy is the result.

If you once eat chicken fried in this way, Mrs. Haworth believes that you will never return to the method which requires a frying pan and an open burner.

Kitchenware So Lovely It's Tableware, Too

Even Mixing Bowls Can Be Used as Flower Pots; Pans Streamlined.

THE newest kitchen utensils apparently have taken a tip from Cinderella and, despite the fact they are cast in a sit-by-the-fire role, are donning the attire of their stepsisters, the dining room elect china and glassware.

In the new lines of kitchenware to be introduced during the first International Housefurnishings Exposition in the Merchandise Mart, Chicago, July 6-18, many dishes designed for cooking and preparing food are so decorative they are well deserving of a place on the dining room table.

Particularly interesting is the new cookery pottery in exquisite jewel-like shades. American pottery manufacturers have turned a trick or two with color chemistry recently and their new offerings are well nigh irresistible. There also is a new dynasty of pottery in complete table service sets, with big generous plates and many quaint designs in soup bowls and coffee and tea sets.

Sets of rainbow mixing bowls are so gay they convert the business of cake and bread making from a chore into a pleasure and can, upon occasion, double as flower bowls.

There is even a new type of cookery glass which can be put right over the flames of an open burner without disaster.

Aluminum pots and pans are being streamlined and given detachable handles of decorative wood as a part of the kitchenware glorification campaign and enamelware has acquired hues that make summer gardens seem almost pale by comparison.

Wash Towels Daily.

Dish towels should be washed at least once a day. Soak them first in cold water, rub with soap and wash thoroughly in hot water. Rinse well, wring dry, stretch smooth and hang evenly—out of doors, in the sun if possible. If this is not possible place them on a rack where air and sunlight will reach them. If daily care fails to keep them white, they should be boiled or sent to the laundry weekly.

Tomato Juice Offers Varied Use in Cooking

Flavor for Meat Loaves and Gravy as Well as Appetizer.

SERVING tomato juice as an appetizer has become so popular that many housewives have overlooked its many delightful uses in cookery. It provides a delicious, flavor-giving ingredient in many dishes.

In fact, when it comes to considering how to use tomato juice in cooking, it is only necessary to allow the imagination to wander and experiment.

Tomato juice may be added to gravies to lend an appetizing flavor or in meat loaves for a similar reason. It makes a splendid base for croquette sauces. Soups of all kinds may be improved with the addition of tomato flavor. In baking, tomato juice may often be used advantageously in place of lemon juice. It improves the flavor of spice cake and many kinds of cookies.

In salads, tomato juice makes another happy contribution to healthful foods, combining beautifully with gelatin to enrich the flavor of the dish.

Since summer weather brings a special craving for light, crisp, tempting salads, you will find the following recipe for tomato juice ring, one which you will wish to nominate for your next family dinner. It is attractive in color, unusual in flavor, wholesome and inexpensive. If you haven't a bottle of tomato juice in the refrigerator now, you will wish to write it at the top of your grocery list today as you prepare the recipe listed below.

4 cups tomato juice
½ cup chopped sweet pickles
2 tablespoons onion, chopped
4 tablespoons gelatine
1 cup cold water.

Soak gelatin in the cup of cold water until thick and smooth, place mixture in top of double boiler and beat until dissolved. Add the gelatine mixture to the tomato juice, to which has been added the chopped pickles and onion. Pour into a rinsed ring mold and chill until firm. Unmold and serve with center filled with potato or any other type of vegetable salad.

Avacado Ultimate In Colorful Salads

If you've never eaten a half avocado piled high with a summer combination of marinated vegetables in color array like an artist's palette, you haven't enjoyed the ultimate in summer salad entrees. The many occasions when this easily put together menu-in-one-dish is appropriate are innumerable.

Quarter slices of unpeeled cucumber, thin rounds of red-edged radishes and small wedges of ripe tomatoes make interesting contrasts. Tomatoes alone are worthy of the whole seat of honor on the avocado throne, or cucumbers and lettuce cubes are sufficient with radish rounds as garnish.

Try the effect of thin, cooked strips of orange-colored carrots with wafer slices of fresh onions as a foil for the luscious green background of avocado, or arrange well-drained quarter slices of tender pickled beets and hard-cooked eggs cut into sections in the center of the half avocado before adding the finishing touch of a tart dressing.

D. C. to Place 4 New Lights For Traffic

12th St. and Constitution Ave. Intersection Gets Signals Today.

Van Duzer Estimates 4,900 Vehicles Pass in Each Rush Hour.

Four traffic-light signals will be placed in operation at Twelfth street and Constitution avenue northwest at 4 p. m. today in an effort to speed rush-hour traffic through these streets.

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer said yesterday a survey made at the crossing showed that 4,900 vehicles passed the intersection every hour during the morning and evening rush periods. Van Duzer said Twelfth street below Constitution avenue, although it is very narrow, is the only through street to the Southwest section other than Fourteenth street.

The new lights will be timed so as to allow 50 seconds more time on Constitution avenue and 25 seconds additional time on Twelfth street.

Four Sets of Signals.

The signals will be operated in four sets. The first will allow right and left turns and through traffic to travel west on Constitution avenue. The second adjustment will let westbound traffic continue and make right turns, and will allow through traffic and right turns to eastbound vehicles. The third set govern right and left turns and through traffic to eastbound vehicles on Constitution avenue. The fourth set will control Twelfth street traffic and operate in the usual manner.

Charles F. Barret, 40, of 1338 Vermont avenue northwest, died in Casualty Hospital yesterday from internal injuries received in an automobile accident on Baltimore pike near Berwyn, Md., Saturday.

Daniel E. Thompson, 42, of 119 Adams street northwest, was seriously injured when struck by a car operated by James Younger, 41, of 1411 Massachusetts avenue northwest. The accident occurred in the 2200 block of Thirteenth street northwest.

Knocked down by an automobile while crossing the street in front of his home yesterday, Milton J. Roberts, of 1223 Eighth street northwest, was reported in a serious condition at Freedmen's Hospital. The boy suffered a fracture of the left leg and internal injuries. James Harris, 24, was the driver of the car.

Meanwhile continuing their drive for safety, one driving license was suspended for 45 days, 12 for 30 days, and 13 for 15 days yesterday when the Revocations Board acted on the cases of 26 motorists convicted of speeding.

Police to Open Drive Against Auto Speeders

Campaign in Silver Spring Is Started as Curb on Accidents.

Montgomery County and Maryland State police will begin Monday a drive to curb speeding through Silver Spring, the Silver Spring Businessmen's Association was informed by its traffic committee last night.

The drive was ordered by County Commissioner Paul M. Coughlan at the request of the association which has complained of excessive speeding and traffic accidents, especially along Georgia avenue north of the District line. Coughlan said he was authorizing the drive with the understanding that there would be no requests on the part of the businessmen for "ticket fixing," the report stated.

The association also is continuing its study of the feasibility of obtaining a public ambulance for the Silver Spring area. The original plan of placing the ambulance in the hands of the local volunteer fire department has been augmented by a suggestion that the apparatus might better be placed under the police department.

Some objection to a public ambulance was voiced by Dr. Claude W. Mitchell, a local physician, who said the fire rescue squad is in the habit of taking accident victims to the Washington Sanitarium in Takoma Park where they are treated by staff physicians and this business is lost by Silver Spring physicians.

The meeting last night voted to request the Capital Transit Co. to label Georgia avenue street cars Silver Spring instead of Georgia and Alaska avenues and to request that buses carrying Forest Glen and Four Corners signs add Via Silver Spring.

Mrs. Mary George Falls Dead Here

Suspect Downed With Flying Tackle In Check Theft Case

It took a flying tackle to stop George B. Burke, 24, of the 100 block Adams street northwest, when he broke away from the police while he was being taken to headquarters to be questioned in connection with the theft of a $667 check.

Burke, arrested at his home with his wife, Elsie M. Burke, 25, started to run down an alley in the rear of headquarters when he stepped from the patrol wagon. Detective Sergt. Elmer J. Lewis, who was on his day off, was standing in the alley and gave pursuit.

Burke and his wife were arrested in connection with the theft of a check worth $667 from an apartment house mail box in the 1300 block Columbia road northwest. The check was cashed for $113 in an Anacostia grocery store.

G. A. R. Women Hold Ceremony At Ft. Stevens

Commemorate Civil War Battle Which Saved U. S. Capitol.

Members of the Woman's Relief Corps, auxiliary to the Grand Army of the Republic, gathered last night at Fort Stevens to commemorate the battle that saved the Nation's Capital during the Civil War.

They gathered at sunset for their rites. The ceremonies were brief.

The drum corps of the Fort Stevens Post of the American Legion furnished the music and John Claggett Proctor, Washington historian, delivered the principal address. He reminisced on the Civil War.

Mrs. Agnes Sibley, department president of the Woman's Relief Corps, had charge of the ceremonies. Among notables present was Col. Alva Braisted, chief of chaplains, U. S. Army. Nearly 100 attended the ceremonies.

The battle of Fort Stevens took place 72 years ago where the ceremonies were held.

Every year the various patriotic organizations of the city hold ceremonies at the fort to keep ever fresh in the minds of Washington's citizens the battle in which the forces of the North defeated forces of the South for possession of Washington.

Officials Elected At Colmar Manor

Colmar Manor, Md., voters, holding their regular town election last night, chose two new councilmen and adopted a charter amendment authorizing issuance of street improvement bonds not exceeding 8 per cent of the assessed value of property in the town.

The councilmen elected last night are Robert Romero, representing the Second Ward, and Lewis Carter, of the Fourth Ward. Romero, who has served nine years as a councilman, defeated Robert V. Yost, 112 votes to 30. Carter, a member of the council for seven years, was unopposed.

The vote on the charter amendment was the second held within less than two weeks. The legislative act permitting the question to be put up to the people was incorrectly worded, providing submission at the regular election the first Monday in July.

Four Streets Ordered Closed After Aug. 20

The District Commissioners, at their meeting yesterday, ordered the closing of four streets in the Northeast section, effective August 20. Citizens will have until the 7 to file protests.

The streets: Evarts, between Lincoln road and Third street; Montello avenue, between New York avenue and Bryant street; Lawrence avenue, between New York avenue and Montana avenue, and Edwin and part of Charles streets, between Montello and Lawrence avenues.

Upper 14th St. Bank Branch Asked by Group

Columbia Heights Trade Organization Seeks Added Facilities.

A resolution asking the Bank of Commerce and Savings to establish a branch in the defunct Park Savings Building was adopted last night by the Columbia Heights Businessmen's Association. The association has been trying four years to find a successor to Park Savings Bank, which failed in 1933.

The need for adequate banking facilities in the neighborhood stressed at the meeting as the reason for another bank. Only one other institution, Riggs National, serves the upper Fourteenth street district, it was pointed out.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, chief of police, as guest speaker, outlined purposes of the Police Boys Club, established by him two years ago.

"Juvenile delinquency in the Fifth Precinct," he said, "has decreased 74 per cent since the establishment of the club there in 1934." Maj. Brown also told of plans for summer camps in Maryland to take care of 100 boys a week.

After Maj. Brown's talk a resolution to turn over proceeds of the fund for establishment of a boys' club in the Tenth Precinct was adopted. Dr. W. V. Connors presented the motion.

The group voted to oppose one-man street cars and to ask the Public Utilities Commission for retention of the single track street car line on Kennedy street, from Fourteenth to Third street northwest. The line serves the Takoma Park section.

Civic Groups Give Fund to Boys' Club

Three Washington civic organizations have donated $800 to "camp scholarships" and $100 for camp equipment for members of the Boys' Club of Washington, it was announced yesterday.

The gifts were made by Rotary, the Junior Board of Commerce and het Optimist Club. The Junior Board gave $100 to the same club, $100 to the Northeast Boys' Club and $100 for equipment. The Optimist Club gave $100 to the Northeast Boys Club for scholarships.

D. C. Awards Contract For Two New Wells

The District Commissioners yesterday awarded a contract for $8,370 to the Washington Pump & Well Co. for the construction of two wells on the west side of Judiciary Square. They will be used in connection with air-conditioning equipment to be installed in the new Police Court Building.

The Commissioners also awarded a $19,300 contract to the W. F. Brenizer Co. for construction of a sewer diversion tank at the south end of Bolling Field. It will be part of the new sewerage system that ends at Blue Plains.

U. S. Health Aid's Son Operated on in South

It was learned here last night that John McMullen, 17-year-old son of Dr. John McMullen, assistant surgeon general of the United States Public Health Service, underwent an operation yesterday in Marine Hospital at Savannah, Ga.

The youth is reported resting comfortably.

Dr. McMullen and his son were traveling through Savannah when the latter was stricken. The McMullens live in the Wyoming Apartments, 2022 Columbia road northwest.

Cyclist Hurt Severely.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., July 14.—Milton E. Marple, 21, of Gore, Va., suffered a fractured skull when his motorcycle went out of control on Route 50, west of this city. He was brought here to Memorial Hospital.

ABC Reports Rum Arrests Drop in 1936

If arrests for intoxication are a criterion, Washington is learning how to handle its liquor.

Reading from the annual report of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, Chairman George W. Offutt told a mass meeting of liquor dealers in the Labor Department Auditorium yesterday that arrests for intoxication in Washington in the fiscal year of 1936, which ended June 30, were 3,463 fewer than in 1935.

The number arrested in 1935 was 22,589; in 1936 it was 19,126.

The report also showed that on the basis of population fewer drunks were arrested in 1936 than in the last three years of prohibition.

1912 Record Year.

For sane, gentlemanly drinking, 1912—the first year noted in the report—wins the blue ribbon. In that year, when William Howard Taft was in the White House, 3,536 persons were arrested for intoxication. That was less than 1 per cent of the population—0.99 per cent, to be exact.

At that time, Washington had 513 saloons. Thereafter, the number was reduced.

Said Chairman Offutt, reading from the board's report:

"The trend shown by the figures is exceedngly interesting and the lesson obvious. In the years 1913 to 1917 there was an enforced reduction in the number of saloons and wholesale establishments, and in spite of this, intoxication increased at an alarming rate.

Increase in Intoxicaiton.

"Likewise when, after 1917 and 1920, the District of Columbia and then the Nation prohibited any establishments of this kind, as soon as provision was made for illicit distribution, intoxication increased until, in 1926, the percentage of arrests for this cause arose to 2.75 per cent of the population, higher than it ever was in anti-prohibition times as far back as 1912.

"From 1926 the percentage mounts until 1932 when there was a drop because of the universal depression. It then mounted to 3.32 per cent in 1933 and to 4.58 per cent in 1934, when in but four months of the (fiscal) year it was legally possible to dispense alcoholic beverages here.

"In 1935 the effect of repeal was felt and the percentage dropped to 3.80 per cent. In 1936 it dropped to 3.09 per cent, or lower than at any time since 1930."

The greatest tragedy of prohibition, Chairman Offutt said, was the effect upon the child. His figures showed that in 1912 no child under 17 was arrested for intoxication, while the number between 17 and 21 arrested was 29.

In 1933, the last prohibition year, nine children under 17 were arrested for intoxication, and 361 between 17 and 21 were arrested for the same cause.

In 1934-35, the number of juvenile drunks here went over the 400 mark, and the A. B. C. board set out to do something about it. Every time a youngster was arrested for intoxication, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, had him taken before the board. Offutt and the other members sought to find out where he got the liquor and then gave him a temperance talk.

"The figures show the result," Offutt reported. "It will be noted that in spite of the enormous increase in population, last year witnessed the smallest number of arrests for intoxication of children since 1924."

The number was 292, as against 422 in the preceding year.

Offutt read from a table of figures on arrests for drunken driving and for accidents caused by drunken drivers, but in so doing he quoted Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer as saying that repeal of prohibition had not affected traffic one way or the other.

The big year for arrests of drunken driving was 1927, when 598 were corraled by police. In 1936 the number was 398, which, though far below the 1927 figure, was yet the highest since then.

Highest on Record.

The number of accidents caused by driving while intoxicated was 235, the highest on record.

Chairman Offutt reported that the number of liquor licensees of all types here was 1,519.

Revenue accruing to the District from liquor taxes and license fees, he reported, was $1,744,015, plus approximately $100,000 in personal taxes on liquor stocks.

The board revoked 15 licenses and suspended 57. In court, however, most of the dealers won out over the board.

Man Seriously Injured As Plaster Falls in Home

Ralph Boxwell, 25, of 1705 Capitol street northeast, was injured seriously yesterday when he was struck on the head by falling plaster while in the living room of his home.

Boxwell was taken to Casualty Hospital and treated for concussion of the brain and skull injuries. Physicians said his condition is serious.

Origin of Capitol Echo 'Solved' By Instructor and His Student

Roosevelt High School 'Equipment' of Two Automobile Headlights, Whistle and Stethoscope Locates Source Near Archway.

The mystery of the source of the echo that rings out through the Capitol's Statuary Hall has been "solved" by a physics instructor at Roosevelt High and one of his pupils.

Two old model "T" Ford headlights, with the electric bulbs removed, comprised the equipment used by the instructor, Richard L. Feldman, and the student, Bent Boving, in their echo-finding experiments. In one headlight was fixed a shrill whistle and in the second a tube to which a stethoscope was attached.

The headlight with the whistle was set up on the marble-cracked spot where the Capitol guide usually stands as he demonstrates the hall's echo. The second headlight was put up near the John Quincy Adams brass plate, where tourists stand to hear the echo.

With the stage thus set for reenacting a typical echo, Boving sounded the shrill whistle, while Feldman, at the other side of the hall, listened with the stethoscope in his ear. By shifting the headlights the whistle and stetoscope were focused at various spots along the hall's arch.

After two days of experiment, Feldman finally discovered that the loudest sounds were received when the stethoscope was pointed slightly to the right of the archway, almost directly above the Adams brass plate. This spot, he claims, is where the echo originates—if the speaker occupies the usual position taken up by the guide.

The mystery of the Capitol echo has haunted Feldman for five years, he explained yesterday. But it was not until July 2 and July 3 that he actually made his echo-finding tests.

Feldman has incorporated the results of the test and the theory on which he was working in a report which he has submitted to the Capitol architect.

Myers Named Counsel For Senate Committee

By the Associated Press.

The appointment of Walter Myers, Indianapolis attorney, as chief counsel for the Senate elections investigating committee was announced yesterday by Chairman Lonergan (Democrat), Connecticut.

The committee already has named Louis R. Glavis, former Interior Department investigator, as its chief investigator. He will begin his duties today, while Myers will come to the Capital later, committee officials said.

Court Halts Pin Machine Confiscation

Company's Counsel Cites $50,000 Investment in Games Here.

A preliminary injunction prohibiting police from carrying out orders of United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett to confiscate pinball machines was issued late yesterday by Justice Oscar R. Luhring, of District court. The injunction was ordered returnable Monday, at which time there will be a judicial determination of the status of the machines.

In a suit filed yesterday in District Court, Attorney W. R. Lichtenberg contended the Pioneer Novelty Co., which he represented, had more than 2,000 of the machines in operation and maintained an office force of some 50 employes. In addition, he said, the firm had invested more than $50,000 in the machines and stood in danger of seeing its investment wiped out entirely if the order to seize all the machines that pay off in slugs, coins or merchandise is allowed to stand.

More than 10,000 pin machines are in operation in the District, the attorney said.

The main contention of Attorney Lichtenberg was that the games were, in fact, games of skill and not of chance.

At any rate, Col. Garnett and Maj. E. W. Brown must show cause Monday why they should not allow the machines to operate.

Rifle Record Set By Co. C Platoon

The first platoon of Company C, Fort Washington, Md., setting what officers believe is a new record in rifle marksmanship, qualifying 42 of its men in a recent match, it was announced yesterday.

The average was 87½ out of a possible score of 100. Three Washington boys were among those who qualified as sharpshooters, and 11 qualified as marksmen.

They were Raymond Davis, jr., Wilson C. Clark and Eugene F. Miller, experts, and John E. Boothe, Norman L. Hobbs, Harold L. Kelly, George B. Kelly, Alfred B. Pettit and Alfred B. Savage, sharpshooters.

Qualifying as marksmen were Charles H. Cocke, Philip Firmin, Edward Fletcher, Robert O. Hammerlundelmer, A. Hennig, Joseph Lann, Irving Mendelsogn, Charles F. Morhan, Justin Pattleford, Carlton W. Pierce, Maurice Sinsheimer and Clarence Thomason.

Ahepa to Seek Shrine Here; Elects Delegates

Two delegates and two alternates, who will be instructed to try to obtain sufficient funds to erect a shrine to their order in Washington, were elected by Washintgon Chapter, No. 31, Order of Ahepa, to attend the national conventoin in St. Paul, Minn., the week of August 17.

Those chosen at a meeting last night were Soterios Nicholson and Thomas Skiadas, delegates, and Peter Skiadas and Peter Dracopoulos, alternates.

Church Will Stage Carnival Contests

Nine contests will be featured at the annual carnival of St. Francis' Xavier Church, which will be held on the parish grounds, Twenty-seventh street and Pennsylvania avenue southeast, July 18 to August 1.

Directors of the event is the Rev. Peter P. Rakowski. A parade will be held in the Southeast July 20. Last year 3,500 persons attended.

The committee on arrangements includes Joseph Steuckler, chairman; Ralph Lord, James Moran, Milton Smith, Henry Lewis and Alice Watham.

2 Washington Youths Enrolled at West Point

No New Tax Measures Needed, Says Doughton

By the Associated Press.

A belief that no new tax legislation would be necessary at the next session of Congress was expressed yesterday by Chairman Doughton (Democrat), North Carolina, of the House Ways and Means Committee.

The leader of the group which handled the 1936 tax revision told newsmen it would be necessary to wait and see how the new law works out. But he added he was hopeful that with improved business there would be no immediate need of further revenue legislation.

Prizes Offered For New Name For Loew's Fox

Management Solicits Aid of Public in Search for Best Name.

A new name is wanted for Loew's Fox Theater.

This announcement—one that will probably be of great interest to every member of the Capital's vast movie-going public—was made yesterday by Division Chief Carter Barron, of Loew's, Inc.

Mr. Barron explained that a new name is being sought for this entertainment showplace because of the many requests for such a change that have been increasingly pouring in since the Loew organization assumed operation of the Fox several years ago.

Many Washingtonians have expressed the thought that the name Fox belongs to an individual and an organization no longer associated with the business of showmanship and, moreover, the city of Washington ought to have a theater with an identity more representative of the Nation's Capital than the name "Fox."

Accordingly a search is being instituted today for a new name for this theater, adjudged by many to be one of the most beautiful showplaces in the United States.

Suggestions Solicited.

Readers of this paper are urged to submit their suggestions for this new name. To stimulate interest in this event the theater offers a cash prize of $5 each to the ten Washingtonians who submit the most interesting, original or expressive names for the present Loew's Fox Theater.

The ten names that are selected will be subsequently placed on a ballot and the entire Washington theater public will be asked to vote on the name to be used. The winning name in this balloting will, of course, be the one the management will abide by in rechristening the theater.

The reader who originally suggested the winning name will be rewarded with an extra prize of $20 in cash, thus earning for himself or herself a total of $25 in awards as well as the honor of having suggested the name for so well known a theatrical institution.

Send Direct to Theater.

Submit your entries in the "New Name" contest directly to the Fox Theater management. Anticipating that there will be many duplications in names suggested, the Fox management announces that awards will be made to those entrants who not only submit names deemed most interesting, but those whose entries are accompanied by reasons of 25 to 50 words explaining why such names should identify Washington's most beautiful theater.

The Fox management invites sketches and slogans for the new names, as well. Neatness will also be a determining factor.

The Fox was opened in the fall of 1927 and until the Loew organization assumed operation nearly four years ago, it was konwn only as the Fox. After the acquisition by Loew it became kown as Loew's Fox.

While the Loew identity will precede whatever name is ultimately voted by the Washington public, the Fox, in name only, has but a short period of life ahead.

What this handsome theater will subsequently be called remains now with the Washington public.

What do you suggest?

"LES MILLIONS D'ARLEQUIN." The Bekefi-Deleporte Dancers, under the auspices of the Community Center Department, present the ballet in two acts by Drigo, with choreography by Theodore Bekefi, lighting and setting by Harold Snyder, with Mme. Maria Zalipsky at the piano; preceded by a concert by the United States Navy Band, under the direction of Alexander Morris, and a brief dance recital of tap and acrobatic routines staged by Maurice Deleporte and Billy Lytell, with Nan Doe at the piano. At the National Sylvan Theater. Reviewed Tuesday evening by W. A. Whitney.

As the piece de resistance of the fifth summer festival program, the Bekefi-Deleporte Dancers offered an unusual production before some 8,000 heat escapers who gathered last evening at the National Sylvan Theater. It was Drigo's ballet, "Les Millions d'Arlequin," a lovely, gossamer bit of tragi-comedy set to music and dance.

A variation from the usual dance program, the ballet (which earlier had been presented as the dancers' annual recital) offers the arts of Terpsichore tinged with those of Thespis, presenting a simple story in terms of music and rhythmic movement.

With Ronnie Cunningham and Theodore Bekefi, as Pierrette and Pierrot; Ethel Meray and Margaret Mary Edmonston, as Colombine and Harlequin; Virginia Barry, as the good fairy, and Walter Dow, as the unsuccessful Leander, the principals stepped through their routines with enthusiasm, with Charles Kay and a large number of ensemble dancers completing a roster of pleasing performers.

Four ensembles were offered, preceding the ballet, by the dancers—a tap routine, a "trucking" interpretation, a semi-acrobatic number and a finale combining the essentials of various dance forms. It is too bad that the stage of the National Sylvan Theater should be so admirable a junior "Dust Bowl," yet, despite the clouds arising as a result of the more violent stepping—here, no less than in the ballet—the performers romped through their short, effective selections.

Navy Band Plays.

As part one of the evening's entertainment, the United States Navy Band, with Alexander Morris conducting, rendered in traditional manner "Up the Street" (Morse), the overture to "Euryanthe" (Weber), "Indian War Dance" (Skelton), "Tambourin Chinois" (Kreisler), "Wine, Woman and Song" (Strauss), and "Minuet" (Paderewski). Between parts two and three of the program, the overture to "I Pagliacci" (Leoncavallo) was played and between the acts of the ballet selections from "Sweet Adeline" (Kern) added zest.

About the Showshops

ONE of the last local reminders of a once noted name in the motion picture industry is about to pass from the Washington scene. The name of "Fox" is to be eliminated from the house signature of the palatial showshop that has borne it since the night of its formal dedication in September, 1927.

BELL.

Details of the project of selecting the new name and the manner in which the public is urged to participate will be found in another column on this page.

The playhouse, now incongruously known as Loew's Fox Theater, after many early vicissitudes, has taken its place among the most successful and most widely known institutions of its kind in the United States. It enjoys the steady patronage of perhaps one of the most distinguished clienteles in this country, including many of the foreign emissaries representing their governments in the Capital.

It was not always thus. In its early days, despite the fact that it was launched with typical opulence and resounding fanfare by that genius of spectacular effect, but not always of business astuteness, the late Samuel Lionel Rothafel, "Roxy," the Fox, as it was then simply known, experienced lean days, with a quick succession of "managing directors" delegated, in turn, to salvage it from "the red." The house never really turned the corner until Loew's, Inc., assumed its managerial guidance and brought to its rescue all of the far-flung facilities and resources of both the Loew and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer organizations, plus the helpful Paramount and United Artists bookings they controlled.

Washington is familiar with the subsequent history of the steady rise of Loew's Fox to a position of eminence among the country's foremost "cathedrals of the motion picture," as Roxy was wont to designate these huge temples of the newest of the lively arts.

Since Loew's, Inc., took command, the perpetuation of the name of the theater as "Loew's Fox" has seemed increasingly inappropriate, especially since William Fox no longer is a factor in the industry and his name on a theater consequently is of no significance to a rising generation unfamiliar with his pioneering in an industry he helped make great.

But the local executives of the Loew organization, headed by Division Manager Carter Tate Barron, have let themselves in for a period of hectic activity in inviting the public to take a hand in the renaming of the Fox. As one who speaks from a keen personal recollection of the overwhelming response of the theatergoers of the Capital when the Colony Theater, out on Georgia avenue and Farragut street northwest, was named by a similar process of public nomination, I can assure Mr. Barron and his cohorts that they practically will be buried under an uninterrupted avalanche of suggestions from now until the closing of the contest.

In the case of the Colony, it took us days on end of unremitting effort to dig ourselves out of the mountain of mail that piled up in response to the newspaper and radio requests for help in choosing the best available name for a house primarily of neighborhood, rather than national, interest and concern.

Good luck, fellows, but don't say I didn't warn you!

Despite the fact that Dominican Minister Andres Pastoriza made oral representations to the State Department against motion picture portrayals of the character of "Generalissimo" Rafael Trujillo, President of Santo Domingo, and the dramatization of certain aspects of the dictator's career were deleted from the latest issue of the documentary film known as "The March of Time" at the Radio City Music Hall in New York, the world's largest motion picture theater, these "clips" will be shown on the screen at RKO-Keith's, beginning today, according to announcement of the management made late yesterday afternoon. No instructions to the contrary having been received from either the distributors of the film or the State Department, Manager Hardie Meakin, of RKO-Keith's, was aware of no obligatory reason for censoring the film last night. Until official objection is made, "The March of Time" will be presented in its entirety as a companion attraction of "Let's Sing Again," starring Bobby Breen, the boy vocalist.

Excerpts from the day's mail:

On the letterhead of the Hotel Harrington, over the initials "C. P.," and referring to the Monday picture of Joan Crawford and Franchot Tone, playing badminton out in their Brentwood Heights backyard: "Sir Nelson: Now you have 'Constant Reader' on your neck again, but explain to me sometime just why those Hollywood 'stills' that show 'sports' as a rule also show dumbness. Here's a wonderful action picture—grace, yes—but the shoes, if not the ordinary black pumps, look it—and husband Franchot Tone, dressed within half an inch of his life; Joan with nothing on and the boy friend with sweater, neckpiece, etc. And where's the feathered ball? Last one I saw like this had Bebe Daniels in a track suit, getting set on the mark, and the heels of her slippers were 5 inches high!"

Sorry, but those "still" photographers who come out from the studio to your house usually are in an awful rush!

From Lycoming Creek, on the Susquehanna Trail: "Regards. (Signed) Frank La Falce."

When Mr. La Falce is not on vacation, he has a writing job!

From Sam Stratton, Steel Pier, Atlantic City: "Dear Nelson: Thanks for the introduction to Mrs. Moore and Dickie. Dickie is having a swell time on the Pier and have arranged a fishing trip for tomorrow. Got some unusual 'shots' of him today and am sending them to you with a special one from Dickie which you might like to have."

It will be recalled that Dickie Moore and his mother stopped off in Washington for a day or two about three weeks ago. This is the first we've heard from them since, but Atlantic City seems to be making good with Dickie for us—thanks to Sam.

$427,000 Holdup Is Declared Solved

New York, July 14 (AP).—Solution of one of New York's most spectacular robberies—the $427,00 armored car robbery at a Brooklyn ice company plant two years ago—was claimed today by police who said 13 men participated in the hold-up.

Assistant Chief Inspector John A. Lyons said of the 13, one is dead, six are serving prison sentences for other crimes and four are awaiting trial on other charges.

He said the two at large will be under arrest "within several weeks," but when they are caught they will be prosecuted on charges other than the armored car robbery.

The police official said John Manning, who was shot down in Harlem Sunday night under mysterious circumstances, was the man who wielded a machine gun in the robbery.

The hold-up was committed on a hot Auguet day two summers ago outside the Rubel Ice Co. plant in Brooklyn. Armed guards were loading an armored truck when a pushcart peddler—identified today by Lyons as Manning—suddenly threw back a covering of the cart and produced a machine gun to cover the guards. Confederates seized the money and made their getaway in an automobile.

Lindbergh to Visit Hitler in Germany

Berlin, July 14 (AP).—Adolf Hitler and Charles A. Lindbergh—two men who pin their faith on wings—will meet, a reliable source said tonight, probably a week from Wednesday.

Arrangements have been completed, this source disclosed, for Col. Lindbergh's visit to Germany July 22 and 23.

Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering, the air minister, is expected to be his official host, and the noted American will see the third Reich's leading airplane factories, principal airports, the Olympic Stadium and the Olympic Village.

So far as officialdom was concerned, the colonel's visit was a well-guarded secret. Attaches at the United States Embassy also declined to confirm it as certain.

1932 Virginia Slayer Appeals to Peery Today

Richmond, Va., July 14 (AP).—As a last resort in his prolonged fight to save himself from the electric chair, Thomas Cole Hart will appear in person before Gov. Peery tomorrow at 11:30 a. m. to appeal for a commutation of the death penalty to life imprisonment.

Hart is scheduled to die July 24 for slaying a guard in a prison camp break in Scott County in 1932. He was convicted by the Scott Circuit Court on September 15, 1932, and since that time his case has been in various stages of litigation.

He was given a stay of execution twice to permit him to appeal and recently was given another reprieve to take his case direct to the Governor. Hart contends he struck Alton Leonard, the guard, in self-defense while they were struggling over a gun.

Capital Talent Turns Out for 'Going Native'

Hundreds of Aspirants for Principal Roles Given First Auditions.

Talent of every conceivable type was paraded before a crowded audition room on the third floor of Loew's Columbia Theater Building Monday night as aspirants vied for principal parts in the fourth annual "Going Native" revue, to be staged at Loew's Fox the week of August 14.

Auditions were begun at 7:30 o'clock and long after midnight Producer Gene Ford and his staff were still auditioning the nearly 300 applicants on hand. Auditions will be continued tonight for aspirants to chorus assignments.

Out of the welter of talent heard and seen on the first night Mr. Ford has already "earmarked" many for "spots" in the revue.

Definite selections will not be announced at least for a week and Mr. Ford urges all applicants to follow further "Going Native" developments on the drama pages of local newspapers.

Mr. Ford is still in quest of novelties and entertaining specialties.

Monday's Aspirants.

Salb Accompanies.

Since Evelyn Tyner, former star of the second "Going Native" revue and accompanist for the past few auditions is now in New York, a nightly feature at the swanky Rainbow Room, the new accompanist is Walter Salb, of 344 Eleventh street southeast, who is a brother of John Salb, well-known organist known to local radio listeners.

Mr. Ford is extremely well pleased with the caliber of the aspirants heard during the first nights of auditions. He promises Washingtonians a carload of fresh faces and sparkling talents when the fourth of these annual all-local extravaganzas is whipped into shape for next month's presentation.

There is still time left for skit writers to submit their entries in the cash prize competition. Deadline is midnight tonight. All material must be directed to Gene Ford, at Loew's Fox Theater.

Rambling Theater Will Open Today

The first of a series of weekly rambling theater programs, sponsored by the Community Center Department and the National Capital Parks Office, will be held today at 2:15 p. m. at Montrose Park, Thirtieth and R streets northwest. The program will be conducted by the Municipal Playground Department.

Three groups of girls—two from Georgetown and Montrose Playgrounds and one from Hoover—will participate under the direction of Maude N. Parker, director of girls' and womens' activities in the Playground Department.

The "Topsy Turvey Tumblers," a group of seven from Georgetown and Montrose Playgrounds, will present a series of acts staged around Anna Leigus, who plays the "strong arm" role. Others participating in the tumbling acts are Mildred Hardesty, Peggy Wilson, Eileen Lennon, Frankie Miller, Marjorie Butler and Mary Walling.

The other Georgetown-Montrose act is entitled the "Three Tappers." Virginia Bradfield, Dorothy McCarthy and Dorothy Jeis make up this group. The Hoover Playground act, "The Girls in Blue," will include Lorraine Howard, who also will do a specialty number; Betty Kees, Catherine Kees, Lavina Skinner, Margaret Helwig, Anna Tomlinson, Rilla Hall and Faith Elliott.

The Hawes sisters, Martha and Dorothy, of Wheatley Playground, will be mistresses of ceremonies.

Mukerji, Hindu Author, Kills Self in New York

New York, July 14 (AP).—Police tonight reported the suicide of Dhan G. Mukerji, 46, Hindu author and philosopher, whose pajama-clad body was found in the living room of his apartment by his American wife, Mrs. Ethel Mukerji. Mrs. Mukerji told detectives he suffered a nervous breakdown recently.

Said to be a friend of Mahatma Gandhi, Mukerji first came to the United States in 1910 to make a lecture tour. He received the degree of bachelor of philosophy from Leland Stanford University in 1914.

Don't Blame This on Hollywood Ballyhoo!

The casual reader, upon first glance, naturally would attribute this display of feminine pulchritude to some high-pressure publicist laboring on behalf of the California celluloids on a hot day. As a matter of fact, these industrious young knitters—or had you noticed?—are New York show girls, whiling away the time between shows on the end of the Steel Pier in Atlantic City. Nils T. Granlund, Broadway night club impressario, is at the bottom of the whole shapely business and his beauties, in the usual direction, are Frances Willer, Jane Grant, Chickie Dodge and Fay Carroll. They are plying their needles, of all places, in the "garden" of the ultra-modern two-story home, erected on the Steel Pier as a Federal Housing exhibit. What! Uncle Sam, no cakes of ice for the young ladies to sit on?

Hollywood

Watching Film-Making.

Hollywood, July 14.

Walter Huston, Ruth Chatterton, Mary Astor and Odette Myrtil are playing a scene for the flicker "Dodsworth." Miss Myrtil, you'll recall if you ever saw a Shubert musical, is the lady who played the violin. She is making her movie debut, playing a straight role, and I recognize her without the violin. I knew her, even though she had reformed and was going straight.

MARY ASTOR.

Director Wyler sits in his chair near the camera and watches the players perform as if he were the member of an audience. Then he moves his camera in for a close shot of the ladies, Chatterton, Astor and Myrtil. Huston is not in this shot.

Talking to Walter Huston, he tries to explain the difference of playing the same role on the stage and for the camera. Huston says that despite the great number of times he has played "Dodsworth" before audiences, he often feels, when doing it for the movies, that he is at a rehearsal.

Huston says that he doesn't miss the audience reaction; that he has played it enough to know where the laughs are. He believes it is to his advantage, in many ways, that he is making the flicker with another troupe of players. He gets new reactions to lines from them. They are his audience.

Huston maintains that he could take more time to deliver a line on the stage than he can for the camera. "The big difference," he says, "is that on the stage the audience picks out what they want to look at—their eyes wander. In a movie, the camera picks out what the audience is to look at."

"Valiant Is the Word for Carrie" is now being filmed, although this novel was once on the Hays' office banned list. The flicker is being directed by Wesley Ruggles, and Carrie is being played by Gladys George. Miss George is under contract to Metro. She made one picture there, it was a flop, and then went back to Broadway and scored a hit in "Personal Appearance." Metro did not summon her. They still went searching for talent.

DIRECTOR JOHN FORD, who did "The Informer," is now busy making a picture of Sean O'Casey's fine Irish play, "The Plough and the Stars." And for the flicker version of this play, Radio has brought over five members of the Abbey Players, who have acted in this play as part of their repertoire.

The five players are Barry Fitzgerald, Eileen Crowe, F. J. McCormick, Dennis O'Dea and Arthur Shields. Shields, who is also a director with the Abbey Players, is sitting in on the direction with Ford. The Hollywood players are Barbara Stanwyck and Preston Foster.

Director Ford has two days of rehearsals before starting to shoot the picture. He wants to acquaint the Abbey Players, somewhat, with the movie technique. Also, he wants to try to blend the mixture of Hollywood and Dublin before the camera starts turning.

W. M. Alumni Affair Scheduled Saturday

Hundreds of alumni will flock to Western Maryland College at Westminster for three days, beginning Saturday, for a special "alumni week-end.

The occasion was arranged so that former students can keep close contact with their school and old schoolmates. Paul R. Kelbaugh, Washington vice president of the alumni association, said there are over 200 graduates of the school in and near Washington.

Parents Asked To Assist Work At Health Camp

Dr. Coulter Cites Need for Co-operation in Fight on Tuberculosis.

Unless homes co-operate intelligently with public health agencies, and camp conditions are carried on throughout the year, children at the Health Camp of the Tuberculosis Association, Thirteenth and Allison streets northwest, are potential victims of the disease, Dr. A. Barklie Coulter, director of the Tuberculosis Bureau of the Health Department, yesterday afternoon told parents of the youngsters at the first visiting day of the institution.

Many of the mothers and fathers had come for the first time to observe how their children fight consumption in the camp, which opened July 1.

Mrs. Margaret Craig Marsh, superintendent of the institution, pointed to the row of charts on the wall, which show the record of each child, and the general summary charts, indicating the course of outdoor living, sunshine and adequate diet.

These children and other members of the family must be examined regularly at the clinic or by some competent physician in order to provide for their protection, he said.

Nationals Rout Browns, 13-3; Half Game From Second Place

12th Victory For Buck Newsom

Obtain Ten-Run Lead in First Three Innings, Thomas Shelled.

Bluege Defensive Star; Stone Leads the 16-Hit Barrage.

By Shirley Povich.
Sports Editor of The Post.

Burying the Browns a bit deeper in the American League cellar, the Nats yesterday hoisted themselves to within a half game of second place in a festive third inning that saw 13 batters go to the plate and 9 of 'em score.

Seemingly inspired by the figures on the scoreboard that already revealed the second-place Tigers' defeat in Philadelphia, the Nats wrung a 10-0 lead out of the Browns' pitching in the first three innings and won the ball game by the ample score of 13 to 3.

The story of that third inning is the story of the ball game. Eight of their 16 hits the Nats jammed into that inning in their greatest single batting display of the season. Here's how it happened:

Nats Get Selves Out.

Al Thomas, a former Washington employe, pitched a single to Buck Newsom. Chapman forced Newsom and Lewis fouled out. But ten more hitters went to bat before Thomas, or Russ Van Atta, his successor, could negotiate the third out.

Kuhel doubled down the rightfield foul line, Stone singled to center, Lary made a wild throw to second on Travis' grounder and Stone was safe. Carey let Millies' grounder skid past him for an error, Kress doubled to left, Van Atta replaced Thomas and Bluege was intentionally walked, Buck Newsom signaled his intentions to the press box and singled to center, Chapman singled to left, Lewis beat out a hit to Lary and Kuhel singled to left to drive in the eighth and ninth runs of the inning.

The Nats finally got themselves out. Lewis and Kuhel attempted a double steal and Lewis was caught at third base.

Presented with his 10-6 lead, Newsom breezed to his twelfth pitching victory of the season. He gave up nine hits to the Browns but four of those took place after the Nats had boosted his working margin to 12 runs. He was the maker of two of the Nats' eight hits in that third inning.

Bluege Defensive Star.

Johnny Stone was the big gun in the Nats' early-inning attack. By the fourth, he had contributed a single, a double and a triple to the uprising, had driven in two runs and scored three personally. Joe Kuhel also fattened his average with a pair of singles and a double.

Ossie Bluege took down the fielding honors with a one-hand stab of a freak hop off Bell's bat in the fifth inning and gained newfound respect for his batting average by drawing his intentional walk in the third.

Newsom heaped the last measure of ignominy upon the Browns in the ninth inning when he personally fielded Clift's ground ball and, disdaining a throw to Kuhel, out-sprinted Clift in a race for first base.

Kelley Is Hero As A's Down Tigers, 10-2

Allows 7 Hits; Detroit's Errors Help; Have One Big Inning.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, July 14.—The Detroit Tigers lost an opportunity to gain on the league-leading Yankees today, falling before the Athletics, 10 to 2.

Beaten two straight in the current series, the A's won easily behind Harry Kelley's seven-hit pitching and a 13-hit attack of their own off Eldon Auker and Chad Kimsey.

The Detroit infield also fell apart committing four errors, two of them by the usually reliable Charley Gehringer at second base.

The A's concentrated their attack in the third and seventh scoring nine runs in these two innings.

Chubby Dean walked to open the third. Moses singled. Auker walked Puccinelli and Higgins, forcing in Dean, and also bringing in Kimsey as relief hurler. Johnson singled scoring Moses. Kimsey threw wild to first, Higgins and Puccinelli scoring. Johnson going to third. He score don a wild pitch.

DeShong to Facee Chicago Sox Today

The Chicago White Sox, who encountered an off day yesterday and watched from the stands as the Nats routed the Browns, will move onto the diamond today for the start of a three-game series at Griffith Stadium.

Manager Bucky Harris will send his leading pitcher, Jimmy DeShong, against the club that has proved more troublesome to the Nats than any other team this season. The White Sox will counter with Vernon Kennedy, a right-hander who holds two victories over Washington.

Eyston Is Dissatisfied With 60 Auto Marks

By the Associated Press.

Bonneville Salt Flats, Utah, July 14.—Capt. George Eyston, of London, humbled the speed world in one spectacular thrust today—but still wasn't satisfied.

The tall, genial Englishman crumbled three score records—every recognized mark from 500 kilometers to 48 hours—under the spinning wheels of Speed of the Winds.

Before the mighty 12-cylinder motor had cooled, the doughty Briton told newsmen:

"I'll be back next summer for an assault on the short distance records."

After three months of adverse weather, England's crown prince of speed sent his two-ton maroon giant streaking over 162.529 miles of glistening track in one hour ten days ago for a new international record.

Striking again while the sun shone, Eyston hopped into his mechanical thunderbolt Sunday at 7:29 a. m. (P. S. T.).

When he, aided by relief driver Bert Denly, also of London, brought the speedster to a standstill today, the Rolls Royce special had:

Broken other records so numerous American Automobile Association officials said final calculations could not be completed for weeks.

The old 48-hour record of 109.54 was held by three Frenchmen—Perrot, D'Home and Girod. The same trio held the 5,000 mark—109.89. The 24-hour 140.52 miles an hour average was chalked up by Eyston himself on this same white plain where Sir Malcolm Campbell, of London, drove his Bluebird at 301.129 miles an hour over the measured mile.

"The car behaved perfectly."

Eyston ordered his car crated for shipment to England. He said he planned to sail from New York on the Berengaria July 23.

Nats' Warrenton Fans Invade Washington for Today's Game

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Warrenton, Va., July 14.—Business threatens to reach a standstill in Warrenton tomorrow afternoon, as the town goes baseball mad.

Some 250 dyed-in-the-wool baseball fans, who have been following the fortunes of the Washington Nationals for lo these many years, will close shop and ride away to Griffith Stadium in the Nation's Capital to participate in a "Warrenton Day" program arranged by The Washington Post and Peoples Drug Stores.

Truly, Warrenton will be a "deserted village," what with the Mayor, the chief of police, all the barristers, the clerks, the grocers, the butchers leaving shortly after noon in six buses and two dozen private cars to watch the Senators and the Chicago White Sox.

State police in shiny new uniforms and white motorcycles will escort the Warrenton citizens to the Key Bridge, and from that point they will be convoyed by bevy of Maj. Brown's Washington minions of the law and escorted to the stadium.

There was a brisk demand for tickets for the game in the old town today. As each Fauquier County fan bought a ticket he was entitled to vote for his favorite Washington ball player. The player receiving the most votes will be presented with a gift at the game.

Buck Newsom, the burly South Carolinian who came within one hit of entering the Hall of Fame, was well liked in the voting, as was young Buddy Lewis, the infield sensation.

The Warrenton delegation will march on the field in a body shortly before the game opens and take special seats in the grandstand. President Clark Griffith and Manager Bucky Harris will be the first to greet the Warrenton citizens.

Walter Johnson, former Washington pitching immortal, now a gentleman-farmer, is expected to present the prize to the most popular player selected by the Warrenton folk.

Patnik Takes Junior Dive Laurels

By John R. Vosburgh.

Albert Patnik, a 19-year-old Ohio State sophomore with taffy-colored hair, turned, twisted and somersaulted to the men's National junior high-board diving championship last night before some 1,500 spectators at Glen Echo's Crystal Pool. Patnik, a Pittsburgh boy who is working his way through Ohio State by waiting on tables in a tearoom, accumulated 142.9 points to win in a walk.

His nearest rival was big John Marshall, veteran Washington diver competing under the colors of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club. Marshall ran up 113.86 points while Johnnie Broaddus, former District champion who came out of retirement for the occasion; was third with 108.07.

One Record Falls.

Patnik missed the championship by a close margin last year at Takoma Pool, but came back strongly this year and was third in the National Senior A. A. U. championships. He was fifth in the National Olympic trials. Strung out behind Broadus were the remaining other seven competitors from Washington, New York, Princeton, Towson, Md.; Baltimore and Louisville, Ky. The Ohio State youth far outclassed the rest of the field.

Subordinated by the national event was the men's District 220-yard free-style championship swim in which 16-year-old Kenneth Kinsella, of Central High School, swim-

Women Tank Team Short Of Funds

All Other Units Scramble for Expenses in 11th Hour Frenzy.

Liner Leaves Today, But Manager Confident of Getting Aid.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 14.—As the zero hour neared for Uncle Sam's athletic Argosy to the eleventh Olympic games in Berlin, officials and athletes alike engaged today in one of the greatest dollar-chases in history to assure a full team of 384 men and women when the liner Manhattan departs tomorrow.

All the posses returned with their prey except for the women's swimming team. Unless Herbert Holm, a little red-faced gray-haired hustler, suddenly runs into a change of fortune, only 14 instead of 18 feminine natators will represent the United States overseas.

Frenzied Financing.

Otherwise the men's swimming team, the women's track and field team and the men's hockey team—faced with shortages last night—obviated the necessity for any cuts in their squads by some of the fanciest, most frenzied individual financing ever known. Some obtained bank and personal loans; others parted with hard-earned savings.

Dee Boeckmann, of St. Louis, coach and manager of the women's track and field team, and her girls set the tempo for the thrilling fund-raising drive. Ten days ago Miss Boeckmann was told to reduce her squad to four competitors. If the girls display half the fight they have shown since then in acquiring expense money they ought to be successful in Berlin.

Holm Is Confident.

"We've got a full team!" Miss Boeckmann informed A. C. Gilbert, chairman of the administration committee, as tears of joy streaked her cheeks. "We're going over 16 strong! A week ago I wouldn't have believed it possible, but the girls did it themselves, God bless them."

The sixteenth member of the team is Alice Arden, an attractive blonde-haired New York high jumper. Until 3 p. m. it looked like she was just going to see the boat off, but she came up with a check for $500, realized on contributions, and tomorrow her friends will be at the pier to see her off.

Holm, who hails from Boston and is manager of the women swimmers, was confident he wil scrape up the $2,000 needed to balance a full budget. This morning he was sure of financing only ten girls. Then Olive McKean, of Seattle, received a check of $500 from home and Holm raised another $500, boosting the personnel to 12.

Officials Pay Own Way.

Louis Doping Denied

By the United Press.

Chicago, July 14.—While Joe Louis and his co-managers made angry denials, a dapper 46-year-old private detective added an emphatic personal statement tonight to his sworn affidavit that the Brown Bomber "had a shot in the left arm" just 20 minutes before he climbed through the ropes to fight Max Schmeling of Germany.

Sheridan A. Bruseaux, prominent South Side Negro investigator, insisted he had affidavits and witnesses to prove he obtained the information of a hypodermic injection from Mrs. Eulalia Barrow Gaines, a sister of Louis.

"These findings are true beyond any reasonable doubt," Bruseaux said. "Of course they've been denied by all parties concerned, but the New York Boxing Commission has the affidavit and it's up to them to decide on it."

Mrs. Gaines was the first to challenge Breuseaux's affidavit.

"I never made any such statement," she said, under questioning at her home in Detroit.

"That report is a damnable lie," said John Roxborough, one of Louis' managers, and the Bomber added his own denial with:

"I had nothing done to me before the fight, no injections or anything."

Bruseaux, who said he had been employed the day after Louis was knocked out by Schmeling, said the Gallant Prince Captures Fastest Mile of Season at Boston Track

Victor Runs Distance in 1:37.2

Up and Up Second; Good Flavor Third in Close Finish.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, July 14.—Repeatedly shaking off challengers over the whole route, Gallant Prince, stout-hearted son of Gallant Fox, stepped the fastest mile of the New England season when he spun that distance in 1:37.2 in the Middlesex County Handicap, feature of today's card, before 14,000 spectators.

In winning, the Belair colt had not only to overcome early opposition from Good Flavor and Synod, but he had only a neck the best of Mrs. E. I. Wadel's Up and Up, that held the place by a head from Good Flavor. Fourth by three and a half lengths was Mrs. H. H. Bron's Happy Helen. The winner was a 4-5 favorite and brought but $3.60 in the mutuels. Up and Up returned $3.40 to place and Good Flavor was worth $5.80 to show.

Frankie Kopel had the winner away winging and going to the first turn he led the parade by a scant nose over Good Flavor, while Little Doggie was in close attendance. Synod came up on the outside then dropped back out of the pack on the far turn and furnished a temporary challenge to the first flight.

Up and Up went along comfortably in third place most of the way with Jockey Haines saving much ground cutting in on the rail at the stretch turn to make a stout challenge. Only a snug ride by Kopel held his horse together enough for the win as the three leaders came under the wire in a blanket finish.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SWEEPING BROOM, $14.80, $5.00, $3.60; MY BLONDE, $3.20, $2.80; SIR KAI, $5.20.

SWEEPING BROOM, under urging early in an effort to keep up, came to the outside of the leaders in the stretch, responded gamely to hard riding and was long in the closing stages to wear down MY BLONDE. The latter, well placed, fought it out courageously with SIR KAI for the lead and despite holding on gamely, was not quite good enough. SIR KAI moved through on the inside nearing the far turn and held on stubbornly in the final drive. SOPHIST, outpaced early, closed some ground, though never a threat to the leaders. BANK HOLIDAY, away fast, was unable to keep up. DOUGLAS F. never was a factor. WEDDING RING had brief early speed.

SECOND RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good far all but Patti. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:52. Off at 2:54½. Winner, A. G. Two-dollar mutuels paid—QUEEN FULL, $11.00, $4.80, $4.20; PANTHER CREEK, $7.40, $5.40; MAKALAW, $13.20.

QUEEN FULL, slow to settle into her best stride and outpaced until the last quarter mile, swung to the outside in the stretch, moved up fast and was long in the last 70 yards. PANTHER CREEK, under steadying restraint early, moved through on the inside at the stretch turn and closed with good energy. MAKALAW, on the outside leaving the backstretch, moved up stoutly and held on gamely under punishment through the last furlong. GRIMALDI, well placed, followed in close attendance of the pacemaker, gained the lead when reaching the stretch and weakened under punishment in the closing drive. ASKARIS, badly outrun early, closed a big gap in the last three-sixteenths. JACK O' SPADES had good early speed, faltering in the last five-sixteenths. TRUE TUNE, well placed, faltered through the stretch run.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:24. Off at 3:24½. Winner, R. W. Selden's blk. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MAPLE QUEEN, $10.20, $5.00, $3.80; DIXIE PRINCESS, $8.20, $4.40. BEDIGHT, $4.00.

MAPLE QUEEN had speed from the outset, followed in closest pursuit of the pace established by BEDIGHT, wore the latter down in the stretch and held DIXIE PRINCESS safe at the end. DIXIE PRINCESS, under steadying restrain in the middle stages, kept within striking distance of the leaders, swung to the outside in the stretch and closed with good courage. BEDIGHT had keen early speed, was placed under punishment and faltered in the closing furlong. ZULU LAD was unable to reach the leaders under intermittent punishment. FLYING MAY lost ground around the far turn. RADIATOR was never able to reach the leaders. LADOGAN was unable to keep up.

DAILY DOUBLE, FIRST AND THIRD RACES, PAID $59.20.

FOURTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 3:53. Off at 3:54½. Winner, P. S. P. Randolph's blk. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—VIGILANCE, $10.00, $6.00, $4.80; MICABIL, $6.60, $4.60; SAND BROOM, $6.20.

VIGILANCE was not hurried early, began moving up gradually in the last half mile, came to the outside in the stretch, moved up fast and was long in the last 70 yards. MICABIL, unruly at the post, took command in the run to the first turn, was rated along in front under slight restraint and held on well to the end, though no match for the winner. SAND BROOM was prominently placed the entire trip. NOTICE ME closed some ground, though unable to enter into serious contention. EDILE was well placed, though unable to make up any ground when called upon. BAY HERO dropped back soon after the start and never could enter into contention. A. O'CONNELL faltered after leaving the backstretch. MALICE tired badly.

FIFTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $1,200. The Middlesex County Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:30. Off at 4:32. Winner, Belair Stud's b. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GALLANT PRINCE, $3.60, $2.60, $2.40; UP AND UP, $3.40, $3.00; GOOD FLAVOR, $5.80.

GALLANT PRINCE gained a slight lead rounding the first turn, was roused approaching the half-mile ground, withstood determined opposition from GOOD FLAVOR and had enough left to hold UP AND UP safe at the end. UP AND UP, never far from the lead, gained clear sailing on the inside when making his effort leaving the backstretch, made a bold bid to get to the front and fought it out in determined fashion. GOOD FLAVOR forced the pace and on the outside all the way, fought it out with good energy. HAPPY HELEN closed willingly. BOSTON BROOK, well placed early, dropped back in the last three furlongs. SYNOD moved up in determined fashion nearing the far turn then dropped back. LITTLE DOGGIE was outrun all the way.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. The New England Confectioners. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:04. Off at 5:05½. Winner, T. F. Swords' b. f. (4), by The Satrap—Golden Fair. Trained by George Mayberry. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOLDEN SEPTRE, $7.80, $4.60, $3.40; POCKET, $11.40, $7.20; STRANGE TIMES, $8.00.

GOLDEN SEPTRE was prominently placed from the start, followed in closest pursuit of the pace established by STRANGE TIMES, wore the latter down when called upon and, hard ridden, lasted to stave off the challenge of POCKET. The latter, restrained in a prominent position, closed willingly in the stretch run and just missed being along in time. STRANGE TIMES displayed good speed in pacemaking and came again after being supplanted from the command and weakened slightly in the closing sixteenth. OLDFIELD, unable to keep pace early and in close quarters, was running over his field at the close. TACK was unable to reach the leaders. BLACKMAIL faltered in the last three furlongs. CYNWYD stopped badly in the last half mile.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post at 5:37. Off at 5:38½. Winner, Carr Bros.' br. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—STEELHEAD, $20.00, $11.40, $6.60; FLYING DERE, $4.60, $4.00; LONE HAND, $5.80.

STEELHEAD, under steadying restraint for the first half mile, began moving up gradually thereafter, closed with good speed through the stretch and was going away all the last 70 yards. FLYING DERE was reserved while holding to a forward position and closed gamely, getting up in the last strides to take the place. LONE HAND went to the front when IDLE ALONG began tiring and though not good enough for the first two, held on stubbornly. COHORT MISS, well placed, was unable to improve her position in the closing drive. CHANCE KING was never a threat. DANCING BOY, taken back of the pace, was unable to improve his position when placed under urging. WANDREL was far back all the way. IDLE ALONG tired badly.

EIGHTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post at 6:10. Off at 6:14½. Winner, Mrs. W. M. Jeffords' ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—THIRTEEN STARS, $14.00, $6.80, $5.80; RAMSHEAD, $6.60, $5.00; OPHELIA, $5.40.

THIRTEEN STARS, kept within striking distance of the pace for the first half-mile, moved up on the outside rounding the far turn, drew into a good lead and held RAMSHEAD safe at the end. RAMSHEAD, away slowly and a trailer for most of the way, closed with a rush through the stretch. OPHELIA was prominent all the way, faltering in the closing drive. MISS DIGNITY displayed good early speed, weakening in the last three furlongs. BABWRACK made up some ground. OFFICE BOY dropped back steadily in the last three furlongs. DROLL STORY never could reach the leaders. TRAGEDIAN never could threaten the leaders at any stage of the journey. CASCAPEDIA was outrun all the way. POCKET PIECE stopped badly after brief display of early speed.

Cubs Shellac Giants; Lead Boosted

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 14.—The Cubs tightened their grip on first place in the National League today with a 6-to-1 decision over the New York Giants, their third win in the current four-game series.

Curt Davis' seven-hit pitching held the Giants in check until the eighth inning, when singles by Gus Mancuso and Joe Moore, and Mel Ott's slow bounder brought in the only New York run.

Hal Schumacher was touched for ten hits in the seven innings he worked, and was charged with the defeat, his eighth against as many victories.

Ross, Furr's Foe, Has Horatio Alger Life Story

BoyhoodFoes Made 'Sissy' A Fighter

Welter Champ Who Faces D.C. Rival July 22 Had Hard Life.

By Bill McCormick.

The life story of Barney Ross, welterweight champion of the world, who fights District Welterweight Champion Phil Furr at Griffith Stadium July 22, has all the elements that would have made a great "rags-to-riches" story for Horatio Alger, jr.

The ruler of the 147-pound division who appears on the three-star show of champions for the benefit of the Summer Camp Fund, was born in poverty. He was raised in a tough neighborhood. He saw his father shot down by hold-up men when he was only a kid. Through all of this—and much more grief and woe—he remained a perfect little gentleman—and came out on the very top of the heap.

Barney was christened Barnet David Rasofsky and first saw the light of day as it seeped through the dirty windows of a tenement house on New York's lower East Side.

Barney Goes West.

When the champion was 1 year old, Papa Rasofsky decided to follow the advice of Horace Greeley, packed up his belongings and the Rasofsky kids—and moved to Chicago.

Soon Papa had a grocery store. A neighborhood grocery store in a very tough part of the Windy City, but a living, nevertheless. As Barney began to grow, both Papa and Mama Rasofsky became convinced that their son would be either a writer, painter, musician or scholar of great note.

"Look, mama," Papa Rasofsky would point out to Mama Rasofsky, "our little David, he is such a gentleman, such a kind boy; he will not grow up like other tough boys in this neighborhood."

"Let's beat up that little sissy Jew kid," they would decide every time Barney hove in sight.

Learns to Fight.

At first Barney would run, but he soon developed a fistic proficiency that later was to carry him to great heights. Being able to win the respect and admiration of the neighborhood boys with his fists did not change Barney's disposition, however. He remained just as much the perfect little gentleman as he ever had been—and was just as determined to get an education.

Helping papa as an errand boy enabled him to make his way through grade school and later through high school. It was while he was in the first year of high school that life dealt him the most crushing blow.

Two masked bandits entered his father's store while Barney was present. They covered Papa Rasofsky and his son with revolver, looted the cash drawer and turned to leave. At the door one of them, probably crazed by drugs, shot down Papa Rasofsky, who died almost immediately.

Much of the burden of raising the family then fell on Barney. Davey Miller, then Chicago's most prominent fight referee, had heard of the fistic prowess of the little fellow and finally persuaded him to become a fighter.

Barney sailed through the Golden Gloves tournament, then, after passing from hand to hand, finally came under the joint management of Sam Pian and Art Winch, who later guided him to the great heights he has reached.

For a number of years Ross has been voted the fighter who has done the most for the fight game in a Nation-wide poll of sports scribes. He has accomplished things that no other fighter ever has accomplished. And he is today the same quiet, unassuming little fellow whom Mama and Papa Rasofsky thought one day would be a great writer, artist, musician or scholar.

Furr Seeks Relaxation Before Ross Battle

Patnik Captures Junior Dive Title

ming for the Central Y. M. C. A., won the title held by Ernie Boggs, who did not defend his time. Kinsella missed equaling the District record by approximately a second. Harvey Deering, of Northeast Boys Club, was a close second.

One record fell during the afternoon, as Margaret Hoffman, former Olympic swimmer, sped over the 120-yard breaststroke distance in 1:41.4 to break her own record of 1:42. Margaret Russell, clever Baltimore miss, was a creditable runner-up.

Of the 11 events on the program yesterday, Washington entrants took 7 first places

Miss Thomas won the girls' 60-yard freestyle and women's novice 60-yard free while young Gibson won the boys' 60-yard free and the men's 150-yard backstroke.

Girls' Events.

60-yard free style—Won by Nan Thomas (Gibson Island S. C.); second, B. Lussier (Camp Hunting Field); third, B. Lussier. Time, 38.4 secs.

Boys' Events.

60-yard back stroke—Won by Roy Gibson (Washington Junior Y. M. C. A.); second E. Blumberg (Baltimore Y. M. H. A.); third, C. Schaberle (York, Pa., Y. M. C. A.). Time, 37.8 secs.

Women's Events.

60-yard free style—Won by Ann Bono (Shoreham); second, Ann Aronson (Ambassador); third, Margaret Russell (Baltimore). Time, 38.8 secs.

60-yard novice free style—Won by Nann Thomas (Gibson Isle, S. C.); second, Florence Farwell (Shoreham); third, Gertrude Theunissen (Shoreham). Time, 39.6 secs.

120-yard breaststroke—Won by Margaret Hoffman (Washington); second, Margaret Russell (Baltimore); third, Mabel Yost (Baltimore). Time, 1:41.4. (New District record; former record, 1:42, held by Miss Hoffman.)

Men's Events.

60-yard free style—Won by Robert Jordan (Ambassador); second, William Melinnis (Baltimore Y. M. C. A.); third, L. Adler (Baltimore Y. M. H. A.). Time, 31.2 secs.

Muny Golfers To Be Feted Tonight

Cox, Gartside Will Speak; Ceremonies at East Potomac.

Wiffy Cox, Kenwood Golf and Country Club professional, and Frank Gartside, acting superintendent of public parks, will head tonight's program at East Potomac's golf course in honor of Washington's four municipal stars who will compete in the National Public Links Championship at Farmingdale, Long Island, next week.

Claude Rippy, District public links champion and captain of the Harding Cup team for the second straight season; Ted Burrows, Bobby Burton and Pat Axtell are the golfers who will be given a royal sendoff by some 500 municipal followers.

The program will start at 9 o'clock. A special dais has been erected near the driving range, and the voices of the speakers will be carried into a high-powered microphone.

Rippy, who shot a sensational 274, 10 under par, to win the District municipal title recently, will be presented with the S. G. Leoffler Trophy. Other prizes will be awarded the members of the team. Leoffler, who is sending the four players to Farmingdale; Harry Graham, East Potomac manager; Ed Burns, Rock Creek manager; Mel Shorey, East Potomac, pro, and T. Welby Kines, East Potomac Club president, also will have a part on the program.

The players will leave either tomorrow or Friday to tune up for the Public Links classic.

COLUMBIAN LEAGUES.

The Connecticut Yankees defeated Lasky's Ice Cream Co., 9 to 5, yesterday in a Columbian League game on No. 9 Diamond, West Potomac Park. Randle and Barvin Real Estate won the championship of the Insect class for the first half of the schedule although the team did not play. Randle's nearest rival, Anacostia, lost to Alban Towers, 5 to 1, thereby allowing Randle to clinch the title.

Nats Meet Indians In 2 Games Sunday

Washington's first and probably only Sunday double-header of the season has been scheduled for next Sunday when the Nats will meet the Cleveland Indians in a pair of contests.

Originally scheduled to play only two games here during their two-day visit, the Indians will be playing off a contest postponed by rain early in the season.

On Saturday, the American Legion will sponsor "Buddy Lewis Day," with the Indians also as the invading club. Young Lewis is a graduate of the American Legion Junior Baseball series, starring at Gastonia, N. C. A delegation of fans, including his father and mother, are expected to make the trip from Gastonia for the ceremonies.

Commander Joseph J. Malloy, department commander of the American Legion of the District, will present Lewis with a gift from the Legion at home plate before the game.

Olson, Coleman Draw New Foes for Mat Card

A change in the preliminary program supporting the Ivan Managoff-Ernie Dusek feature bout tomorrow night was announced last night by Promoter Joe Turner.

Originally scheduled to oppose Abe Coleman in a 30-minute contest Cliff Olson will have as his opponent 265-pound Tex Morgan. Olson and Morgan were interrupted by police in a bout at Camden, N. J., recently when they became too pugnacious.

Coleman will have as his opponent Little Beaver, exponent of the rough-and-tumble school of wrestling

Angott Gets Verdict.

New York, July 14 (AP).—Sammy Angott, 126¾, Pittsburgh, outpointed Victor Vallee, 127, Puerto Rico, in the six-round main bout at the New York Coliseum tonight.

Benefit Game.

A baseball game for the benefit of Buster Sprague, Procurement Division player, who was injured in the league opener back in April, will be played Saturday night at Ballston at 8:30.

Tickets will be sold for 35 cents.

Phillips Is Chosen For Olympic Trip

Bernath E. Phillips, associate director of physical education at the Central Y. M. C. A. for the past six years, leaves today for the Olympic games in Berlin aboard the U. S. S. Manhattan. Phillips is one of the six graduate students chosen from universities in America to collaborate with 21 American physical education students in giving demonstrations and conducting discussions of various sports before the International Sports Education Congress.

Phillips is a graduate of George Washington University, Class of 1935, and is now studying for his master's degree. He was an athlete at Hagerstown, Md., High School. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene J. Phillips, of Hagerstown. Phillips was selected by the Olympic commite in April, the only representative from the Middle Atlantic States.

JEWELERS vs. INDIAN HEAD.

DUNBAR TENNIS CHAMPION.

Truitt Venson retained his Dunbar Playground [illegible] yesterday by defeating Jay Barnes in the final round of the tournament, 6—2, 8—6.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Petey Sarron's $100 donation to the sadly lacking American Olympic fund comes as no surprise . . . a tender heart beats within the fighting frame of the fighting champion of the world's featherweights . . . for the past three years the underprivileged children and needy families of Alexandria, Va., have shared his Christmas cheer . . . heaping baskets of food made ready at Sarron's home have been theirs unfailingly for the taking . . . Ma Sarron, Pa Sarron and six brothers and sisters owe their improved station in life to the prize-ring earnings of little Petey . . . he's a soft touch for the deserving needy.

POVICH.

Things have come to a pretty pass up in Boston where the Red Sox have come up with the prize flop of the 1936 season . . . he is Outfielder Roger ("Doc") Cramer, who hit .340 for the Athletics last year and is now batting only .233 . . . Cramer, one of the most feared hitters in the league in 1935, has been demoted to eighth place in Joe Cronin's batting order . . . Boston fans are not lavishing their praises on Jimmy Foxx, either, despite his impressive home-run total . . . Foxx's habit of striking out with men on bases have cooled 'em off.

Lou Meyer, three-time winner of the 500-mile Indianapolis automobile classic, has six toes on his right, or accelerator foot . . . in racing parlance he's known as a heavy-footed driver . . . meaning he keeps the accelerator down to the floor board in his search for speed . . . Washington's George Preston Marshall, president of the new Roosevelt Raceway at Westbury, Long Island, doesn't know how to drive an automobile . . . the architect for the Roosevelt Raceway track was Mark Lilienthal, who drew up the plans for the Bennings race track, which were blasted at the last session of Congress.

When Barney Ross crawls through the ropes at Griffith Stadium Monday night for his battle with Phil Furr, Washington fans will see one of the really great fighting machines of prize-ring history . . . he will renew his friendship here with Ray Alvis, manager of the goofy Walkathon show at Turner's Arena . . . Alvis was the first manager of Ross after he came out of the amateurs and turned him loose because he'd never make a fighter . . . since then, Ross has accumulated more than a half-million in purses . . . and won't step in a ring anywhere for less than $5,000 . . . posted at a bank in his name before he goes into training.

Four teams are now in front of the backsliding Boston Red Sox, who skidded into fifth place yesterday . . . New slogan suggested for the Red Sox: "Half a league onward" . . . Tom Yawkey says he is satisfied with the Red Sox . . . which makes him not only the most easily satisfied club owner in baseball, but the most philosophical . . . Speaking of the Yankees' slump, which shows five defeats in their last seven games, how about the slump of the Red Sox, who have lost 20 of their last 29? . . . there is still a great chance for the poverty-stricken Boston Bees to finish higher in the National League than the Red Sox finish in the American.

A bankers' survey of the sports industry estimates that $1,000,000,000 is spent yearly on sports . . . fishing is listed as the most popular sport in the United States with an estimated 6,000,000 persons obtaining licenses annually and possibly twice that number actually fishing . . . next in numerical importance is billiards with 8,000,000 participating . . . ping pong and trap shooting are listed as having 5,000,000 followers each . . . the U. S. L. T. A. puts the number of tennis players at 3,000,000 to 4,000,000 . . . and the magazine Golfdom estimates that there are some 2,000,000 golfers on the country's 5,700 golf courses.

Basketball outnumbers all other sports in point of paid admissions, according to the survey . . . attendance at basketball games during an average year recently totaled approximately 80,000,000 . . . baseball drew 50,000,000; football attracted 40,000,000; boxing, 25,000,000 and horse racing, 22,000,000 . . . wrestling drew 7,500,000 through the gate and hockey, 6,000,000 . . . golf was the poorest spectator sport, drawing galleries that totaled only 200,000 . . . but the golfers' annual outlay of $116,000,000 for club dues, green fees, equipment and caddy fees amounts to more than 15 per cent of the total national sports bill.

Clark Griffith predicted the slump of the Yankees when they were leading the league by 11 games . . . but it was at this time last season that Griffith prophesied that the Tigers would not win the 1935 pennant . . . Ossie Bluege may have slowed on the base paths, but he still holds the enviable record of never being thrown out at home on an attempt to score from second base on a single over a period of eight years . . . Young Buddy Lewis is so bogged down by the heat and his daily play that he weighs less than he did when he was 16 years old.

U. S. to Meet Tough Foes in All Field Events

Task Is Hard Despite Six Champs

Japan, Finland to Give Sturdy Competition All Along Line.

(Note: This is the second of two stories on American Olympic track and field prospects by the Associated Press sports editor, who has covered the last three Olympiads and will accompany the U. S. team to Berlin.)

By Alan Gould.

Associated Press Sports Editor.

New York, July 14.—Although the United States track and field team include athletes who have broken world records in six of nine field events, including the decathlon, this amazing prowess carries no guarantee of Olympic triumph winners in all but the hop, step with it.

The Americans have potential and jump and the javelin throw, but they will meet sturdy competition right down the line. Japan will furnish outstanding challengers to our jumpers and vaulters, although no son of Nippon has shown himself to be in the same class with Jesse Owens this year. Germany, despite setbacks, has developed potential winners in the shotput, discus, hammer and javelin. Finland and Sweden likely will score well in a number of field events, especially the javelin and discus.

Latest reports indicate foreign favorites have been having as much trouble regaining top form as many of America's stars. Germany appears to have lost Hans Sievert, whose world decathlon record was broken by Colorado's Glenn Morris in the final American tryouts. Sievert, as well as Gerhard Stoeck, 242-foot javelin tosser, has not recovered fully from injuries.

Finland, which finished 1-2-3 in the 1932 Olympic javelin competition, will not rely entirely on the world record holder and defending champion, Matti Jarvinen. The Finnish ace beat his own world mark recently with a 253-foot throw but he trailed his countryman, Nikkanen, in the final tryouts. Nikkanen won at 227 feet 1¼ inches while Jarvinen apparently was content to qualify in second place, at 221 feet 9½ inches. Germany's Gottfried Wiemann, fourth in the last Olympics, displayed improvement by winning the German tryouts with a mark of 237 feet, Lee Bartlett and Alton Terry, the best American prospects, have bettered 223 and 226 feet, respectively, this year.

Jack Torrance, Louisiana's world record-holding shotputter, will have to stage a big comeback if he hopes to beat European rivals. Torrance, handicapped by a sore shoulder, has had trouble hitting 52 feet all year. Sulo Baerlund topped Finland's tryouts at 52 feet 3 inches. Hans Woelike, of Germany, tossed the weight 52 feet ¼ inch in his final test but has bettered 54 feet.

Japan's Chuhei Nambu, listed world record holder in both broad jump and hop, step and jump, will not be an Olympic competitor but Japan is stronger than ever in the events requiring agility.

Two 14-foot pole vaulters, Suyeo Oye and Shuhei Nishida, the latter runner-up in 1932, will challenge the Southern California trio of Bill Graber, Earle Meadows and Bill Sefton. Oye did 14.3 in the tryouts and is credited with an informal mark of 14.6. Nishida did 14½ in the last Olympics.

America's record-shattering Negro high jumpers, Cornelius Johnson and Dave Albritton, dominate this specialty, but Japan has two athletes who have bettered 6 feet 7 inches. Finland's veteran, Kaleri Kotkas, served notice of his challenge by clearing 6 feet 7 15-16 inches in the final tryouts.

Japan has concentrated so much on the hop, step and jump, which it won in 1928 and 1932, that the Nipponese have neglected the broad jump. Germany, however, may furnish a rival for Owens in Lutz Long, who won the Teuton tryouts at 25.7⅞.

Kenkicki Oshima, the Japanese captain, appears to have only Australia's Jack Metclafe to worry about in the triple jump. Both have bettered the world record, with marks of 51 feet 10⅛ inches and Masao Harada has done 51:8. The trio of American entries, from Louisiana, may be lucky to score at Berlin.

The main menace to our trio of hammer-hurling New Englanders, Hank Dreyer, Bill Rowe, and Don Favor, seems to be the German star, Erich Hein. In the final tryouts Hein achieved 178 feet ¼ inch, a mark that only Dreyer has bettered. The two-time Olympic champion, Dr. Patrick O'Callaghan, of Ireland, is not slated to defend the title, but the veteran Finn, Porhola, may be back.

American discus-tossers, led by slinger Dunn and Ken Carpenter, were off-form in the final tryouts, but can take encouragement from latest foreign reports. Sweden's Harald Anderson, the record-holder, and Germany's Willi Schroder, who claims a new world mark of 174 feet 2¾ inches, disappointed their followers in the tryouts. Schroeder's best measured 160 feet 9 inches.

In the decathlon, it is expected Finland's Akilles Jarvinen, runner-up to Jim Bauson at Los Angeles, will be formost among the Berlin rivals of the new American champion, Morris.

8 Playground Girls Advance In Net Play

Misses Decker, Janney, Lannon and Duffy Score Handily.

Clean-cut, smashing victories yesterday sent Charlotte Decker, of Janney; Eileen Lannon, of Montrose, and Margaret Duffy and Valerie Loomis, of Chevy Chase, into the final round of 16 in the Northwest section of the District girls' playground tennis championship.

They will oppose 4 players from tournaments being held at Takoma Park and Rosedale playgrounds.

The remaining 8 will compete Friday at Chevy Chase.

Exhibiting the same brand of tennis that carried her into the semifinals last year, Miss Decker defeated Helen Miller, 6—2, 6—2. The Janney ace last year carried Champion Willie O'Steen to three sets last year before losing.

Eileen Lennon and Anna Leigus, of Georgetown, had a stern match, with the former winning 7—5, 2—6, 6—4.

Valorie Loomis advanced with a 6—1, 6—2 victory over Betty Jacobs, of Montrose. Miss Loomis, a newcomer to playground tennis, swept past theetaoi shro cmf shr cmf dlnn past the sister of Happy Jacobs, well-known local player, with a steady service and smashing forehand drive.

Virginia Hunter, of Twin Oaks, was the first to enter the Takoma Park quartet which will move over to Chevy Chase. She defeated Eleanor Yoder, of Raymond, 6—4, 6—4. Three other posts will be decided today in the matches between Margaret Gray, of Twin Oaks, and Irma Williard, of Takoma Park; Barbar Boose, of Takoma Park and Mary Gray, and Edith Goodwin, of Phillips, and Hazel Bishop, of Takoma.

Upsets Feature Eastern Clay Courts Play

McNeil Eliminates Sutter While Law Ousts Gene Smith.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 14.—Two upsets marked the fourth day's play in the ninth Eastern men's clay court tennis championships as a heavy rainstorm ended the afternoon's play ahead of time.

Don McNeil, a freshman at Kenyon College, Gambier, Ohio, eliminated Ernest Sutter, the national intercollegiate champion from Tulane and third-seeded player in the tournament, 6—2, 2—6, 6—4, in his first-round match. John Law, of Stanford, recorded the other upset by defeating the ninth-seeded player, Gene Smith, of the University of California, 7—5, 6—3.

Others Advance.

Other seeded players advanced easily, but there were two unexpected results otherwise. Ramsay Potts, of Memphis, and Fernandez Morrell, of Cuba, a Georgia Tech player, both late arrivals for the tourney, were eliminated in the first and second rounds, respectively. Potts was tripped up by George Pryor, a Kenyon teammate of McNeil, 8—6, 6—3. Morrell, top seeded on the foreign list and last survivor of that group of five, won his opening match from John Del Valle, Hollywood, Calif., 6—0, 6—2, but lost his second to Paul Rittenhouse, New York, 7—5, 1—6, 6—4.

Robert Riggs, of Los Angeles, and J. Gilbert Hall, of South Orange, N. J., first and second seeded stars, advanced to the fourth round with straight-set victories. Riggs defeated William Thompson, Brooklyn, 6—2, 6—3, and Hall disposed of Harry Pagel, Jackson Heights, 6—1, 6—2.

Louis Zamperini Gets Check From Home for Track Victory

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, July 14.—Young Louis Zamperini lost little time wiring his family here after running a dead heat for first place with Indiana's Don Lash in the 5,000 meter grind in the Olympic tryouts at New York Sunday.

Sent collect, the message read:

"Send the money and I'll run faster in Berlin."

"The money," promised to 19-year-old Louis if he won a place on the American team, was promptly forwarded East.

Louis, born in Oleon, N. Y., but raised in nearby Torarnce, had great hopes of his chances when he entered the race. His friends back home had promised to toast him with a sip of wine on each lap.

Louis advised the homefolks by letter:

"Tell Joe to keep his mouth in the jug on the last lap because I'm going to run so fast he'll have to take a quick swallow."

Louis' brother, Pete, crack distance runner for University of Southern California, who developed that last lap "kick" Louis possesses, sees greater things ahead for the youngster.

"He's entering U. S. C. this fall," Pete said, "and he's specializing in track and will be ready to go into the 1940 Olympic games."

Louis first attracted attention in the distance event in 1935 when he ran the mile in 4:21.2—fast time for a prep school performer.

Three times Zamperini had lost to San Francisco's Norman Bright prior to the meet Sunday. Louis, as well as most of California fans, figured he would run third to Lash and Bright.

Iowa Youth's 69 Tops Western Golf Field

By the Associated Press.

Omaha, Nebr., July 14.—Billy Cordingley, an 18-year-old Des Moines (Iowa) youth with the build of a blacksmith, slugged his way over the superheated Happy Hollow Club course in 69 strokes today to head a parade of par-wreckers in the opening of the 36-hole qualifying round for the Western amateur golf title tournament.

Young Billy, nearly 6 feet tall and weighing 175 pounds, achieved his great round early in the day, but had to wait until twilight to be sure of first-day honors. The wait was occasioned by the shooting of Matt Zadalis, an Omaha public links player, who had a gorgeous 32, 5 under par for the first nine. Zadalis cooled off a bit, however, and finished with a 69 to share second place with W. Don Edwards, of San Jose, Calif., and Jack Pollard, another Omaha sharpshooter.

While Cordingley, recently graduated from Phillips Exeter Academy, and who plans to enter Harvard next fall, was outshooting his elders, Omaha's Johnny Goodman, one of the three Walker Cup squadsmen in the battle, cracked par by two strokes with 35-35—70 for a third-place tie with Fred Haas, jr., of New Orleans; Frank Cormaci, of Omaha, and Jack Munger, of Dallas, Tex.

Lancaster Club Lists Golf Tourney

Mackenzie Shoots 68 at Columbia Course.

Washington progessional and amateur golfers will be interested in the announcement sent out yesterday from the Lancaster (Pa.) Country Club concerning a $100 pro-amateur championship Monday, July 27.

The tournament is being sponsored by Arthur B. Thorn, Lancaster professional, who served for ten years as pro at Woodmont Country Club.

Returning to the scene of his early triumphs, Roland Mackenzie dusted par to the tune of a 68 yesterday at Columbia Country Club. Racking up five birdies, Mackenzie went out in 35, and hit the back side in 33. He was two under for the 18 holes.

Playing with him were Roger Peacock, District amateur champion, who did a 75; Harvey Johnson, who scored 76; Willie Lowe, Mackenzie's assistant at Congressional, and 13-year-old Stockton Rogers, of Jacksonville, Fla.

Moe Blumenthal will be in charge of the Amity Club's golf tournament at Woodmont Country Club today. Play will start at 12:30. Competition will be for the Leopold V. Freudberg Trophy. Dr. Sylvan Danzansky won the trophy in 1934-35.

He Made Olympic Team In 1912—the Trip in '36

By John R. Vosburgh.

It was a long time ago—24 years, to be exact—that Bob Eller, of Georgetown, made the United States Olympic team, but he had to wait until this year to get to his first Olympics.

It's been a rather long delay for Bob Eller, Dr. Robert L. Eller, prominent dentist by now, and sportsman and boxing official in his off hours. Yet the good doctor is not particularly bitter about his long wait, at least not now. Today he leaves on the Olympic liner, U. S. S. Manhattan for Berlin, an official delegate to the Olympics.

Because of an altercation with an A. A. U. official back in 1912, Bob Eller, the Georgetown hurdling flash, was left off Uncle Sam's athletic argosy to the international games at Stockholm, Sweden. And it wasn't the A. A. U., but officials of Germany who finally enabled Dr. Eller to go to the Olympics this year.

Some time ago, Dr. and Mrs. Eller, Fred Buckholtz, Washington sportsman and restaurant owner, and a few other local residents were invited to a reception at the German Embassy. There they were notified that Dr. Eller and Buckholtz were to be the Capital's delegates to the to the games at Berlin.

The German announcement was possibly a bit ironic for the former Hilltop timber-topper after the Americans had shunted him aside 24 years ago.

Teddy Roosevelt and the Bull Moosers, and not F. D. and the New Dealers, were occupying the political headlines back in the days when big Bob Eller, the national low hurles champion, romped through his heat in the final Olympic try-outs only to find himself disqualified after setting the fastest time of the meet.

Imagine the surprise of the young man from Georgetown when the president of the A. A. U. walked up to him and said: "Eller, you knocked over four hurdles. You're disqualified."

"Listen," said young Bob Eller, "you instructed us that we were running under the Olympic rules and not American rules. The Olympic rules allow you to knock the jumps over. The time is what counts."

"You heard me," said Sullivan. You're disqualified."

Lawson Robertson, trainer of Uncle Sam's teams for many years, was a teammate of Eller's on the Irish-American A. C. in those days. He nearly had a fight with Sullivan about it, because Jimmy had told Lawson they were running under Olympic rules.

"But," said Dr. Eller last night before leaving for New York, "after I thought it over, I wasn't so surprised, after all. Up in Boston a year or so before I had set a new world's record for the high hurdles. After I finished, I made application for the record. They said, 'you didn't set any record, you knocked over the first hurdle!"

Athletes Raise Own Trip Funds

learned to his lament that he had nominated two more men for the 800-meter relay than Olympic regulations allow. The axe will have to fall on two of the boys. Kiphuth was prepared to name the victims.

The money set aside for those two extras probably will be assigned to the women's budget.

"That's the rainbow I've been looking for," smiled Holm. "I'm sure we can raise the rest."

An accurate report on the general financial situation was not obtainable from Gustavus T. Kirby, treasurer of the Olympic committee. Advices from his office indicated that the committee still was about $50,000 in arrears, including $25,000 for running expenses and $25,000 to repay a loan from the permanent Olympic association.

In view of the tight financial condition of the expedition, a good many of the chairmen and managers of the teams, and officials of general committees, are paying their own expenses to Berlin.

U. S. Railroads Can 'Take It,' Pelley Says

They Have Maintained Finest System in History, He Declares.

Chicago, July 14.—The railroads have shown through this depression the inherent efficiency and economy of major commerce of this continent on steel rails, J. J. Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads, told the Rotary Club of Chicago today.

"They have demonstrated," said Mr. Pelley, speaking in connection with the observance of "Railroad Week" inaugurated by the Western carriers," their ability to carry on under difficulties; to cut the unit cost of producing transportation while continuing to pay the highest transportation wages in the world; to improve their service and methods; in short, to maintain their position as the finest general transportation system in the history of the human race, and to keep that transportation system ready to go forward as America goes forward.

"They have shown the old-fashioned ability to cut their coat according to their cloth, to tighten their belts and, in the vernacular of the day, to 'take it.' They have shown, too, the most up-to-the-minute ability to use the latest improvements to step out in a streamlined age."

Cost Reductions.

Mr. Pelley said that whereas in 1921 the operating cost of moving a ton of freight 1,000 miles was $10.78 this cost in 1929 had been reduced to $7.44. Despite the depression and the great decline in the volume of business a further reduction to $6.75, Mr Pelley said, has been brought about by the railroads. Taking the average of all commodities between all stations, he said, the average revenue for moving a ton of freight 1 mile is less than 1 cent.

"This achievement," Mr. Pelley said, "results from the skill and cooperation of railroad men and management and by investment in more efficient plant and equipment. To those who are able to appreciate the true meaning of the figures, it shows that the American railroad industry has not lost its ingenuity or its resolution, that progress goes on today as in the past."

$50,000,000 Bills 3.35 Times Subscribed

Acting Secretary of the Treasury Taylor announces that the tenders for $50,000,000, or thereabouts, of 273-day Treasury bills, dated July 15, 1936, and maturing April 14, 1937, which were offered on July 10, have been opened at the Federal Reserve banks.

The total amount applied for was $167,814,000, of which $50,052,000 was accepted. The accepted bids ranged in price from 99.955, equivalent to a rate of about 0.059 per cent per annum, to 99.939, equivalent to a rate of about 0.080 per cent per annum, on a bank discount basis.

D.C. Agency Opens For Northwestern

Announcement was made yesterday of the opening of the general agency by Roma N. Plake and John DeWitte Marsh representing the Northwestern National Life Insurance Co. of Minneapolis, Minn. Mr. Plake and Mr. Marsh have been identified with the insurance business in Washington for several years and were in the business with the Equitable Life Assurance Society, where Mr. Marsh was consequently on the managerial staff.

R. N. PLAKE.

For the past few years Mr. Plake has represented the local Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co. as a traveling supervisor having charge of the territories in Virginia, California, Ohio and before opening the new office here was in charge of the Kansas City branch of the Acacia. Mr. Marsh became well known as manager of the Acacia Indianapolis branch.

The Northwestern National in opening its Washington office is establishing itself for the first time in the East and after a careful survey indicating Washington to be a logical field for new operations. The company has $385,000,000 of life insurance in force and last year established an unusual record by writing $70,000,000 of new insurance in 12 States.

Col. Ayers Sees Best Business Year Since 1930

Cleveland Banker Cites Autos, Steel, Wages, Employment.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, July 14.—Col. Leonard P. Ayres, vice president of the Cleveland Trust Co., said today in the bank's monthly business bulletin, that 1936 "promises to be the best business year since 1930, and possibly since 1929."

Col. Ayres said "the automobile industry has continued to hold the leadership as it has done throughout the recovery period. It now appears probable that the output of new motor vehicles will be greater than in any year since 1929.

"The steel industry is making a similarly fine record, and if it can hold through the second half of the year the kind of pace that it has set in the first half, it will emulate the automobile industry by having the best year since 1929.

"The security markets have done well," he reported. "The volume of new financing, which has been mostly refinancing, has so greatly increased that it has been about five times as large as in the first half of last year."

Col. Ayres reviewed official figures showing new construction contracts in May were up 70 per cent over May, 1935, factory employment up 5 per cent, factory pay rolls up 16 per cent, freight car loadings 15 per cent, and department store sales in dollar values, up 16 per cent.

"Business has clearly given," he said, "an exceptionally good account of its activities in the first half of 1936 despite the fact that all these fine figures are still depression figures."

Blue Chip Issues Lead Strong Market in Active Trading; Wheat Lower; Bonds Firm.

New York, July 14.—Stocks continued their irregular advance today and after passing through a brief period of profit taking climbed to their best level in the final hour. Spectacular gains were made in the high priced leaders, while trading volume mounted to about 1,600,000 shares. Wheat was down again, September closing off a cent and one-half. Treasury and high-grade bonds were strong. Francs continued firm.

Chemicals were buoyant with 1 to 3 point gains in Allied Chemical, Air Reduction and du Pont and several in the group at the best prices in several years.

American Telephone, anticipating marked improvement in the quarterly earnings report due tomorrow, climbed easily. Westinghouse was lifted about 2 points more and General Electric, opening at a fractional gain on a block of 2,000 shares, worked higher. North American, Consolidated Edison and Water Works made good progress.

Norfolk & Western was easily the feature of the rails, jumping 15 points on the first sale since last Thursday to establish a new all time high and moving ahead from that level. Santa Fe and Union Pacific averaged about a point higher. Pennsylvania and Great Northern were easy and some profit taking affected the Alleghanys. Chesapeake & Ohio held around the year's best price.

Steels were higher but neglected by active traders. National gained two points, Bethlehem and U. S. Steel a point or so. Rail equipments were in sympathy with their customers. Coppers were strong. Philip Morris ran up four points on a few sales while other tobaccos dipped. Motors were inactive until Chrysler came forward during the final hour. Nash drifted to around the worst level of the year. Yesterday's favored agricultural and merchandising stocks were indifferent.

Speculators are paying increasing attention to the opinion of many corporate officials that the present surtax on undistributed earnings may be in effect only for this year, and that companies well heeled with cash will take a chance on paying out current earnings generously. Whether the new Congress will revise the tax system, perhaps simply stepping up the rate of tax on net income, depends upon developments on which it would be difficult to obtain insurance at low rates.

Surtax.

At any rate, buyers are beginning to reach for the high-priced stocks. One of the spectacular trades today was a series of three sales of Allied Chemical & Dye at 205, totaling 2,600 shares with a value of about $533,000, plus commissions.

The bank stock market, which was a trifle soft at times yesterday after a sustained advance, moved briskly upward again today, led by two blue chip shares, First National and Guaranty Trust. Investors are viewing bank shares with more favor now that the worst apparently has been seen as regards earnings and with recoveries continuing to bulk large on bank ledgers. The higher priced bank stocks for several months have sold at a basis to give a larger yield than have bank shares selling at more popular prices.

Figures of commercial member banks in 101 leading cities which report weekly to the Reserve Board this week were almost wholly a reflection of changes which occurred in figures of New York City member banks which were published last Thursday. Virtually all the $157,000,000 drop in loans and investments in the week of July 8 occurred in New York, where brokers' loans, other loans on securities and Government security holdings were down sharply. While New York banks were liquidating $58,000,000 Government securities banks in Chicago were buying $26,000,000 and San Francisco banks were adding $15,000,000 to their portfolios. Other securities were down $25,000,000, of which $18,000,000 was the decline registered in the New York district.

Reserves rose $185,000,000, the New York banks receiving $72,000,000 net addition to their cash. Demand deposits were down $72,000,000 in the New York area and down $23,000,000 in Cleveland, but gains in Boston, Philadelphia and Richmond reduced to $49,000,000 the net loss for all reporting banks. The $70,000,000 drop in balances of domestic banks in New York was more than offset by increases of $34,000,000 in Chicago, $27,000,000 in Kansas City and $73,000,000, in other districts, all banks reporting a gain of $64,000,000 for the week in such balances. Time deposits were down $12,000,000, all the decrease being at Chicago.

Rewriting Indentures.

The SEC ventured into a new field when it successfully dictated to Sioux City Gas & Electric two changes in the loan indenture for the forthcoming issue. While the debentures remain outstanding the company cannot pay dividends except out of surplus earnings accruing after July 1,1936. The company must spend for maintenance and appropriate for retirement reserves 15 per cent of gross of 2½ per cent of property value, whichever is less. With many investors the assumption will be that the SEC went carefully through the indenture and is satisfied that it is proper if these two clauses are included. In a sense, the indenture has the SEC approval, which is something the SEC has never been willing to admit about any bond issue.

What Bankers Think.

Investment bankers are inclined on first study of the Sioux City precedent to feel that some responsibility has been taken from their shoulders. It has always been the banker's function to set up the kind of indenture that the company wants and the public will accept as insuring the proper degree of protection. In asking the company to change the indenture in this case the SEC shares responsibility with the issuer. Incidentally the amount of depreciation and maintenance funds the company set up last year was more than the minimum under the SEC requirements.

Blue Chips.

Norfolk & Western reached the exclusive 300 Club today, leaving Allied Chemical alone in the 200 Club. Before the ten-for-one split this year National Lead also was selling over 200. The other issues on the board now are Homestake around 420, Mahoning Coal at 595 bid, Coca-Cola International at 760 bid and Texas Pacific Land Trust, old, 850, bid.

Impetuous.

To most of the banks and institutional investors the offering of $150,000,000 half of 1 per cent collateral trust notes of the Commodity Credit Corporation came as a complete surprise, and if the response to it is not overwhelming, it is probable that the blame will rest upon the Government agency officials who were responsible for such a slapdash procedure. Obviously the issue was intended to appeal to banks and from their standpoint was not without attractive features. The purpose of the issue also was viewed as quite sound, namely, to enable the corporation to borrow at low rates and obviate recourse to the Treasury directly or indirectly through the RFC. Institutional investors are not like certain species of fish which snap at attractively devised offerings without careful study, and, so far as opportunity for study was concerned, these were sadly lacking.

Gain of 70% In Corporation Net Predicted

Second Quarter Profits Expected to Equal 1930 Period.

New York, July 14.—The second quarter income statements that will feature financial news during the next month will make an impressively favorable showing, the Standard Statistics Co. says today. Estimated earnings of leading industrial corporations indicate an average gain of about 70 per cent over second quarter, 1935, profits. Second quarter profits are expected to approximately equal those of the second quarter of 1930, and, of course, exceed those of any intervening three months' period.

Although costs increased somewhat, the rise was not sufficient to interfere materially with the earnings effect of a 26 per cent advance in industrial production over a year earlier. In the first quarter, the production rise averaged a little more than 9 per cent, and industrial profits increased by about 50 per cent.

Utilities will show a similar gain from last year, but the ability of utility companies at last to translate sales into profits is attracting wide percentage earnings improvement, but from a low base.

Cotton Reacts After Early Rise

New York July 14 (AP).—Early advances in response to firmer markets abroad were followed by partial reactions in cotton today. October contracts, after selling up to 12.75, declined to 12.60 and closed at 12.61, with the general market steady, 3 to 5 points net higher.

Business Failures Lowest in 16 Years

New York, July 14 (AP).—The lowest total of business casualties since 1920, when trade was flourishing at the height of the early postwar boom, was reported today by Dun & Bradstreet, for the week ended last Thursday. Only five days were included because of the Independence holiday.

Commercial failures, as recorded by the mercantile agency, dropped to 140 for the week, compared with 193 in the comparable period last year, a decline of 27.5 per cent, and 201 in the 1934 week. The 1933 figure embraced a full six-day week. For the year failures numbered 5,560, against 6,527 in the comparable period last year, a drop of 14.8 per cent, and 6,774 in the 1934 period.

Atlas Head Sails On $30,000,000 Deal

New York, July 14 (AP).—A $30,000,000 deal for sale of the British holdings of the Utilities Power & Light Corporation, an American holding concern, will be discussed on a mission to London by Floyd B. Odlum, president of the Atlas Corporation, a giant investment unit, it was learned today. He is scheduled to sail tomorrow.

Atlas holds about 40 per cent of the debentures of the Utilities Power & Light Corporation, the creation of Harley L. Clarke, the Chicago financier, in addition to certain notes indorsed by Clarke which are said to carry voting control of the top company.

Daily Oil Production Rises 57,419 Barrels

Tulsa, Okla., July 14 (AP).—A gain of 57,419 barrels daily brought the Nation's crude oil production to 2,949,459 barrels daily for the week ended July 11, the Oil and Gas Journal reported today.

Oklahoma showed an increase of 37,875 barrels daily, bringing production to 546,525, while in east Texas a hike of 1,907 barrels brought the daily output to 431,527.

Boston Wool Market.

Boston, July 14 (AP).—(United States Department of Agriculture.)—The undertone of the wool market in Boston was fairly firm, despite the fact that many buyers are bidding lower and occasionally were setting small lots of wool at prices lower than the generally quoted market. Sizable offerings of good French combing lengths fine territory wools in original bags were held at prices mostly at 85@87 cents scoured basis, but an occasional moderate-size lot was moved at 85 cents scoured basis. The large lines of short French combing lengths original fine territory wools were quoted firmly at 82-84 cents scoured basis, although a few small lots moved at 79@81 cents scoured basis.

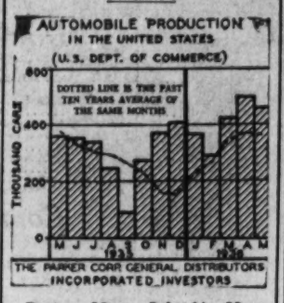
May Auto Output Highest in 7 Years



Boston, Mass., July 14.—More automobiles were turned out in this country last May than in any May since 1929, while the month's production exceeded last year by 26 per cent. Total sales in the first five months of this year were over 2,000,000 units, an amount greater by nearly 10 per cent than sales in the corresponding period of last year.

Dividend Raised; 3 Extras Voted

New York, July 14 (AP).—Directors of Sanford Mills, manufacturer of fabrics with main plants in Sanford, Me. and Reading, Mass., announced today a semi-annual dividend of $2 on the capital stock, payable July 20 to stock of record July 13. The payment raises the annual dividend basis to $4 from $2.

Directors of A. Hollander & Son, fur firm, with plants in New York and New Jersey, declared two extra dividends of 12½ cents each and two regular quarterly dividends of 12½ cents each on the common stock. One extra and one regular are payable August 14 to stock of record July 30 and the others, payable November 16 to stock of record October 30.

Directors of New York & Honduras Rosario Mining Co., with properties in Central America, declared an extra dividend of 50 cents and a regular quarterly dividend of 25 cents, both payable July 31 to stock of record July 21. Similar disbursements were made in the preceding quarter.

Machinery Sales At Seven-Year Top

New York, July 14.—Sales of industrial machinery for the second quarter reached a new high since 1929, the index of the American Machinist indicated today.

In most industrial sections June sales were satisfactory, and orders are holding well so far in July, the periodical said.

Cotton Consumption.

Cotton consumed during June was reported yeterday by the Census Bureau to have totaled 556,323 bales of lint and 63,956 of linters, compared with 530,799 and 64,670 for May this year, and 383,982 and 60,821 for June last year.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

With the French markets closed for a national holiday, European gold currencies expanded their gains moderately against the dollar in foreign exchange dealings yesterday.

The French franc in New York advanced to 6.62⅝, up .00⅛ of a cent. Holland guilders sold .04 of a cent higher at 68.20 and the Swiss franc was up .01 of a cent at 32.76.

While the Bank of England continued to build up its holdings of the yellow metal to a new peak, the British pound at New York eased ⅛ of a cent to $5.02⅝. At London the dollar closed at 5.02⅜ to the pound against the overnight New York rate of $5.02⅝.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, July 14.—Stock prices closed quiet and irregular, with business on a small scale. Home rails were in demand on expectations of favorable dividend announcements. Steel shares eased under profit taking, while the remainder of the industrials were barely steady. Oils and mining issues were dull, but steady, and transatlantic securities eased.

Liverpool—Wheat futures moved higher, and closed firm on bullish Canadian crop estimates. Improved demand for Manitobas and yesterday's strength in Winnipeg. Cotton closed 2 to 6 points higher in sympathy with the firm Eastern markets, expectations of bullish consumption figures and rebuying by recent sellers.

Paris—Closed (Bastille Day).

Heat or Rain To Decide Fate Of Grain Crops

Corn and Wheat Drop on Forecasts of Cooling Moisture Today.

Chicago, July 14 (AP).—In a spectacular race, with the Nation's corn crop at stake, moisture relief prospects today appeared to be winning, and corn prices fell 3 cents. Corn specialists said the race was between rain and heat, and that without quick rains the crop losses in corn would be inordinately large, but that if rains come soon a fair portion of the crop can be saved.

Forecasts that the heat wave would be shattered by tomorrow, and timely moisture be received, acted at last today as the dominating factor in all grains, with downturns of prices forming the rule, and corn in the lead.

Corn closed shaky 1⅞@2⅛ cents under yesterdays finish, July 82¾, September 79⅞@80¼, December 74¼@74¾, Wheat 1⅛@1⅝ off, July 102½, September 102½@102¾, December 103½@103¾, and oats 1⅛@1½ down, September 37⅛, with rye at 1@1⅛ setback, September 69. The provisions result was 20 to 25 cents drop.

Insurance Convention To Have Daily Paper

Delegates to the annual convention of the National Association of Life Underwriters in Boston in September will receive a unique daily newspaper—a condensed report on convention speeches which can be inserted in their copy of the convention program for future reference and use.

Kenilworth H. Mathus, of the Life Insurance Sales Research Bureau, has been named chairman of the reporting committee which will compile these daily summaries and he has, in turn, chosen a staff of "convention reporters" to assist him. Three of the "reporters" were selected from the ranks of the Life Advertisers Association and three from the N. A. L. U. membership.

June Building Tops Records For Five Years

New York, July 14.—The value of building permits issued in the leading cities of the country increased sharply during June, a period which normally shows very little seasonal change from May. The building permit volume for 215 cities reached a total of $112,640,106 last month, according to the monthly summary prepared by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc. This exceeded all previous records since May, 1931, and revealed an increase of 36.5 per cent from the May figure of $82,510,596, while comparison with the June, 1935, total of $52,672,794 showed a rise of 113.9 per cent.

The expansion in building operations was particularly marked in New York City, especially in the boroughs of Manhattan and Bronx. In the latter borough, there was a feverish rush to file plans in order to escape the more stringent requirements of the proposed new city building code. The total for the five boroughs of New York City aggregated $40,011,404. This was the highest since April, 1931, and reflected a gain of 118.7 per cent over May and of 206.0 per cent over June a year ago.

For the 214 cities outside of New York, the June permit total amounted to $72,628,702, against $64,217,914 in the preceding month and $39,596,123 in the corresponding month last year, giving increases of 13.1 and 83.4 per cent, respectively. The release of the soldiers' bonus checks no doubt stimulated the building of homes in many sections.

Utilities Lead In Curb Advance

New York, July 14 (AP).—Continued strength in utility stocks provided the high spot of interest in the curb market today. Gainers of minor fractions to more than a point included American Gas at 43¾; Commonwealth Edison, at 112½; Consolidated Gas of Baltimore, at 92¾; Electric Bond & Share, at 24⅞; Niagara Hudson, at 13½; United Gas preferred, at 113½, and United Light & Power preferred, at 66⅛.

Other shares on the upside included Aluminum Co., Atlas Corporation, E. W. Bliss, Fisk Rubber, Hudson Bay and Humble Oil. Some of the metals lost small fractions, including Wright Hargreaves, Pioneer Gold and Hecla. Transfers of 378,000 shares compared with 306,000 the day before.

B. & O. Carloadings.

Carloadings on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad for the week ended July 11 totaled 48,264, an increase of 14,585 cars loaded over the same period of last year.

Ringling Circus Tax Fraud Case Indicts 6 Men

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 14.—Ten indictments were returned by a Federal grand jury today charging six men with conspiring to defraud the Government of $3,359,016.48 on income tax returns of the Ringling Bros.-Barnum & Bailey combined shows from 1918 to 1932, inclusive.

None of the Ringling family members was named as a defendant. John M. Kelley, lawyer and member of the Wisconsin and Florida bars, was named in all the true bills.

The others indicted are Ralph D. Sullivan, Chillicothe, Ohio, formerly with the Bureau of Internal Revenue; Nathaniel F. Rabner, formerly an Internal Revenue Bureau auditor, whose address was given as the National Press Building, Washington; Charles D. M. Greer, internal revenue agent, Sarasota, Fla.; William Blum, of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, Tomkinsville, Md., and Richard Fuchs, secretary to John Ringling from 1919 to 1934, now a Brooklyn (N. Y.) resident.

The indictments charged that approximately $2,000,000 in spectacles produced and abandoned by the circus interest before 1915 were deducted fraudulently as depreciation between 1918 and 1925.

Boys Missing

Brothers Believed on Way to Butler, Pa., School.

Joseph H. Melia, jr., 14, and his brother, Edgar Melia, 11, have been missing from their farm home at Wheaton, Md., since Friday. They took extra clothing with them.

The boys' father, J. H. Melia, believes that the two boys are headed for St. Fideles School at Butler, Pa. Young Joseph, he said, has repeatedly asked to be sent there to study for the priesthood. He believes Joseph may have persuaded his younger brother to accompany him.

Joseph at present is a student at Takoma Park-Silver Spring Junior High School. Edgar attends Glenmont School.

Henry C. Karr Funeral Rites Set for Today

Jeweler Conducted Store in Washington for 40 Years.

Funeral services will be held at Gawler's undertaking establishment, 1756 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, at 2:30 p. m. today for Henry C. Karr, 68, prominent Washington jeweler, who died Monday at his home, 7619 Georgetown road, Bethesda, Md. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Mr. Karr had been in the jewelry business here for 40 years, conducting a store at 1350 Connecticut avenue. The business was founded by his father in 1857.

He was born in Washington and educated at schools here and abroad. He was a graduate of the German Horological Institute, where he specialized in technical work on timepieces.

He was a member of the Washington Board of Trade, a Mason and until recent years was active in civic organizations.

Surviving are his wife, Margaret Neal Karr; a daughter, Margaret Karr, who is a faculty member at Mills College; a son, Henry Neal Karr, of Waterbury, Conn., and three sisters, Mrs. Amy Benner, of Bethesda, Md.; Mrs. Emma K. Hanvey, of Newark, Del., and Miss Julia A. Karr, of Washington.

Rev. A. J. Tyler Dead; 30 Yrs. at Church Here

The Rev. A. J. Tyler, pastor of Mount Airy Baptist Church since 1906, died yesterday at Garfield Hospital. A native of Caroline County, Va., he came to his pastorate here from McKeesport, Pa. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Belle Tyler; two daughters, Mrs. Amy T. Bell and Mrs. Sadie T. Marze, and a son, the Rev. E. K. Tyler. He will be buried from the church at a date to be announced.

Dr. Tignor's Rites To Be Held Today

Funeral services for Dr. Charles A. Tignor, 61, of 473 Florida avenue northwest, a medical inspector in the District public schools and a member of the Board of the Tuberculosis Association, who died Sunday in Emergency Hospital, will be held at the Fifteenth street Presbyterian Church today at 1 p. m., followed by burial in Lincoln Memorial Cemetery.

Dr. Tignor was a practicing physician in Washington for more than 32 years, and for a time was an instructor in the medical school of Howard University, from which he was graduated with both his physician's degree and degree in pharmacy.

Surviving Dr. Tignor are his son, Charles A. Tignor, jr., three sisters, Mrs. Nannie T. Neale, Mrs. Sadie T Henson and Miss Lottie Tignor and three brothers, Dr. W. L. Tignor, Clarence W. Tignor and Harry L. Tignor, of New York City.

Mrs. Jennie Paul Dies in Sanitarium

Mrs. Jennie C. Paul, 79, for 13 years a resident of this city, died Sunday night at Washington Sanitarium.

She was the widow of Charles Paul and lived at 34 Woodland avenue, Takoma Park, Md. With her daughter, Mary C. Paul, who is secretary in the general conference offices of the Seventh Day Adventist Church, in Takoma Park, she came here 13 years ago. She was born in Chelsea, Mich., and lived in Bedford, Mich., all her married life.

She is survived by six children, Arthur G. Paul, of Battle Creek, Mich.; Mrs. Lloyd Fisher, of 33 Woodland avenue, Takoma Park; Deo Paul, of San Bernardino, Calif.; Mrs. Harold B. Fisher, of Sao Paulo, Brazil; Mary C. Paul, of Takoma Park, and Dr. Roger Paul, who is connected with the Shanghai Sanitarium in Shanghai, China. She also leaves five grandchildren.

Short services were held in the Chambers funeral parlor, with the Rev. Charles Longacre, pastor of the Takoma Park Seventh Day Adventist Church, officiating. The body, accompanied by her two daughters, was taken to Bedford, Mich., for burial.

Shark Leaps Into Boat.

Long Branch, N. J., July 14 (AP).—Saul White, deep-sea fisherman for 40 years, told this fish story today and brought in the evidence as proof. He said he was fishing for bluefish and had hooked a 10-pound beauty. As he hauled it in, a 500-pound shark leaped for the bluefish and landed in White's 22-foot boat. White took refuge on top of the engine house until the shark battered itself unconscious trying to jump back in the water.

Fish Rain on Town.

Mexico City, July 14 (AP).—A dispatch to the newspaper El Grafico said today it rained fish in Agua Caliente. The belief prevailed, the newspaper's correspondent reported, that a waterspout had scooped the fish from the sea, carrying them over the town, where they were released during a heavy rain yesterday. Prices dropped with the unexpected supply of sea food.

Optimists Told China Is Arming

China is preparing for a military eventuality that is bound to come, Col. John H. Jouett told Washington Optimists yesterday.

He spoke on China and Chinese conditions at the regular luncheon session of the club, held at the Mayflower Hotel.

Col. Jouett spent three years in China as military aviation adviser to the Central government. He now is president of Fairchild Aviation Co. He reviewed briefly prevailing social and military conditions in China.

Jamaica Feels Earthquake.

Kingston, Jamaica, July 14 (AP).—Residents of Kingston were awakened today by two sharp earthquakes. The first shock was felt at 4:50 a. m., Eastern standard time, and the second, less intense, half an hour later. No damage was reported.

VACATION EXTRAS VIA THE
"Old Gold and Silver Exchange"

Does that perfect vacation seem a little hard to arrange? Perhaps your vacation budget just—and no more than—reaches a happy balance, not enough to include extras. Extras are what The Hecht Co. means when suggesting a visit to the "Old Gold and Silver Exchange." It is a very easy way of getting that ravishing beach coat, that extra pair of white flannels, or that unexpected taxi fare.

Just look around the house for such small but valuable things as dental gold, watches, cuff links, sterling silverware, eyeglass frames—you will receive cash for them immediately.
